BATTLE of the wall posters has been a highlight of China's current power struggle. Both the Red Guards and the anti-Mao factions put up their signs to tell the citizens about the nation's political struggle. Much of what the outside world knows about the crisis is taken from these signs.

Revolt Against Mao Spreads in Five Areas

Sales Bugging Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Murray, counsel for a provincial royal commission on electronic bugging, said today he will investigate allegations of bugging in the car sales, real estate and financing industry.

Mr. Murray said he had received reports of bugging at several car sales firms and at two real estate companies and a finance company office.

"This bugging business certainly appears to be more widespread than I thought," he added.

Mr. Murray had said Friday he would investigate reports of equipment capable of bugging in booths in the showroom of a Vancouver car sales company.

OTHER REPORTS

He said today he had received a number of other reports since and planned to investigate. He described most of those calling him as former employees in the industries allegedly involved in bugging. He said most offered to testify at the Royal Commission.

Meanwhile, one car sales firm here Friday posted a $10,000 reward to any past or present salesman who can produce evidence that it engaged in illicit bugging of customers' conversations.

The royal commission was formed following allegations that Pat O'Neal, western organizer of the International Brotherhod of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Workers, had hired a private detective who placed electronic bugging equipment at a convention of the rival independent Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

In Victoria, car sales firms denied using any kind of bugging apparatus.

Said sales manager Norman Britnell of Thomas Plimley Ltd.: "We have discussed this matter and ascertained that none of the main Victoria distributors use bugging devices.

"The same goes for the finance companies we deal with."

KILLED FRIDAY when his stock car hit wall on practice run at Riverside, Calif., track was popular Victoria driver Billy Foster, shown above when he was presented with plastic-mounted edition of Times Weekend Magazine in 1965. Foster was featured by magazine after he became first Canadian to qualify for 500-mile race at Indianapolis. (See stories on Page 12.)

Ky Effigy Burned

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — About 3,000 chanting demonstrators today burned an effigy of South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky after he and his wife flew here from Brisbane.

The South Vietnamese leader, on a 10-day goodwill tour of Australia and New Zealand, was accorded a friendly and sometimes warm welcome when he drove from the airport to the city.

But at the government's official residence police armed with firehoses ringed roadblocks as demonstrators converged on the building which will accommodate the Kys during their stay here.

The demonstrators — some carrying North Vietnamese flags — exploded fireworks, shouted slogans and sang peace songs as they marched toward the barricades and mingled with 400 police.

A lifesize dummy of the 35-year-old Marshal Ky carrying the slogan "killer Ky" was set up on the sidewalk about 250 yards from the official residence and burned.

Radio Slams 'White Terror'

Times News Services

HONG KONG—Factions in the entire southwestern quarter of China are rebelling against Mao Tse-tung and his defence minister, Lin Piao, according to reports reaching here.

Battles have been reported.

These reports come on the heels of a Japanese dispatch Friday that there was speculaing "the entire sountry now is in a state of civil war."

The reported southeastern revolt against Mao and Lin has spread from cities, where workers were reported to have fought bloody street battles with Mao's Red Glards, to rural areas in the Pacific seaboard provinces of Chekiang, Fukien and Kwantung and the inland provinces of Kiangsi and Eastern Kwangsi.

Provincial radio stations, still in the hands of pro-Mao forces, warn of growing "white terrorism" by "reactionary and revisionists enemies" of Mao and imply these activities have the support of provincial party officials in many areas.

Chinese travellers arriving here claim provincial officials are behind the formation of "new Red Guard units" who oppose Mao and Lin and support the man Mao and Lin are trying to bring down, President Liu Shao-Chi

OPPOSE MAO

Many say army units are refusing to support Mao's Red Guards, and some insist that troops in the Nanchang and Canton areas are actively supporting the pro-Liu forces.

Another Japanese account from Peking said high-ranking navy and air force officers were reported being denounced as reactionaries and plotters.

Lin is believed to be No. 2 man in the Chinese Communist party hierarchy under party Chairman Mao.

The correspondent of the Tokyo Yomiuri said Lin's statement appeared without official confirmation in one of the thousands of wall bulletins that have turned Peking into a paper-and-ink city.

Reuters news agency reported the Peking wall newspaper as saying:

"Now is total civil war. We have to fight resolutely on the one hand, but on the other we should not use violence without good reason."

The defence minister, 59, has been in the forefront of the battle to oust President Liu Shao-chi and restore Mao to the position of state power he once held.

Dr. Lin Yutang, noted Chinese author and scholar, predicted in Manila that the current upheaval in China will leave Mao's regime a "wreck."

Arriving from Taipei, Formosa, for a goodwill visit, Lin told a press conference: "The worst is yet to come. By the time the purging of Communist leaders is completed, Mao's machinery will be a wreck and shaken to the bottom."

Whether there is a civil war in the classic sense or not, there could be no doubt that the vast Chinese mainland and its 720,000,000 people were in the grip of civil confusion.

CHINA STORES 100 N-BOMBS?

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japanese military officials believe China already has nearly 100 nuclear bombs and will arm itself with medium-range ballistic missiles before the end of this year, the newspaper Nihon Keizai reports.

The paper also says the officials tend to think China will have intercontinental ballistic missiles around 1972 — three years ahead of the forecast made by U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara in November, 1965.

NEW WESTMINSTER

Anvil Salute For Session

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

The Hyack Anvil Battery will boom out its salute, some 4,300 distinguished guests and ordinary folk will rise from their seats and in will walk Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes in his ceremonial cocked hat and colonial uniform.

Another legislature opening will be under way — but it won't be in Victoria as it has for the past 98 years.

The ceremony begins at 3 p.m. Tuesday in New Westminster where the first B.C. legislatative council met for its opening. The 100th opening will be in the Queen's Park Arena there.

The centennial gesture will last only one day.

The legislature will be back here Wednesday for business as usual with Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) and Dr. H. R. McDiarmid (SC—Alberni) to move and second the reply to the Speech from the Throne temporarily located across Georgia Strait the previous day.

Every effort will be made to simulate the assembly chamber with which Victorians are familiar.

Carpenters have laid a plywood floor over the ice (it was kept frozen because the floor has an eight-inch tilt as a result of age) and on this they have erected a platform of the exact dimensions of our chamber,

Over this a plush red rug has been laid and the MLAs' benches and chairs, the elaborate Speaker's chair, the clerks' tables, the mace of authority and the sergeant-at-arms' desk will be transported from here Saturday to their new places.

A blue curtain, trimmed with gold, will form a backdrop behind the Speaker's position and green shrubbery will add more color along the platform's sides.

Overhead, radiant heating lamps will keep the 1,600 invited guests and 2,800 other spectators comfortable during the 1½-hour ceremony. Special loudspeaking equipment will let them hear the time-honored rituals.

10 PREMIERS CONTROL OUR FUTURE

For 100 years Canadians have been hoping that problems inherent in Confederation would disappear with time. Now it is becoming more and more likely we'll have to make a new beginning by renegotiating the original pact.

The fathers of this new Confederation will be the premiers. The opinions, ambitions, of these 10 men are becoming increasingly important to the evolution of the nation.

In an attempt to assess the true temper, The Times political columnist, Peter C. Newman, is talking with premiers, advisers, their critics and their constituents. The first of his reports appears today on Page 5.

DOGS GO TO THE PHILHARMONIC

Symphony Puppies Yelp and Paddle on Cue

NEW YORK (UPI)—twenty yelping, tail-wagging beagles invaded New York's Philharmonic Hall Friday night.

The dogs were supposed to be there—as performers. They turned out to be hams.

The musical canines were the soloists in Leopold Mozart's Sinfonia de Caccia, or hunting symphony, which calls for the barking of dogs.

When conductor Thomas Dunn gave the cue, the backstage barking began.

The laughter that greeted the barking was nothing compared to the eruption which followed the dogs' entrance. A door on the side of the stage opened and, led on by two men in full hunting regalia, they came—twenty beagles.

In informal formation they marched straight across the stage and out another door. But before you knew it, they were back again.

If the beagles seemed perplexed by the strange goings-on at first, by the second trip around they caught on and, like hams, seemed to be enjoying the applause.

One beagle lagged behind the pack, his tail wagging madly. Another strayed close to the audience, while a third sniffed the violin section.

By this point, you could hear none of poor Leopold's music. The laughter and applause were deafening. The dogs were the stars and they knew it.

Then one nervy hound headed straight for the first row. He was halted by a trainer. Another, more determined, got further, however, and had to be brought back by a gallant gent in the audience.

HERE THEY COME AGAIN and despite heroic efforts of Beagle Master John Gelsner the 20 young dogs fail to keep formation. They provided sound effects for Hunting Symphony in New York. (AP Wirephoto).

INSIDE CITY HALL

Downtown Area Still Popular With Shoppers

By JIM HUME

Merchants on Douglas between Yates and Pandora can relax. Fears the pedestrian count was dropping—indicating that people were staying away from the downtown area—are unfounded.

Hume

City hall officials keep a fairly close check on such things and they say the pedestrian count remains remarkably stable in the downtown area.

There was one sharp drop in 1960 when the downtown walkers took a 30 per cent dive on the day of the count.

But in addition to counting feet and dividing by two, the city hall boys also keep tabs on the weather and the temperature.

On the day of the 1960 count the temperature was 47 degrees and it was raining heavily. In other words a day when only the hardy venture forth.

The count is taken on the same day each year, rain or shine and during the past several years has remained reasonably constant.

Some of the merchants started to wonder what was going on when three stores in the general area between Yates and Pandora failed to find tenants for several months.

All three are now occupied and apparently doing well although the owners of the buildings eventually had to lease the stores at rents lower than those being paid when previous tenants moved to other locations.

One, after being vacant for a little over four months, finally found a tenant prepared to pay $500 a month, a drop of $150 a month from the previous rent.

The other two didn't fare quite so badly, but they also went at a cut-rent price.

The opening of the Centennial parking building has relieved some of the strain, the Bay's parking lot has also helped. With the opening of yet another parking lot on Johnson Street, in the works this year, the merchants should be even more reassured that the city is working hard to keep the customers flocking downtown.

A note of commendation to municipal work crews who slugged and slushed through many a flooded basement—including my own—last Thursday.

Like all sensible husbands my part in the epic battle against the encroaching waters was confined to a telephone call to Saanich Municipal Hall. Safe and dry in the office, I left the details to my wife and the workmen.

And, says she, "they were sympathetic, polite and efficient."

Reeve Hugh Curtis, please note and pass on to Neville Life.

While in Saanich and on Gordon Head Road:

Couldn't the construction men working on the new Racquets Club be asked to park their cars on Ruby and walk a block to work?

While sympathizing with the men who can't possibly park their cars on the building site without danger of losing them in the mud, they must realize they are creating a serious hazard for the youngsters attending Gordon Head Junior High and the nippers going the other way to Shelbourne Elementary.

The road is already narrow, and with cars parked either side and the youngsters often forced off the sidewalk by mud and other guck, a clipping accident is being invited.

And may the janitors at both schools patiently accept the fact that one day the mud will be gone.

As a final item, and lest rising young lawyer Reeve Ray Bryant feel he's being overlooked, a question for the legal-minded reeve.

When are you and Coun. Gerry Horne going to ask council's approval for a trip to check out fire departments in the Interior to see if there's one Esquimalt can pattern itself on?

Supposed to be a secret? Oh, sorry about that.

1,000 Students Set For March on House

An estimated 1,000 students from Victoria and the lower mainland will take part in a march to the legislature Jan. 27 to demand action on solving educational problems in this province.

Stephen Bigsby, president of the University of Victoria Students' Council, said the march, organized by the B.C. Assembly of Students, will "culminate the assembly's Education Action Week."

About 800 of the marchers will be from Victoria.

NURSES TOO

Students taking part will come from Uvic, from the nursing schools at Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's Hospitals, and local high schools.

Mr. Bigsby said four briefs will be submitted in advance of the march to Education Minister Leslie Peterson.

A submission from the three public universities will ask for equalization grants for out-of-town students, progressive elimination of tuition fees, establishment of a grants commission to distribute funds to universities, and changes in the law to give students a bigger role in university policy-setting.

Students will mass at Chatham and Douglas at 3:30 Jan. 27 and march from there along Douglas and Belleville to the Legislative Buildings. A rally on the lawn will be addressed by student leaders. Mr. Peterson will be invited to address the crowd.

Impaired Driver

Ronald Roberts of Calgary was fined $350 in central court today when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

He was arrested by Colwood RCMP officers early today after his auto was stopped on the Island Highway. He was also barred from driving for the next four months.

... ANVIL SALUTE

Cost of the respectful bow to history — which will allow the largest crowd ever to witness an opening — will be less than $10,000. The platform will be re-sold, the heating lamps and loudspeakers will be used for the International Trade Fair in May and the moving contract was a surprisingly modest $500.

The audience will see two ceremonies because this will be the opening of a first session.

A new Speaker will have to be elected before Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes strides in, flanked by aides-de-camp Cmdr. J. Robers, Capt. R. W. Rudd, Wing Cmdr. R. J. MacKinnon and Sub-Insp. L. E. Rosberg in their No. 1 dress uniforms.

The Queen's first minister Premier Bennett will move, seconded by the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition Robert Strachan and supported by Liberal Leader Ray Perrault that William Murray (SC—Prince Rupert), Speaker of the 27th Legislature, don the black robes and tricorn of the high office again.

Mr. Murray will be paraded to the raised chair by the premier and opposition leader.

They'll be smiling as they take him by the arms and the MLAs will be drumming their desks in applause — but the ritual horseplay has a serious message.

It harks back to the days when men really struggled to avoid being seated on the Speaker's chair because so many English kings displayed their displeasure with the upstart House of Commons by sending the Speaker to the executioner's block.

When the House is in readiness, the doors will be flung open to allow the vice-regal party into the assembly to file by strict protocol to the Speaker's chair from which Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes will read the beribboned parchment, the reason the people's representatives were summoned together.

The speech will, if it follows the usual pattern, be about 4,000 words long and will give a partial outline of the government's intended program of legislation.

This read, the lieutenant-governor's party will file out of the chamber in reverse order to its entrance.

The attorney-general will move a pro forma bill dealing with other than government orders — a token that the people's grievances have precedence over the Crown's wishes.

Then there'll be a few routine bills, and this year first reading for one to ratify the new five-year federal-provincial fiscal arrangements, followed by announcement of the premier of the order of subsequent business which will guide the day-to-day operation of the House.

About 13 instead of the usual 30 annual reports will be filed and it will be all over for another year.

This time, the usual government reception after the ceremony will be skipped so that MLAs can make tracks for the capital.

And the traditional first-night state ball will be delayed to the second night so it can be held in Government House as usual.

If you wanted to see it all yourself, don't be sad. It will all be televised by CBC and the armchair at home is bound to be more comfortable than the Salmonbellies' bleacher seats.

And the fireworks won't really start until Thursday when Mr. Strachan and Mr. Perrault have their say about the government's plans. That will be right here in sleepy old Victoria.

... ANTI-MAO REVOLT

Berger reported from Peking Fiday that thee was speculation about Lin's future following Red Guard attacks on one of the closest associates

OVERTHROW DEMANDED

Today, arrivals from the south China city of Canton told the pro-nationalist Chinese-language Hong Kong Times that some wall newspapers there were demanding the overthrow of the defence minister.

They called him a bourgeois element and unworthy to succeed Mao.

Lin who suffers from ill health, has been out of the public eye since the last week of November, after appearing with Mao at a series of massed Red Guard rallies.

He was described as Mao's "closest comrade in arms" but last week's disclosure that there was still a group of anti-Mao dissidents among army commanders raised speculation in Peking about his position.

The speculation was heightened by the posting of scores of Red Guard posters Friday demanding the dismissal of his close associate Hsiao Hua, director of the army's general political department.

QUOTES MAO'S WIFE

Mao's influential wife, Chiang Ching, was quoted in the posters as denouncing Hsiao, according to the Japanese Kyodo news agency.

Lin's reported statement on "total civil war" followed a widely - publicized editorial in the Shanghai newspaper Wen Hui Pao which said that "without an acute decisive battle, the bourgeois reactionary line will not easily be banished."

Mao-Lin supporters since the start of the year have assaulted the city proleteriat, the provincial Communist party committees and the organs of propaganda—all strongholds of Liu power. They have made some gains, but by their own admission have yet to consolidate their victories.

Lin, speaking at a recent meeting of the party central committee's military commission, was quoted as saying: "There are some who must be resolutely knocked down. But there are some others who must not be knocked down. The revolution is necessary, but confusion must be avoided."

The wall newspapers—pasted up by opposing groups of Red Guards workers or military factions—have exposed the citizens to one sensational statement after another. The veracity of many of the claims is unknown, but some of the items have later been confirmed by Peking radio, the New China news agency of The Peking People's Daily.

Some wall papers claimed that Mao's backers have seized the ministry of culture and the nation's radio facilities, while others said Liu, Mao's chief opponent, has launched a mass exodus of peasants to the cities with the aim of paralysing the urban centres and slashing farm production.

TAPED INTERVIEW

Nazi Will Appear Sunday on CBC

TORONTO (CP) — An interview with Adolf von Thadden, taped in Hanover, West Germany, Thursday, will be shown on the CBC television program Sunday this weekend, a corporation spokesman announced today.

The CBC had originally scheduled a television interview for Sunday, Jan. 29, but advanced it one week to this Sunday after the tape had been flown to Canada Friday night and successfully processed.

Von Thadden, deputy chairman of the right-wing West German National Democratic Party, was interviewed by Bob Hoyt and Larry Zolf of Sunday's staff.

The CBC originally invited him to come to Canada to appear on the network program Sunday to be shown Jan. 29. However, the invitation was withdrawn following protests by the Canadian Jewish Congress.

Later it was announced an interview with the controversial von Thadden would be taped in New York, to be shown Jan. 29.

However, the CBC announced today that it had already taped an interview with the West German politician for inclusion on this week's Sunday program.

Lawyer Louis Herman, a spokesman for the Canadian Jewish Congress, said von Thadden's appearance Sunday will not change the Congress plan for a demonstration Jan. 29 on the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

"The demonstration is not against the resurgence of German neo-Nazism in general," said Mr. Herman.

He said the entire Jewish community, as well as representatives from labor, veterans and other ethnic groups, will support the planned demonstration.

Canadian Jews of Hungarian descent Friday joined the congress in objecting to von Thadden's appearance.

"It isn't necessary to propagate Nazis at the taxpayers' expense," said Rabbi Zoltan Zagon, representing an action committee of five Hungarian-Jewish groups.

Rev. W. Clarke MacDonald, chairman of the Evangelism and Social Services Board of the United Church, said the mentality of Canadians is big enough to allow for debate with persons whose views are in opposition to ours.

"Bringing von Thadden's ideas out into the open . . . is a healthy thing for democracy."

VANCOUVER (CP)—An official of the University of British Columbia students' organization said Friday he cancelled an invitation to Adolf von Thadden, right-wing West German politician.

Brian Plummer, chairman of the special events committee of the Alma Mater Society, said he decided to cancel the invitation to von Thadden to speak at UBC Jan. 31 because it might be a concession to "race hatred, tyranny and war."

SWIFT KICK FOR OTTAWA?

MacEACHEN
. . . slow motion

HALIFAX (CP) — Health Minister MacEachen said Friday rules of Parliament should be reformed to "bring it into the 20th century."

Addressing the organizational meeting of a new Halifax federal constituency in suburban Bedford, Mr. MacEachen said:

"I don't ask for much. Just to bring our Parliament as up to date as the British Parliament."

He said the British House has spent only two days this session on overhauling its social security program while it took two months to get four bills past the Canadian House.

Referring to a committee vote the government lost this week when dealing with transportation, he said:

"I feel that in the old days we would have had another government by this time. However, I believe that the Canadian people are becoming used to a minority government."

The guaranteed wage of $105 a month for pensioners had "a hell of a time" getting through Parliament.

"It seems as if practically every member of the opposition was against me. But when it came time to vote, no member could afford to vote against it."

NDP Leader Will Seek Re-Election

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP)—NDP leader Douglas said Friday night political leaders should not hang on too long and he expects to retire before he reaches the age of either of the two old party leaders.

The 63-year-old NDP leader added in an interview:

"Political leaders ought not to hang on too long. There comes a time when they no longer have the energy and drive and political sensitivity."

He made the comment at a news conference while referring to a call by Progressive Conservative Leader Diefenbaker this week for an early leadership convention for the Conservatives.

He added he would not be too surprised if Mr. Diefenbaker attempts to retain his position as PC leader.

Mr. Diefenbaker is 71 and Prime Minister Pearson, who heads the Liberals, is 69.

Mr. Douglas said he will definitely stand for the NDP leadership when the party holds its own convention in Toronto in July.

Transport Bill Nearer Terminal

OTTAWA (CP)—Using a mixture of friendly persuasion and numerical voting strength, Transport Minister Pickersgill hauled his big transport bill closer to passage Friday.

During the day's debate—11th on clause-by-clause study of the bill—the Commons approved 40 clauses in the 94-clause bill, the greatest number in a single day.

LaPierre Bids to Run In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP)—Two McGill University profesors announced Friday they will seek New Democratic Party nominations in Montreal Island ridings for a federal election they predict will be held this fall.

Laurier LaPierre, 37, history professor and former co-host of the old Seven Days program on CBC TV, will go after the NDP nomination in the new Lachine riding.

Charles Taylor, 35, party chairman in Quebec and professor of political science at both McGill and the University of Montreal, will seek the NDP nomination in Dollard. He had run three times without gaining election in the Mount Royal riding.

Asked why the pair had chosen two ridings where the electorate is fairly well-off, Mr. LaPierre said the NDP's breakthrough in Quebec would have to come in the urban ridings peopled by skilled craftsmen, union members and white collar workers.

The party has yet to elect a member of Parliament in the province.

Chlorophyll Find Hits Life In Space

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Using a system of identification similar to fingerprinting, a California physicist claimed Friday he has found chlorophyll in outer space.

Fred M. Johnson, chief scientist at a University of California meeting said that his discovery implies that life itself could exist on other planets.

The life forms could be familiar to man, he said.

Addressing a specially-convened astronomy and biodynamics meeting, Dr. Johnson noted that dust particles have been telescopically observed for more than 80 years as cloud formations in space that partially obscure light from distant stars.

"The significance of my findings, if correct," Dr. Johson said, "is that a case for life chemistry in space can only be inferred but the end product can be looked upon as a form of life similar to that on earth."

PLANT FORM

Since chlorophyll is essential to the basic building process of life — or photosynthesis — it can be speculated that space chlorophyll could reach surfaces of other planets and undergo photosynthesis as on earth. This would produce at least simple plant forms, Dr. Johnson said.

He said he has identified space chlorophyll through both spectroscopic studies and laser research.

QUEBEC TO ASSUME CONTROL OF NATIVES

QUEBEC (CP) — A secret report prepared by a federal official and a Quebec government representative recommends that Quebec take over certain tasks now handled by the federal government in the province's northern area, it was learned Friday.

The work involves Eskimo and Indian populations in the area.

A provincial source said the report will be submitted to Premier Daniel Johnson and Arthur Laing, federal minister of Indian affairs and northern development.

The report took several months to prepare and says the federal government should transfer to Quebec money it now spends in the territory. The province also should take over all federal buildings and institutions in the area.

New Man in U.K. Foreign Office Is Very Rare Type—A Woman

LONDON (AP) — The new "spokesman" at the foreign office is a spokeswoman.

Juliet Jeanne d'Auvergne Collings took up the post this week, joining 10 male colleagues who answer reporters' questions and hold briefings on Britain's foreign policy. They do this anonymously.

Women are rare in Britain's foreign service.

Miss Collings, 31, entered it by doing well in a public examination open to anyone who cares to try.

Her 73-year-old father is retired Maj.-Gen. Wilfred d'Auvergne Collings, who served in both world wars. The daughter spent her early years in the Middle east.

"I had a great deal of contact with diplomats in those days," she says. "This led me to the choice of a diplomatic career."

Her first overseas assignment came as a member of the British delegation to the Brussels Conference in 1961-63, when Britain was making its first bid to join the European Common Market.

COLLINGS

Then Miss Collings was transferred to the British embassy in Thailand. Last year she was a first secretary doing information work in the British delegation to the North Atlantic Treaty Oganization.

She holds an Oxford degree in politics, economics and philosophy and speaks French and some Arabic.

'Study Sessions' New Plan of MDs

MONTREAL (CP)—The provincial council representing some 2,100 interns and residents in 25 Montreal hospitals and 18 in other parts of the province Friday rejected the latest government offer to settle their salary dispute.

Dr. Nicholas Steinmetz, a vice-president of the council which negotiates for three associations of interning and resident doctors in Quebec hospitals, said the group is planning to hold "study sessions" starting Jan. 26.

A general meeting of the 900-member Syndicat des medecins residents de Montreal, and 450-member Association des medecins residents et interns de Quebec, and the 800-member Association of Residents and Interns of Montreal is to be held Tuesday to discuss wage problems.

Present salaries range from between $3,060 a year for junior interns to $5,160 a year for senior residents. They are asking for a new wage scale that would range from $5,200 for interns to $8,400 for senior residents.

The provincial government Thursday offered a new schedule of from $3,780 to $6,480 a year. The council rejected this on the grounds that "the offer does not correspond to the minimum needs of its members."

The government offer was identical to the one it made Jan. 12, except the newest proposal included retroactive pay to last July 1 ranging from $420 to $595. It also provided for a further three-per-cent salary increase based on the mean wage of interns and residents.

The Mounting Danger

IT IS A RATHER REVEALING feature of the current efforts towards an international agreement to refrain from creating anti-missile defence systems that the astronomical cost of such a program appears at times to be the paramount consideration. Surely the fate of mankind should provide the chief motivation for such discussions.

There are indications that the United States and Russia may be able to get together on some arrangement which will avoid the entry of either country into a defensive armament program that would cost billions of dollars. A computer-governed, electronic network that would destroy invading nuclear missiles high in the sky before they could get within lethal distance of prospective targets on earth would be, of course, the last word in nuclear warfare.

But if both major powers installed such a defensive system the current nuclear standoff would not be appreciably altered. As with possession of the nuclear bomb, only an exclusive monopoly of the devices would give the owner an advantage in the global power struggle. From this standpoint an agreement between Washington and Moscow to refrain from developing the new missile defence would spare each the enormous expense without weakening the relative values of their defensive positions.

Reports indicate that the Soviet Union is already giving active consideration to establishment of such a system, which to a large degree would remove the nuclear threat of an adversary whose population remained comparatively defenceless under the threat of missile bombardment. But if the current nuclear stand-off can be preserved without driving the United States and Russia to the brink of national bankruptcy then an agreement is obviously in the interests of both peoples as well as of world peace.

Concentration on the anti-missile systems problem should not, however, be allowed to distract attention from the pressing need to find agreement on the more active threat—the proliferation of nuclear weapons throughout the world. Experts tell us that almost any country with moderate industrial proficiency can construct a nuclear weapon. China's recent successes in test detonations make clear the necessity for global agreement to prevent a further spread of the weapon and to devise effective control of the powers which now have it.

In view of the universality of the danger, this problem should be the Number One priority of the government of every major power. Yet discussions have been held for several years with no real evidence of the urgency which should dominate them. Agreement is delayed, although the danger can only grow worse.

Emphasizing the Need for Review

WHEN MAYOR STEPHEN SUGGESTED that "only a miracle" could prevent an increase in Victoria's mill rate this year, he set out two qualifications which could amend his view.

In the first place he was speaking on the basis of estimates as they exist now—that is, in the provisional budget of the city which shows a substantial gap between anticipated revenue and anticipated expenditures. The expenditures, as in other years, will, of course, be pruned in estimates committee.

The second qualification applied by the mayor concerned many "imponderables," among which he listed possible changes in government grants.

As costs of services have been going in recent years, rate increases may be expected, unless broadening of the assessment provides sufficiently higher revenue bases to meet the upward spiral.

At any event, the situation currently facing the city—"miracles" or possible higher government grants notwithstanding — underscores the need for a municipal-provincial review of the whole field of financing.

Municipalities have been telling the provincial government for years that the latter's policies have been thrusting too large a share of the tax burden on the home-owner's real estate. The municipalities have also been pointing out the necessity to shift some of this load to more widely applied forms of taxation—specifically income tax.

The time is past due when the province should not only hear that case, but take action to examine the taxing structures involved. Failure on the part of the province to act is strengthening the public belief that the review is being side-stepped because the provincial authorities cannot meet the municipalities' case.

A Commendable Move

PUBLIC CONCERN AROUSED by the long delay in action has been allayed by the provincial government's commendable decision to join with the federal government in preserving Craigflower Mansion as a historic museum.

The fate of the building, which was built only ten years after the founding of Fort Victoria and is one of the few surviving from that era, had been precarious in recent years. There was no guarantee that it would not be razed at any time, and natural deterioration was taking its toll. In addition the grounds surrounding the old farmhouse were being whittled by successive commercial undertakings.

But with joint provincial and federal backing, Craigflower Manor will now take its place with Helmcken House as an official historic site, and with its period furnishings it should provide many years of pleasure and interest for residents and visitors in this community.

With removal of the encroaching commercial properties, the Craigflower site with proper landscaping will become a major asset. Not the least of its attractions will be that it demonstrates that, despite the rush of modern life, we retain an appreciation and respect for our origins and a pride in our forebears.

The Spiral Continues

MUCH HAS BEEN SAID IN recent weeks by businessmen and business-oriented economists about the danger of inflation having receded to be supplanted by the threat of economic stagnation. This was the nub of the argument against Finance Minister Sharp's modest tax increase in his supplementary budget and against President Johnson's income tax surcharge bill.

The possibility of economic stagnation cannot be discounted and yet it is beginning to appear that the inflationary pressures are not disappearing as the economists predicted. The cost of living index in Canada moved upward at a less rapid rate for November and December. But any sighs of relief at this development must be muffled by the realization that a hefty new batch of price increases, recently injected into the economy by way of higher prices for basic metals, has to be reckoned with in the months ahead.

The increases in steel prices in Canada alone would be troublesome enough, but this country's producers of copper and aluminum have also followed the lead of American firms in posting higher prices. There have also been boosts in brass, nickel and other metals—all of which will be reflected in higher costs for finished products of one kind and another.

None of this seems to add up to the optimistic predictions that inflationary pressures are easing. The cost of living index will still be regarded as anxiously in the coming months as it was for the greater part of last year.

"... Ralph wasn't kidding when he said his Centennial project was going to consist of getting a raise ..."

Lamontagne

Montreal Le Devoir

News concerning the health of Mr. Guy Favreau, president of the Privy Council, has revived rumors that there will be a shuffle of the federal cabinet in the near future. Newspapers reported that not only Mr. Favreau, but other ministers as well, will soon leave the cabinet.

The spread of the news was sufficient to give rise once again to the rumor that Mr. Maurice Lamontagne, former state secretary, will soon re-enter the cabinet.

There are many arguments which could be invoked to support such a move. Of all the Quebec parliamentarians in Ottawa, Mr. Lamontagne is probably, with Mr. Sauve (forestry minister), the one who knows the workings of the federal government most intimately. When in the cabinet, he was . . . one of the most effective defenders of French Canada in the government.

Despite all that, we feel that Mr. Pearson would be commiting an error in inviting Mr. Lamontagne to return to the cabinet immediately, and that Mr. Lamontagne would do wrong to accept such an invitation.

Following his resignation from the cabinet, Mr. Lamontagne has undertaken to write a book on Canada's current problems. This was the best way for the former minister to make people forget almost completely about the unsuccessful first phase of his public life and to reshape the image of the real Maurice Lamontagne who was held in high esteem by those who got to know him well.

Mr. Diefenbaker's Offer of Conservative Disunity

IF Mr. Diefenbaker puzzled his television audience on Wednesday night, he baffled his colleagues of the House of Commons. Most Conservatives, after microscopic examination of the text, are persuaded that the man from Prince Albert is a candidate to succeed himself. But a minority regard the performance as a toe-dipping operation which in effect defers the decision until public reaction establishes the temperature reading.

Western

Few doubt that if Mr. Diefenbaker had welcomed a national leadership convention when the matter was first raised last year, he could easily have defeated any of the opponents now preparing to take the field. But the situation has since changed in at least three respects.

In the first place Mr. Diefenbaker, as party leader, has now tasted defeat at the hands of his own party. Secondly, he has been subjected to very severe criticism for a course of action since last November which seemed to be in defiance of the party's will. Thirdly, if he now enters the leadership race, he will be in the position of a man who attempts to cross the Rubicon twice.

The latter point requires some explanation. There were a good many Conservatives who resented the attack on Mr. Diefenbaker at the November convention. Their instinct was to defend their injured leader and to condemn his opponents. But this emotional reaction has since yielded to concern for the future of the Conservative Party. What they now desperately want is a means to restore the lost unity. By accepting a convention (the first crossing of the Rubicon) Mr. Diefenbaker has offered them such a means.

Having done so, however he immediately casts doubt on the prospect. Whatever his merits and great past services, Mr. Diefenbaker plainly is not the man to reunite the party. But having now, by his call for a convention, offered Conservatives an opportunity to overcome their differences, he promptly invites new ones by a strong indication that he will fight again. The enthusiasm aroused by the first crossing of the Rubicon may well melt very rapidly with the general realization that he has recrossed and brought the problem back with him.

It was in some respects a curious speech because it contained a strong inference (anything but flattering to Conservative delegates) that the November convention was undemocratic and that the next one should be organized in a different fashion, permitting the "average Conservative" to be heard. Mr. Diefenbaker was particularly critical of the presence at the last meeting of delegates at large named by provincial organizations.

Some Conservatives find this criticism bewildering. There are various reasons for appointing delegates at large. One is to provide for party notables, men — in Mr. Diefenbaker's words — "who could not attend unless they have fought through the years" but who otherwise were chosen by constituency organizations. Another is the fact that a considerable number of constituencies lack organizations.

But such delegates are not chosen by national headquarters (which would be friendly to Mr. Diefenbaker) or the national organization, which might be opposed to him. They are chosen by the provincial organizations; half in most case by women's and youth groups. In all they might number roughly 220 in a convention of 1,300 to 1,400. They would certainly be divided and it is unbelievable that they could have provided the heavy majorities by which Mr. Diefenbaker was defeated last November.

A good deal was said last fall, mostly by the Diefenbaker forces, about the importance of strict adherence to the constitution. Whatever delegates at large did or failed to do, they were present in accordance with the Conservative constitution. What constitutional provisions are there, some Conservatives ask, for the new style convention which Mr. Diefenbaker now wants to call as quickly as possible?

There will in any case be another problem. It is apparently not possible to call another convention on the basis of the old constituencies. As the new ones have yet to be organized in a great many cases, Mr. Diefenbaker's "earliest possible date" may be nowhere near so early as his urgings of Wednesday may possibly have suggested.

It has often been assumed that in any contest for the leadership (which is now presumably open though not vacant), Mr. Diefenbaker would win with ease because it would be a case of the chief versus a cluttered field of would-be successors. This would be true if Mr. Diefenbaker could enter the convention with enough strength to secure more than half the votes on the first ballot.

But this is far from certain. It is to be expected that on the first ballot anti-Diefenbaker votes will be divided among perhaps a half dozen candidates. If the old chief falls short, a critical point will have been reached. In that event the expectation is that some of his strength will begin to fall away while the anti-Diefenbaker forces pool their strength behind the strongest rival contender.

Meanwhile, by his cryptic sentences on television, Mr. Diefenbaker probably expects to force the potential heirs-apparent into the open. At the same time he has managed to retain his power base in Parliament. For, as he so carefully emphasized, the speech was no swan song. It was not written to encourage thoughts of an early abdication, rather the reverse. Mr. Diefenbaker still has the support of a large majority in caucus and he obviously intends to command.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

FOR a change of pace go for a hike along the banks of Goldstream from the log bridge at the campsite to the lower reaches at the picnic grounds.

The river is in full spate and at the falls the pools are so full that the falls are almost levelled out.

By the high rock cliffs the water swirls and tumbles, while overhead the mosses and ferns hang like a beautiful tapestry. Here the little dipper makes its home.

Further along the way there are several small islands formed by the rushing waters.

Some of the channels are deep, others run over large, smooth boulders and the water forms cascades.

Where the water goes under the bridge at the highway it pours through like a millrace; as the stream bed widens out the flood begins to slow down.

There are several little side streams entering the river, each one bringing with it silt and debris from the higher levels, not only adding to the flow of water but changing the color.

At the picnic grounds the river is quite wide and runs at a more leisurely pace.

In many places little waves are formed that beat upon the shallow gravel banks, each wave leaving a different pattern as it breaks and tumbles back into the flowing stream.

Further along the way the river now makes two fast-running channels which swirl and eddy as the water hits the sharp bend of the banks.

Here you can find several shallow pools that have been formed into back eddies.

Look at the banks and you will see how the water has cut away the soil, leaving the tree roots exposed. All this is a part of the age-old battle of the elements against the earth—history repeating itself since the beginning of time.

A Move to Extend the Cease-Fire Beyond Tet Truce

AN intensive behind-the-scenes effort is under way to parlay the lunar New Year (Tet) cease-fire in Vietnam into an extended truce. Whether there is a realistic hope of success remains to be seen. Hopeful signs are few. Such signs as there are, however, do permit at least a glimmer of optimism. They include:

Frye

- The fact that contacts between the belligerents are being sought, and perhaps achieved, in almost total secrecy. This is not just another highly publicized peace offensive.
- The fact that the Saigon government is not actively dragging its heels. On the contrary, Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky offered this past week to negotiate a "properly agreed and supervised" extension of the cease-fire.
- The fact that Red China is too preoccupied with its own inner turmoil to concentrate much energy on sabotaging the effort.

UN Secretary-General U Thant is central to the venture.

What Thant would like to see happen is that the cease-fire now scheduled for at least Feb. 8 to 12 (the Communists have offered Feb. 8 to 15) should thereafter continue—if necessary, from day to day, without formal proclamation or agreement. This would mean that the American bombing of the North would not take place, thus meeting an essential Communist precondition for peace talks.

It would also mean, even if there were violations on a limited scale, a reduction in Communist military activity. An important American countercondition would therefore be similarly met.

If this much was achieved, there would be talks aimed at a more formal truce, and finally negotiation of basic political issues.

Active efforts are under way to reach agreement on some such scenario.

The whole enterprise is an incredibly delicate balancing act in which military advantage, face, and political aspirations on several sides must be brought into equilibrium.

By making peace at this stage, the United States would be giving up the prospect of significant — conceivably even decisive — military gains in 1967 and 1968.

However, guerrilla warfare came close to routing the South Vietnamese in 1964. There is no sign that Saigon would be much better able to handle it now.

American help would therefore be required for a prolonged period — perhaps for the 10 to 20 years that the Reds say they are prepared to fight.

This very real danger of being bogged down by hit-and-run jungle terrorism for a decade or more gives Washington a motive to make peace, even before its enemy action could be limited, in that time, to relatively small-scale guerrilla operations.

At the present rate, it is possible that bargaining position is at maximum strength.

Conversely, the Communists' bargaining power, while substantial — they have both a field army in being and a long-range guerrilla threat in reserve — is on a declining curve. The can negotiate today to better advantage than they can expect to do a year from today.

Meanwhile the American bombing, which is hurting North Vietnam physically, is hurting the United States morally in the eyes of much of the world.

Two of the United States' top journalists, Harrison Salisbury of the New York Times and William C. Baggs of the Miami News, have seen and reported the impact of the raids.

Salisbury's reports have had the effect of "humanizing" the North Vietnamese and even of generating some sympathy for them.

He has examined at close range some of the popular American theses about the war, as for example that Hanoi is an obedient puppet of Russia or China, and that the Viet Cong are puppets of Hanoi. As a result, these theses have been cast in serious doubt.

The contrary conclusion — long urged, for example, by Thant and by the French — has gained support, namely that North Vietnam is fiercely independent, a kind of Asian Yugoslavia, and is a potential barrier to Chinese influence rather than a conveyor belt for it.

None of this necessarily places peace just around the corner. What it does do is to improve receptivity for peace efforts — to prepare the psychological climate for them.

It encourages even the most jaundiced and disillusioned of "doves" to hope that on this trip around the merry-go-round, they just might be able to snatch the brass ring.

Taxation and Unification

Your editorial columns have done well to support Mr. Sharp's contention that increased welfare expenditures require greater taxation.

What a pity Mr. Sharp's colleague in National Defence ever expounded his thesis that unification of the armed forces would effect huge savings of money which could be diverted into welfare. There have been no genuine savings, nor will there be any. Those of us who are now perforce "rookie civilians" knew there never was a valid prospect of saving money through Mr. Hellyer's schemes. The monolithic structure of his reorganized department and the ruthless way in which he destroyed the chiefs of staff committee should make it clear to all that Mr. Hellyer is motivated purely by considerations of short-term political gain for himself.

It is significant that although some of the back-benchers in Mr. Hellyer's party have had vastly more military experience than he has, they have evidently been stunned into speechlessness by his proposals as not one has been able to make a studied pronouncement in support of his policies and their prospects for saving any money.—Harold Groos, 1999 Lansdowne.

The New Fathers of Confederation

By PETER C. NEWMAN

This new series by the Times Ottawa commentator Peter C. Newman takes the veteran political reporter from coast to coast for talks with the premiers of Canada's 10 provinces, the powerful men whom he describes as "the new Fathers of Confederation." Mr. Newman's articles will appear several times a week as he files them from the provincial capitals during his cross-country survey of Canada in its Centennial Year.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld.—It is only proper to begin this voyage of political exploration on this rugged island whose people exist, even more than most Canadians, in daily denial of the harsh reality which is our environment.

The definition of a Canadian identity, which has been our preoccupation for a hundred years now, doesn't seem so elusive as you walk up Water Street, St. John's, huddled against the northern night, your breath smoking in the cold air. And what it consists of—this Canadianism of ours—is a kind of pride that we are here, that we have survived.

Newman

We may be a nation in trouble, but we are here, and it is our vast, mute geography that has made us unique. Because it has given us all a feeling that there is a kind of valor in us, in our stand against the grey and black and white of the winter, against the vastness of the land.

JEAN LESAGE
. . . lacked humility

The struggle that has formed our national character has not been a contest against other people, but against the land and the water, against the cold and the wind, and stubborn rock. This is a clean battle, but it yields no victories, only the postponement of defeats.

It was Marshall McLuhan who once told me that Newfoundland was the most politically literate part of Canada, "in the sense of politics being the only culture they have, because they're not metropolitan enough to ever have experienced a nineteenth century."

I am still not sure what McLuhan meant, but I went right to the source: the Hon. Joseph R. Smallwood, the man who invented modern Newfoundland.

The premier received me sitting in the throne chair of his luxurious cabinet room atop the province's monumental Confederation Building. His grasshopper legs pounding a footstool for emphasis, he expounded his simple theory why Canada would endure, why Confederation was safe, and why the centennial celebrations would be a huge success:

It's all because Jean Lesage has been replaced by Daniel Johnson, and Lester Pearson has succeeded John Diefenbaker.

"By comparison," he was saying, "it's a great pleasure to deal with Mr. Johnson. He doesn't act like an emperor, he doesn't look like an emperor, and he doesn't talk like an emperor — he behaves like an ordinary human being. After dealing with Mr. Lesage for six years, I always marvelled at the humility and modesty of General de Gaulle.

"Pearson," he exclaimed. "I don't know of any government in Canadian history which in such a short time has accomplished so much to make Canada great. It's fantastic. The old story of the hare and the tortoise."

Big Difference

But it was really the removal of John Diefenbaker that has made all the difference: "Mr. Diefenbaker was the greatest misfit who ever occupied public office in Canada — he was utterly, completely and absolutely unfitted to be prime minister. When he got honorary degrees — and he took them from anything that crept or crawled in the shape of a university — this was the stuff that meant something to him, not mastering ideas and formulating policies. You lost his interest after the first three minutes, unless you wanted to talk about him."

Smallwood's optimism is also based on his confident rejection of the possibility that Quebec might seek independence.

"Why?" he says. "If the six million citizens of Quebec — of whom only one-tenth of one per cent talk about these things — ever awakened to the fact that these separatists really meant what they were saying, the people would rise up with their scythes and their pitchforks or the modern equivalents and put them down. How could Quebec conceivably get as much consideration as it gets from Ottawa, anywhere else? The idea of six million people in North America setting themselves up as a nation in this day and age is just too silly for words."

UN Idea Out

He similarly rejects the Union Nationale's "associate states" theory.

"We wouldn't want to belong to that kind of Canada, and if that's what's meant by constitutional reform, we're against it."

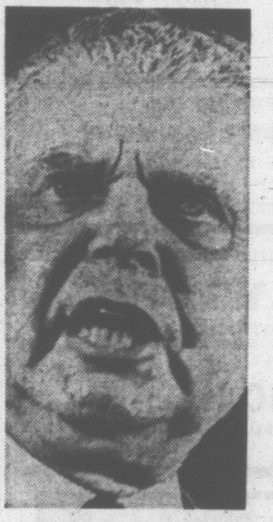
The Newfoundland premier, whose administration exists on the 60 per cent of revenues that are a gift from Ottawa, is an enthusiastic booster of strong central government.

"We didn't join Canada to improve Canada, but to improve Newfoundland," he said, "and it has done so, even beyond anything that I promised."

The past decade of political upheavals in Canada's federal and provincial governments has left Smallwood's power untouched. His telepathic accord with his people is so strong that last year, in his sixth campaign, he came back with 39 of the legislature's 42 seats.

One of the reasons for his success has been that when Smallwood speaks, Ottawa listens, and listens with a respect far out of proportion of the island's modest economic stature. The reason is that Smallwood, unlike most other premiers, thrusts himself vigorously into federal election campaigns and decisively influences the results in the province's seven seats.

He expects to have his wishes reproduced in Ottawa, and with the stout help of his federal lieutenant, Jack Pickersgill, he usually gets what he wants.



JOHN DIEFENBAKER
. . . greatest misfit

But after 500 years of undevelopment, life is changing in Newfoundland.

The giant Churchill Falls power project will create the island's first labor shortage and Smallwood is confident that the huge power resources of Labrador will eventually industrialize his island. The provincial government is already negotiating with aluminum manufacturers and other power-dependent industries to come in and set up new plants.

The real revolution in Newfoundland today is in education. Memorial in St. John's now ranks tenth in size among Canadian universities, and not only is the tuition free, but by 1970 all students will be paid a salary of $100 per month to defray personal expenses while they attend.

Premier Smallwood, loyal booster of Prime Minister Pearson, claims he knows of "no government in history which in such a short time has accomplished so much to make Canada great".

During Smallwood's stewardship the province's education budget has leaped from an annual $3 million to more than $60 million in the next fiscal year. The province's expenditure on school buses alone is now more than its entire pre-Confederation education budget.

This emphasis on education is producing a new, post-Confederation generation of Newfoundlanders.

"I wouldn't say that they're Canadians first and Newfoundlanders second," Smallwood maintains, "but their loyalty to the island has been diluted. They're good Canadians. They no longer say 'I've been up to Canada,' and the act of Confederation is no longer an issue."

For the first 10 years after Confederation, no Newfoundland politician would risk opening any banquet by asking the audience to sing "O Canada." Now, no gathering is held without it, though "God Save the Queen" and "The Ode of Newfoundland" are also sung.

"The flag debate," says Smallwood, "seems like a thousand and eleven years ago."

But there still remain residual differences.

Much Suffering

The history of Newfoundland is too full of suffering for there not to be an intense local preoccupation and provincial patriotism.

"Our hearts," Smallwood said, as I was leaving, "tell us that we're proud of anything that Canada is proud of. But our minds can't help reminding us that this is all a very new and recent thing. So, Newfoundlanders are very pleased and happy about the Centennial, but we're not exactly misty-eyed."

Nature Needs the Borers I'd Happily Do Without

By ART STOTT

Some time ago, when Hec Richmond was deeply involved in research on the ambrosia beetle — hoping to save money for the forest industry on whose raw product the nasty little critter feeds — I asked him if the time would ever come when these boring insects would be totally eliminated.

Stott

He looked surprised, and astonished me with the reply: "I hope not." Then he explained. If all the borers were eradicated, he pointed out, dead branches and fallen trunks would pile up on the forest floor to a point where the woods became impenetrable. The borers, he said, were scavengers who helped to break down the natural rubbish, speeding the rotting process as the old wood returned to the soil the ingredients it had taken out.

"All we want to do," he said, "is control them to the point where the ambrosia beetle, for instance, doesn't invade cut timber as soon as it hits the ground and leave those thin lines of discoloration which make clean lumber look low grade."

So I received one more lesson on a highly specialized cycle of nature.

I am less favorably impressed by the application of a similar cycle to the boat slip at the foot of our lot. Every five to seven years I have to replace the heavy log stringers which carry the cross planks over which the boat is drawn up or pushed down when I want to go fishing.

The teredos dine on the wood in my stringers. They are joined by other small marine animals which have a palate for the same fare. Eventually the logs become little more than shells — often half-shells when the bugs and worms attack them from the outside. Then, when the storms ride in, carrying their freight of battering ram logs, they hit the slip and the slip disintegrates.

It's all very discouraging.

The slip has given its warning that the point of disintegration is near. The bottoms of the logs, once imbedded in the sand and held by a deadman, have broken down. Each sou'easter piles in boom sticks that smash the cross planks lose and there's little substance to the stringers when I try to spike them back in place.

An intelligent person would replace the whole thing now. Weak as it is, the slip would carry logs up the incline if I winched them into place and I wouldn't have to muscle them up the uneven shore rocks, as I do when the slip disappears.

Also, on the beach now are fairly good creosote-impregnated logs that would make excellent stringers, repelling marine worms longer than the untreated sticks.

The prospect stirs my interest as I stand looking at the dilapidated runway, humming the old hymn about "change and decay in all around I see." In my circulatory system one red blood corpuscle says to another, "Oh boy, let's get moving." My other red blood corpuscle says, "Well, now, let's not get carried away by the idea."

★ ★ ★

I'm a man to pay attention to that third red corpuscle. And besides, long ago somebody stole my peavey, the old struggling stick with which I formerly heaved logs into place, and sometime last year the small skiff I once used to tow stringer logs to my location disappeared.

These losses, plus an inclination to run out of gas quickly now, would make the project more arduous than it should be.

That's discouraging, too.

Just the same, it would be interesting to see if I can manage the job I could handle a few years ago and in my youth. And if I want to go fishing this year, I'll need a slip. The semi-ruin at the foot of the lot isn't going to last out the season.

The whole problem could be resolved by hiring a crew to lay in a concrete runway. But, there again, it wouldn't be patriotic when the country's edging away from high capital expenditure—a thing from which I edge away in automatic reflex.

The situation calls for replacement now, a difficult job but not as hard as it will be when the old installation goes out. It's time for action.

I'll think about it.

The 'Emancipation' Of the Modern Male

By JOYCE EGGINTON

NEW YORK — A neatly-dressed American businessman was recently observed at the cosmetics counter of a New York department store, testing perfumes female fashion, on his wrist. He rejected one as too spicey, another as too heavy, and after some deliberation selected a third as being his type of fragrance.

The man was not embarrassed, and the scene caused not the slightest stir among the women shoppers around him. He might as well have been buying a tie or a pair of socks.

This, according to sales psychologists, is part of the emancipation of the American male — a trend which they believe is only just beginning, and which is being followed by much of Western civilization. The British have their long hair and Carnaby Street clothes; the Americans are now estimated to be spending $500 million a year on "grooming agents" — which manufacturers privately admit are often the same as women's cosmetics, packaged in masculine style and with subtle changes in aroma.

At first male grooming aids were bought by girl friends and wives as presents. But in the past year men have taken to buying their own to such an extent that many stores sell their male cosmetics in two areas — among the women's beauty products for the present givers, and in the men's departments.

Perfume 'Bar'

Typical of the latter is a counter in a large New York store called "Harry's Bar" with assistants stressing the maleness of their trade by wearing bar-room aprons and dispensing perfumes as they might do drinks.

During the Christmas season the male grooming trade reached a peak. Some of the gimmicks included cakes of men's soap packaged to look like giant army-issue chocolate bars, an "executive lunch box" filled with grooming aids, and an oak rack constructed to hang in a bathroom and hold just about everything a man might need to improve his appearance. The fully-equipped rack sold at $75, a sum which might buy an overcoat or a suit.

Cosmetics companies claim that the male enthusiasm for their products is based upon the increasingly-recognized fact that a man's appearance can be as important as his ability in getting a job, keeping it and winning promotion. Thus, men are responding more and more to appeals to dye their hair, cover up the bald patches, remove those unsightly blemishes.

Dr. Ernest Dichter, president and founder of the Institute for Motivational Research, sees even deeper emotional reasons than the fear of looking too old at 40. He feels that the modern male has become much more sure of himself, having passed the need to prove his masculinity by smelling of tobacco, exhibiting a hairy chest and well-developed muscles.

Dr. Dichter's institute has been studying the entire subject, and has come up with this prediction for the future:

"We men are going to become far more masters of our own destiny. Having passed the Carnaby Street stage, we shall wear even more colorful clothes. The barriers between men's and women's clothes will break down, and the human male will become the peacock again, wearing all kinds of laces and perfumes."

"For generations he has refused to emulate the animal male in gorgeous appearance for fear of being thought feminine. Now he is sufficiently sure of himself not to worry."

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

Both in the North and the South, the U.S. this week stepped up the tempo of the Vietnam war.

While continuing to avoid targets close to the capital of Hanoi, U.S. bombers made some of the heaviest raids of the war on other industrial centres.

The raids ranged from the 17th parallel dividing North and South Vietnam to near the borders of China. Rail lines were attacked in an effort to cut the flow of arms and strategic goods from China.

The North Vietnamese protested to the International Control Commission that civilian casualties were heavy in the new raids on the cities of Viet Tri and Thai Nguyen.

In the South ground troops and napalm-dropping planes laid waste to an area near Saigon said to be under Viet Cong control.

As many villagers as possible were evacuated before the "firestorm" saturation bombing began levelling towns and jungle.

●

Meanwhile Canada was reported continuing to put diplomatic pressure on Poland to support some form of ICC-initiated peace moves. So far the Poles have vetoed any attempt by India and Canada, the other two members of the Commission, to launch negotiations.

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin said he believes the ICC has a role to play in bringing peace to Vietnam "when the time is right."

In London, British Foreign Secretary George Brown told the House of Commons his discussions have given him hope the stalemate may soon be broken.

The leader of South Vietnam, Premier Nguyen Cao Ky, was in Australia this week to drum up support for his cause. He encountered some hostility but his reception was mostly friendly.

The opposition Labor party had encouraged anti-Ky demonstrations but the protests were diminished by the drubbing the party took in the recent general election on the Vietnam issue.

●

Prime Minister Harold Wilson made his first foray to Europe to sound out reaction to Britain's renewed bid for membership in the European Common Market. The answer, in Rome at least, was affirmative.

Premier Aldo Moro told Wilson he can count on "the warm support of the Italian government."

During the next six weeks Wilson will travel to the other Market members—France, Belgium, Holland, West Germany and Luxembourg.

Paris will be the toughest stopover, but there are indications President Charles de Gaulle has been persuading the new West German government to give Wilson a cool reception in Bonn too.

●

The course of events in China remained as murky as ever. The gist of most reports coming out was that Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung is regaining control.

What opposition remains now is polarized around President Liu Shao-chi. There were unconfirmed reports that Liu had been placed under house arrest. Wall newspapers in Peking reported his son had been imprisoned.

The excesses of the present political situation in China were underlined by disclosure that the Red Guards had wrecked the birthplace shrine of Confucius and pronounced his doctrines dead.

Born 500 years before Christ, the gentle philosopher has been revered in China since, with children being taught his wisdom on the virtues of non-violence, fidelity and moderation.

Clearly they are not applicable in modern China.

Briefly:

Conservative leader John Diefenbaker said he wants the party's leadership question to be settled as soon as possible and indicated, but did not say directly, that he will run again. Former B.C. Tory leader Davie Fulton said he will be a candidate . . .

The Liberal party of Britain elected Jeremy Thorpe, 37, as leader to replace Jo Grimond, 53, who resigned after serving 10 years . . .

Quebec members of the Liberal caucus chose Manpower Minister Jean Marchand to be their spokesman and he was duly named by Prime Minister Pearson as his Quebec lieutenant to succeed the ailing Guy Favreau . . .

Some 217,000 elementary and high school students in Montreal had an unscheduled week's holdiay when 9,000 Catholic teachers went on strike . . .

Lynden Pindling was confirmed as the new premier of the first Negro government in the history of the Bahamas Islands following a close general election . . .

In Spain, 13 workers were imprisoned for as long as 2½ years for handing out literature opposing the Franco regime.

Majority of Canadians Proud of Their Country

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

As Canadians launch into the 100th birthday of their country, the strongest feeling they have about Canada is pride. In Quebec the people are proud of their French heritage; in other parts of the country the citizens are just proud of being Canadian.

Next reason is happiness or satisfaction in being a Canadian —"glad to be a Canadian, a good place to live in." Some people hail Canada as a land of freedom, a privileged country; others laud it as a big country, full of opportunities, prosperous and beautiful.

The question: "When You Think 'I Am a Canadian,' What Comes First to Your Mind?"

When this question was asked in 1959, it was also pride in Canada that came to the top with happiness and freedom next.

VOICE FROM THE GALLERY

Prints, Pottery Exhibition Good

By TONY EMERY

Victoria's long-standing links with the Orient are well illustrated in the exhibitions now drawing to a close in the Art Gallery on Moss Street.

Emery

In the Centennial Wing and the Ker Gallery are a number of exquisite examples of the dedicated approach to painting, pottery and textile design that makes art an essential ingredient in the spiritual life of the peoples of China and Japan. Strolling through the galleries, admiring here a delicate piece of jade carving or fragile porcelain, there a bowl of Chien ware or celadon, it is difficult not to begin to feel a little apologetic about even the greatest of Western artists, whose works by comparison often appear clodhopping and heavyhanded.

It comes as something of a relief to see — as in the Ming "five colors" vase, and the neighboring cloisonne piece — that aberrations of taste are not the monopoly of the Occident, and after too many delicate wisps of form and slightly overbred, smooth, sweetly-colored glazes one begins to long for something a little earthy, rough and strong. And there it is, in the form of that honest, simple grave jar of the Han Dynasty, which may well have been celebrating its first centenary when J. Caesar was reconnoitring the crossing of the Medway. We all should look so good when we are 2,000 years old.

The big gallery in the Centennial Wing is given up to a display of Japanese prints. The permanent collection of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria includes some 60 examples of the work of contemporary Japanese printmakers, and nearly 40 of these are on show until Sunday, when the shows change.

The prints are rather an odd assortment, ranging from the splendid to the trite, with a couple that are embarrasingly cute. I don't have to say that they are, from the technical point of view, marvels of execution. Apart from the advantage that Japanese printmakers have over everybody in the wonderful materials they have to work with (the papers and inks in this show are often so admirable that they might have been exhibited by themselves, in bottle and roll, and still have drawn a crowd) the wood block is as much their own as the bagpipe is the mountaineers', and the know how to make it sing.

There are three main currents discernible in the work of the graphic artists assembled here, and for convenience let me call them Traditional, Modern and Contemporary.

The exemplar of the traditional is Kiyoshi Saito in his marvellously simple winter landscapes of Aizu. Dense, plushy blacks and diaphanous greys relieve the big white masses in these snowy scenes which, in a simplified and economical way, continue the popular representational art of the Ukiyo-ye as practised by those poineers of "pop," Hiroshige and Hokusai. To make hay of my careful divisions Saito takes his economies of form a stage further, and in his seated figure on a grainy wood background, "Miroku," and in his all but abstract garden prints he produces works in a modern vein that are economic miracles to leave the German Wirtschaftwundering. There he should have stood, because his attempt at a Kandinsky, "Untitled" 1952, is a laborious contrivance offered as a contemporary statement.

•

Under Modern I lump together all the works which show that the artists have studied the prints and drawings of European artists of the first half of this century. The delicately colored "Persimmons" of Toru Mabuchi reveal his debt to Bonnard; Tadashige Ono goes for German Expressionism, and Heckel in particular; Yotishitoshi Mori (honest, I'm not making it up) in 1965 produced a stylized warrior that would have won him prizes at any European academy in 1910, and Watanabe blends bold Oriental pattern, the folk primitive, and Romanesque iconography into a strange mixture.

The most strenuously contemporary of those exhibiting is Tokio Miyashita, with his sophisticated intaglio techniques that indicate a study of S. W. Hayter, but he does not seem to have his compatriot Saito's inborn sense of when and where to stop and he goes on until more becomes less with every spidery stroke.

If I had to choose one print from the 40 I would take Fukushima's "Tetro Pot B." Simple, luminous: low sun on a neat jumble of pottery forms in foreground balanced magically against strong horizontal rectangles behind; tension of space against surface pattern that rings like a delicately-tuned cymbal; and color blooming from the inks to make the whole print expand to fill the wall.

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

A group which has only been together five months but already has had an impressive number of up-Island bookings is soon to be heard in the Victoria area.

The Northwest Sound, a Royal Oak-based band under the management of Fran Murphy is the combined efforts of singer Glen Perry, John Raines (lead guitar, Russ Steffler (organ,) Lewis Perry (electric bass) and Mike Perry (drums).

Their name, The Northwest Sound, describes them perfectly, a hard-driving smooth sound which has been perfected by many U.S. bands in the northwest but never before by a Canadian group.

This is a group you'll be hearing a lot more about in our local music scene; they've got the talent that should have Victorians asking for them dance after dance.

NEW 'CLUB' OPENING DOORS

Victoria, better known for its cluster lights than its bright lights, is going modern.

Although the jet set will still prefer Vegas, the capital city is undergoing a quiet revolution.

Early next month it will boast two night clubs.

The latest to open will be the Old Forge Room beneath ground level at 919 Douglas Street.

LIQUOR LAWS

In deference to B.C.'s touchy liquor laws, the Old Forge will not boast the word "club" in its title.

But it will share the privileges of clubs in other parts of the province by staying open until 2 a.m.

Able to seat 500 (for dinner or drinks or both), the Old Forge will cater to the "swingers" who prefer to begin life after 9 p.m. rather than end it.

In fact the premises won't open until 11:30 p.m. weekdays and 9 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays.

Complete with bar and 1,500-square-feet of dance floor, the Old Forge will operate compliments of a cabaret licence. Only other place so operating in the city is the Red Lion Hotel.

To get around the usual midnight closing hours, a licensed cabaret house charges admission. In the case of the Old Forge this will likely be $3 per couple — though it will not be restricted to couples.

Except Sundays (nothing opens Sundays) the "club" will feature a five-piece band. Co-promoter Tony Else hopes to attract "name" entertainers.

Opening date is Friday, Feb. 3.

The couple from Quebec chatted with our Maitre d' Leslie, while topping off dinner with a second coffee.

"We found all of Victoria beautiful and interesting," said the wife, "but it was the provincial library that made us feel at home. That was where we found that the French, too, helped build Victoria."

The husband said, "Many French people—4,000—came with the gold miners in 1858. For a time they had their own newspaper."

The wife said, "And they had a choral society."

"Best of all," said the man, "they introduced B.C.'s first medicare. One dollar a month covered hospital and doctor. They had a 20-bed hospital and even non-members could use it for $2 a day. The society finally merged with Royal Jubilee Hospital."

"We feel now that we have close ties with Victoria. That was nice to learn in centennial year, n'est ce pas?"

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

A year-long festival!

For those who have become allergic to the idea of "festival" the thought is probably appalling.

But consider. How otherwise could one celebrate the hundredth birthday of a nation than with displays of prowess in the arts and athletic worlds, by the presence of distinguished visitors and the presentation of gala events.

And what else can one call such a comprehensive program, but a festival?

A couple of weeks ago in this column I commented on the tremendous demand the coming year would make on everyone's entertainment budget.

One thing I neglected to mention in this connection was the fact that government subsidization in the matter of Festival Canada on tour would bring ticket prices within a much more reasonable range than would otherwise be possible.

Some of the delights of this entertainment smorgasbord are mentioned elsewhere on this page today.

But much more is in store for Victorians and if you want to get a sort of bird's-eye-view of the situation you should drop into the Greater Victoria Centennial office on Centennial Square and cast your eye over the 12-months calendar that covers one wall.

Full Calendar For Centenary

Incidentally, anyone who is planning anything at all in the way of public entertainment anytime up to next December will be extremely foolish not to get in touch with the Centennial office to correlate and record proposed dates.

Here are some of the events other than those mentioned elsewhere that are up-coming in the next six months or so.

Top visiting events include the return of the spectacular Red Army Chorus — Memorial Arena, April 29 — and the all-Canada Military Tattoo which will open the new Centennial Stadium on the Gordon Head campus, running May 25, 26 and 27.

Coming in September, but with no definite dates yet, is the Canadian musical, Anne of Green Gables, which was the smash success of the Charlottetown Festival last year and has drawn steady critical raves.

The National Youth Orchestra is scheduled to visit us on Aug. 9.

In Vancouver there will be two events late in the year that will certainly attract a good percentage of Victorians. They are England's National Theatre with Sir Laurence Olivier in two productions and Leonard Bernstein with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Another notable Vancouver event will be Joan Sutherland's guest appearance with the Vancouver Opera Association in her famous role in Lucia di Lammermoor. It opens March 11.

So much for the visiting notables, at least those who are confirmed up to the moment.

On the local scene there are a number of special things already under way and many organizations, while they are not adding to their regular seasons are striving toward achieving something memorable for 1967.

Schools Top Local Efforts

Personally I would place at the top of the local specials two projects involving the schools of Greater Victoria.

Marking the close of Canada's first century by the children who will be the active citizens of the first half of the second, seems to me to be very important indeed

The first three days of June, Memorial Arena will be occupied by mass bands, a thousand-voice choir, folk dance groups and a physical education display by 500 youngsters.

This spectacular staged by the schools will be followed by a week at McPherson Playhouse when a pageant play about Canada will be presented by the area's elementary schools.

The play, entitled Journey for Two, was written by two elementary school teachers — Anthony Burton and David Allen — who are also, respectively, the director-producer team.

Greater Victoria Centennial Society, which, incidentally, is working with the B.C. Centennial Committee to sponsor many of the visiting events, has underwritten half the cost of the schools spectacular.

A commission for an original Canadian composition to be premiered by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra was sponsored by the B.C. Centennial Committee, and through the Canadian Music Centre in Toronto, this commission went to Michel Perrault.

Mr. Perrault is known here, having guest conducted a symphony concert a couple of seasons ago, including two of his own compositions.

The work is entitled "Centennial Homage — an Overture to the Second Century, B.C."

It is based, as requested by the Music Centre, on a British Columbia theme, which, says the composer in a letter, ". . . may be rather difficult to find" though he affirms that it is present "in a subtle way."

The composition will receive its premiere at the February 26 and 27 pair of Victoria Symphony concerts.

The city's oldest musical organization, the Arion Male Choir, has plans for a Centennial festival of song, the date, May 6.

Victoria Operatic Society is going all out on its production of Annie Get Your Gun, to which they will give a long run starting May 15 at McPherson Playhouse.

The musical is cast now with Janet Senior in the title role and Harry Elsdon playing opposite as Frank Butler. Cliff Clarke and Howard Denike are the directors.

Lastly of course there is the special Centennial section of the Victoria Music Festival, consisting of separate classes, winners of which will go on to Provincial and possibly National finals.

All this — which does not take into account the regular activities of such groups as Victoria Theatre Guild, Musical Art, Bastion Theatre and others — sounds like a dizzying round.

Especially from my corner.

It's impressive, don't you think? Or depressive — depending on the point of view and the extent to which one might be involved.

Burnished Resonance Of Baritone Excites

By AUDREY JOHNSON

One of the great Canadian voices of the century was heard by an audience of city music lovers and university students Friday night.

Louis Quilico, internationally noted opera star and recitalist, was presented by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in association with the School of Fine Arts of the University of Victoria.

The recital was the first musical event to be given in the lecture theatre of the new Education and Arts Building on the Gordon Head campus.

Mr. Quilico possesses a powerful and most opulent baritone. One has only to hear the burnished bronze resonance of his sound to know that one is in the presence of a rare gift.

The Montreal-born artist commands a magnificent technique and uses his great voice with a bravura style and authority that are major resources of the ideal opera singer.

EIGHT ARIAS

His program was impressive. Eight arias and four groups comprising songs of Debussy, Duparc, Handel, Denza, Tosti, Ravel, Vaughan Williams and Quilter.

Rave notices he received for his 1960 debut starring at Covent Garden in Rigoletto were understandable as he sang the heart-breaking aria, Cortigiani vil razza Dannata from the Verdi opera.

The big, dramatic operas — Un Ballo in Maschera, Thoams' Hamlet, Giordano's Andrea Chenier — are particularly well served by the dramatic power, timbre and color of his voice.

But the Mozart arias, especially Finch han dal vino from Don Giovanni, and Rossini's Largo al factotum were sung with a scintillating brilliance and buoyancy.

The voice is consistently thrilling but there was less full artistic satisfaction in some of the songs — in the Debussy group, for example, where certain subtleties were lost.

Mr. Quilico was splendidly accompanied by Lina Pizzolongo, who is also his wife and sometime teacher.

The lecture theatre is well suited to the role of recital hall and adds a needed amenity to the campus.

This CBC Celebrity Series recital will be heard over CBC-AM radio network at 8:30 p.m. March 16.

BEGINS IN CALGARY

Ocean-to-Ocean Stratford Tour

A new production of an internationally popular Russian comedy and one of Shakespeare's best-known plays are in rehearsal now for the Stratford Festival Company's first ocean-to-ocean tour of Canada.

Under the banner of Festival Canada, the company opens its Centennial Year Tour February 15 in Calgary and continues across the nation for six weeks.

David William, one of Britain's busiest director-actors, is changing the focus of his highly-successful Twelfth Night from Stratford's thrust stage to the traditional proscenium stages the company will encounter.

A special setting designed by Brian Jackson, who is also responsible for the costumes, will permit what Mr. William terms, "the choreography and the swift pace of the popular 1966 festival production."

Mr. William flew in from Britain this week with the leading lady for the play, Ann Firbank, who toured North American a couple of years ago as a principal in the Royal Shakespeare Company's Hollow Crown, presentation.

Miss Firbank has appeared in dozens of films, television shows and stage productions in London. She will portray Viola in Twelfth Night. Leo Ciceri is Sir Toby Belch and Bernard Behrens is Malvolio.

The Festival Theatre's stages also are occupied with rehearsals for Michael Langham's production of The Government Inspector, for which a new translation has been provided by Dr. Leonid Ignatieff and adapted by Peter Raby.

William Hutt is Khlestakov and Tony van Bridge plays the mayor in this sparkling comedy of life in a small provincial town, an international favorite for a century.

Leslie Hurry, one of Britain's best-known designers, created the costumes and the sets for The Government Inspector. An original score will be composed by Raymond Pannell who also will conduct the touring orchestra. Music for "Twelfth Night," is by Canadian composer Louis Applebaum.

Production of The Government Inspector, was made possible by a special grant from the Centennial Commission.

The huge productions, cast and crates of costumes and sets will be flown from city to city during the tour.

Other cities in the tour include Victoria, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Fredericton, Halifax, St. John's, Nfld., Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Ottawa.

At the conclusion of the tour the Stratford Festival begins rehearsals for its 15th annual season which opens in June.

GAY NINETIES whoop-de-do is the theme of The Best of Barkerville, the lively musical revue touring the province and which comes to McPherson Playhouse, Feb. 1. Best of Barkerville is the cream of the fast-paced show which gained fame at the Theatre Royal in the restored ghost town of Barkerville. High kicker in the picture is Gayle Howard.

Winning Students In Recital

Nine award-winning students will participate in the recital tonight at St. Ann's Academy auditorium, when medals, bursaries and a diploma awarded by the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto, will be presented.

Rev. A. Calder will make the presentations. The recital is sponsored by the RCT Alumni, Victoria Chapter.

Mrs. Miriam A. Lancaster will receive her ARCT piano teacher's diploma.

Silver medals will go to Lesley A. Powell, Grade I and Hilary Scott, Grade IV (voice); Denise Wood, Grade IV (speech arts); Ronald Comber, Grade VII (violin); Donna Dougan, Grade VIII (organ); William J. Milne, Grade IV, Wendy Stofer, Grade VI and Pat Patterson, Grade VII (piano).

BURSARIES

Junior Alumni Bursaries have been awarded to William J. Milne and Hilary Scott, and Intermediate to Wendy Stofer, Donna Dougan, Donna Zapf and Denis Jonston.

Pat Patterson, Wendy Stofer and William Milne will redeive Frederick Harris Scholarships.

Taking part in the program will be Pat Patterson, Hilary Scott, clarinettist Donna Zapf, Ronald Comber, Denise Wood and Rodina Jensen in a duologue, William Milne, Denis Johnston (saxaphone) and Wendy Stofer.

Special guests will be pianist Allison Marshall and a string trio consisting of Barbara Ann Court, violin, George Kiraly, cello and Cheryl Boris, piano.

GIFTED PIANIST SYMPHONY GUEST

A young lady who, at the age of 16, already has a varied—and at times lucrative —musical life behind her, is one of the young solo artists who will appear with Victoria Symphony Orchestra next Thursday night.

She is Linn Hendry, until recently of Penticton, a highly gifted pianist who will play the first movement of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 2.

Linn came to Victoria from Penticton to live last October. But prior to that she had already commuted on several occasions for lessons with Robin Wood, whom she had first met at Vancouver's British Columbia Music Festival, where he and Neil Van Allen of Britain were adjudicating piano classes.

OFF TO ENGLAND

In July Linn will go to England where she has a scholarship at London's Guildhall School of Music.

In the meantime she is finishing Grade 12 at Esquimalt Senior Secondary and working "like mad" at the piano.

She began piano lessons at her own insistence, very early.

"My brother was 17 years older than I and a fine violinist. On his trips home from the University of Washington there would be music sessions with mother accompanying him. I longed to be able to play for him and couldn't wait to get started," she tells you.

Linns' brother was killed in an air accident while she was still very small, but music remained a major interest in her life.

She played both clarinet and oboe in the school orchestra and was organist in a church for a time.

But one of the most enjoyable bits of her early chapters is connected with the time when she and a friend named Jennifer joined talents and as the Jenny-Linn singers became widely known and much in demand for all kinds of entertaining.

"It was crazy, the amount of money we made," she reminisces. "We'd sing folk songs in costume and then change our dresses and sing show songs and some really good songs."

In recent years Linn has been the "orchestra" for productions by the Penticton Light Opera group.

She has also turned her hand to rock 'n roll arrangements for four of her schoolmates who have formed a band.

Linn's parents have always been "with her." Her musical mother conducted choirs and taght young children piano in Penticton. Her father, who had retired recently, sold their house earlier than he had intended, so that they could come to the coast and make a home for Linn while she studied in Victoria.

ACCOMPANIST

All three will be going to England in July.

Linn says she is not planning anything for her future for sure, but she would like to be a profesional accompanist.

Meantime she is enjoying her music studies in Victoria, which she undertook at the advice of Mr. van Allen who was deeply impressed with her performance at the Vancouver festival.

Known, Unknown Get Help for New Plays

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Thady O'Sullivan.

As a Centennial Year play, it may leave the nation lisping.

More than a dozen new plays — The Charm of Thady O'Sullivan among them — are being produced in 1967 with the aid of federal subsidies.

If they're as inspired as some of their titles, they should pay theatrical dividends.

Thady is one of five new plays being tried out by the Holiday Children's Theatre of Vancouver. Two of them will be taken on a Canadian tour next fall.

Vancouver humorist Eric Nicol has contributed an ear-catcher called Beware of the Quickly Who. Paul St. Piere, writer of the fine Cariboo Country TV series, has written one called Skokiam.

The other plays being tried out by Holiday are The Riddle Machine by Betty Lambert and The Magic Donkey by Luan Asllani.

St. Pierre had written another play — How to Run the Country — being produced by the Vancouver Playhouse and set to open March 2.

The Playhouse will also stage two other new Canadian plays, one titled Countdown to Armageddon and written by James Clavell.

Grants as high as $40,000, as low as $300, have gone from the federal centennial commission's performing arts division to authors and companies.

The known and the unknown are being helped.

NEGROES ARE SUBJECT

One of Canada's older, quieter minority groups will see itself in Halifax Negro David Giffen's historical play Coming Here to Stay. It has been written for production in Nova Scotia's Negro communities.

The one full-fledged federal venture into theatre came Jan. 11 with the premiere of The Centennial Play at Ottawa's Little Theatre.

The five authors commissioned by the government to write it were Eric Nicol, Halifax physician Arthur Murphy, Montreal playwright Yves Theriault, editor-author Robertson Davies of Peterborough, Ont., and folksy Alberta humorist W. O. Mitchell.

Mitchell, famed for the Jake and the Kid radio series, is collaborating with Morris Surdin on a Calgary-produced musical called Wild Rose. It opens May 2.

The Dark Unfathomed Cave, one of Dr. Murphy's plays, will be taken west by the touring Neptune Theatre of Halifax this year.

Quebec playwrights have a spate of productions on the boards, including a bilingual play called And Now Is the Time to Drink. Written by Guy Fournier and starring Monique Lepage, it is being produced at The Piggery Theatre.

GELINAS WRITES PLAY

La Comedie Canadienneis producing new plays by Gratien Gelinas, Marcel Dube and Guy Dufresne, all proven playwrights.

Montreal's Theatre du Rideau Vert has Il Est un Pays (There Is a Country) by Jean-Paul Pinsonnault.

A floating showboat called Le Theatre de l'Escale will carry bilingual entertainment to seaway ports as far west as Windsor, Ont.

Charlottetown's Circle Theatre Players are being helped with the production of a new play by Adele Townshend called Whistle in the Wind.

The Vagabond Independent Players of P.E.I. will present The Dandy Lion to children.

Grants have also gone to major companies for the production of established works.

The Manitoba Theatre Centre will present Bertholt Brecht's Galileo in Winnipeg Nov. 30.

The Stratford Shakespearean Festival plays cities in eight provinces with new productions of Twelfth Night, and Gogol's The Government Inspector.

HARSH RITUAL ENDURED

Three women undergo a violent ritual in University of Victoria Players Club's The Potter's Field, which opens Tuesday night at Phoenix Theatre. The play runs to Jan. 28 and continues again from Jan. 31 to Feb. 4.

SIGHTS SET HIGH . . . . . . FOR UNIVERSITY QUARTERLY

Malahat Joins International Set in Fancy Package

THE MALAHAT REVIEW

Reviewed by George Robertson

The first thing about The Malahat Review is that it does not look like a first issue, even though its cover unmistakably says "Number ONE" under the photograph of Henry Moore's Atom Piece, 1964. Lift the book and it has weight. Turn its pages, and the paper, the typography, and the illustrated material all look professional in a way that few periodicals are able to achieve in just one issue. Even its name strikes no sense of embarrassed recognition of a familiar place-name — which may be a sign of how far we have come from our provincialism of a few years ago.

In short, if describing the goods by their package is of any use at all, let it be said that The Malahat Review is a very prestigious package indeed and should sit easily on the bookstalls with any of its contemporaries.

Of course, it is the contents which count. And in a certain puzzling sense, these do not seem to proclaim it as a first issue either. No editorial manifesto setting forth the purpose of the book, naming the dragons that are going to be slain, or pleading anxiously for the reader's continued loyalty.

The title page is on Page 1, the table of contents on Page 3, and on Page 5, the first article appears, an essay by the English writer William Plomer. It is as if The Malahat Review had always existed: no fanfares, drums and cymbals, just the familiar variety of literary forms peculiar to reviews of this sort, essays, poetry, short stories, a playlet, and the illustrated critique of an artist's work (Henry Moore). All the feel of an established quarterly review is here.

And yet there is something curious. It may seem uncharitable if my first reaction on skipping through the book is: "Why?" Not: Why should the University of Victoria publish a literary quarterly, for I see no reason why it shouldn't if it wants to, and for more reasons than prestige; but — why this selection of pieces, estimable as some of them are?

With two exceptions, I look in vain for anything which might connect the contents with students or faculty at the University of Victoria. This is clearly not an oversight, but a policy — doubtless the policy of "choosing the best" and of making The Malahat Review a quarterly which would interest readers anywhere in the English-speaking world.

As an aim, this is praiseworthy and ambitious. And since The Malahat Review does not espouse an editorial point-of-view, nor feel itself bound to reflect the work of local writers and critics, it is clearly setting itself in competition with the best of its kind: The London Magazine, the Paris Review, etc. This is pretty rich company. Both the aforementioned have not only a considerable financial bargaining power but also exist in a ready-made climate of editorial influence.

My fear is that having taken for itself this aim, The Malahat Review is going to suffer in comparison, and that it is going to have the look — as this first issue has the look — of being not-quite-the-best. Amid some material of genuine interest, there is the feeling that much of its contents results from having sent many letters to many sources, getting in return a number of pieces which were rejected elsewhere. In a book which looks so handsome and so established, the contents seem uneven and arbitrary.

Still, there are good things: there is a real discovery in a short play by the Irish writer George Fitzmaurice, a contemporary of Yeats and Synge who lived until 1963. His "The Toothache" is a genuine piece of Irish comedy, as naive as a children's pantomime, but full of robust masculine humor.

And the short story, "In Line for Lemonade," by the Latvian-born American Andrew Fetler, is a slight but deft tale of an expatriate scholar-writer coming to terms with himself and with America. There is an interesting reminiscence by Ruthven Todd of the painter Miro, and a useful account, well-illustrated, of Henry Moore's recent work, including his "Archer," acquired a few months ago by the City of Toronto. Critically, there is a thoughtful review of the work of the American poet Theodore Roethke by Robin Skelton, one of the editors, and a piece of "literary criticism" by Frank Kermode in the university vein — after all, this is a university review — a manner which I find increasingly less relevant to the understanding of literature.

I am less sure how valuable is the selection of letters by D. H. Lawrence to his old friend Koteliansky (even our contemporary passion for documents cannot make letters as humdrum and domestic as these — "You will go straight across by the Bakerloo, I suppose" — more interesting than they are), or the "worksheets" of John Betjeman for one of his inconsequential poems. There is an unfortunate sense with these and other pieces that they have been included because they represent the "big guns" of modern literature — well, Lawrence, if not Betjeman.

Still, if its contents are not always up to the package, the result is one in which the university can take pride. Its superb job of printing has helped it to an auspicious debut. Personally, I would like to see The Malahat Review lose some of its anonymity and be both a forum for good writing on an international scale and for the best critical and creative writing on this side of Canada.

COVER of the Malahat Review, first edition, is a promising start.

LOOKING AT BOOKS

Poll Puts Fiction in Front; Biography Is Close Second

By JOAN COLDWELL

One Victoria bookworm had time to enjoy 360 books last year; the average reader had to be content with 30 or 40.

Coldwell

These facts came to light in the answers to the questionnaire printed on this page two weeks ago. The poll of readers' tastes showed that fiction is, predictably, the most popular field, with biography close behind. Fifty per cent of the responses favored history and politics, and approximately 33 per cent were interested in books on religion and philosophy. Drama, art and poetry appealed to only 20 per cent. Many readers expressed an interest in travel books and natural history, and there were repeated requests for reviews of mystery and spy novels.

It seems that many people buy books for themselves but few receive them as gifts. There's much borrowing from friends and, above all, from the public library. Several people said that they buy a book only after they have first read the library copy. Reviews apparently stimulate interest in the books discussed, whether or not they give a favorable verdict.

Our thanks to all who responded to the questionnaire with such information and a good deal of helpful comment. As a result of the survey, increased coverage will be given to fiction and biography and we shall, as space permits, attempt to meet the more specialized requests and experiment with some of the new ideas.

These included suggestions for quizzes, articles on books published several years ago, guidance on new children's books and brief studies of the development of individual authors. We were warned against being stuffy and over-intellectual, and we shall try to oblige.

Today's page features a new publication from the University of Victoria. Sponsored by the University, edited by two English department professors and printed by the Morriss Printing Company, The Malahat Review is a local production, but it is designed for an international audience. Subscriptions and contributions have already come in from behind the Iron Curtain. The editors, John Peter and Robin Skelton, have ranged widely in their search for varied material but their program is not a random one.

Mr. Skelton feels that the magazine "breaks new ground", especially in its regular printing of short plays for which there are at present few openings, and in its plan to present a series of poets' worksheets which will document the different ways a poem may develop. Another novel feature is their art supplement, designed to include sculpture, drawing, photography and painting.

The Review will be published quarterly at $1.25 a copy; a year's subscription costs $5.00. Local support has already been very strong.

●

With this project the university enters the highly competitive field of the quarterly reviews. We felt that it would be interesting to solicit opinions about it from people established in the world of periodical publications. Offered here are the comments of an editor from the east and of a west-coast writer, together with our best wishes to the staff of The Malahat Review for its continued success.

History Volume Is Fun Reading

By Paul Murray Kendall, THE YORKIST AGE, W. W. Norton and Co. Inc., New York, 1966 illustrated, 524 pages; $7.50.

Reviewed by S. W. Jackman

One of the very legitimate complaints of the average reader, and most of us usually are in this category at least part of the time, is that most scholars simply cannot write readable books.

This charge is unfortunately all too true; somehow, there seems to be no relationship between professional knowledge of a subject and literary accomplishment.

Therefore, it is all the more gratifying when a professional historian has an ability to write. Paul Kendall is to be congratulated in his newest volume on the 15th century. This book is good history and it is also good reading.

English history for most persons tends to be concentrated on particular phases. The Norman conquest is one, the Crusades and Richard Coeur de Lion is another, the reign of Henry V is another and then there is a gap until the fascinating Tudor family succeed to the throne.

The Wars of the Roses, the Yorkist kings and their world are mentioned en passant largely as a tiresome period between the glamourous medieval world and the exciting Tudor age.

What is so often disregarded is that the Tudors did not originate everything and that all was not black for the previous half century to their accession.

Mr. Kendall has proceeded with skill, wit and style to unveil this overly neglected epoch of English history.

He does not give a history of kings "in orders categorical," he does not list acts of parliament and he does not use statistics, he deals with people.

It is a book that cannot fail to interest anyone who is concerned about another age. Only the most carping of critics — a true "dry-as-dust" pedant—could complain about this volume. The book is imaginative and absolutely alive; it may be read as a whole or dipped into casually but without doubt it will soom be read in its entirety.

Moreover, it is good enough to be re-read time and again; this is a compliment few books receive or deserve, and this one merits an appreciative audience which it will not disappoint on any level.

Canada's Top Painter

MORRICE, by Kathleen Daly Pepper (Clarke, Irwin) $4.50.

Reviewed by Tony Emery

James Wilson Morrice, by common consent of those best able to judge, is Canada's greatest painter to date. He was for 30 years a familiar figure on the art scene in Paris, where he chose to make his home between travels. At his death in 1924, at the relatively early age of 59, friends and contemporaries — Matisse, Bonnard, Vuillard, Marquet, Somerset Maugham, Clive Bell and Roger Fry among them — testified to his achievement, his stature, and their sense of loss.

The late Donald Buchanan produced the first — and so far the only — scholarly biography of Morrice in 1936, but it was hardly the definitive work, which still awaits an author. Until that day comes, Kathleen Daly Pepper's slight but painstaking compilation from the secondary sources will serve to introduce you to this outstanding painter.

Well-illustrated — seven of the 14 plates are in color commendably faithful to the delicate originals — and sensibly bound and printed, it is a work which I hope will reach a wide audience. It would be encouraging to see Morrice become as celebrated at home as he has been, for 50 years, abroad.

Magazine Standard 'Above Mediocrity'

Reviewed by Kildare Dobbs

The newest Canadian literary magazine identifies itself as "an international quarterly of life and letters."

That "international" looks ambitious (and is, of course), though one suspects what it implies in the context of Victoria is that the editors don't want to admit they live here. Still, the first issue of The Malahat Review, an elegantly produced publication of the University of Victoria, does offer stories, essays, poems from Britain, Europe, Asia and the U.S.

The standard is well above mediocrity and one story at least is memorable. By Andrew Fetler, a U.S. citizen of Latvian origin, it presents vividly the exiles's feeling that the New World's gold is fairy gold; in his new setting he's not quite genuine himself.

The same sense of dislocation and lack of confidence permeates the review's editorial policy: unsure of their ground, the editors are playing it safe. An article about Henry Moore (with 12 pages of photographs); an autobiographical essay by William Plomer; a dull "sensitive" travel-piece by Maria Kuncewicz, who feels what everyone ought to feel about Seville; some disregarded letters of D. H. Lawrence to his friend S. S. Koteliansky; tidy poems from all over; Ruthven Todd on Miro; a belated Irish one-acter about peasants; a sound essay by Frank Kermode, editor of Encounter; some worksheets of John Betjeman's; and a couple of cautious reviews by the local academic talent.

●

Crumbs from the children's table, then. One is uncomfortably reminded of that London bus Victoria keeps for tourists. A new magazine, even from a university, should be bolder and more contemporary that this. The editors are John Peter and Robin Skelton, assisted by Andrew Carpenter, Tony Emery, Gracia Seal and they're advised by Frank Kermode (U.K.) and Carolyn Kizer (U.S.A.). Now that they've wet their toes, perhaps they'll take courage and plunge into the deep end of the international pool.

Kildare Dobbs edits the Toronto magazine Saturday Night.

CUPID MISTAKEN

As after noon, one summer's day,
Venus stood bathing in a river,
Cupid a-shooting went that way,
New strung his bow, new filled his quiver.

With skill he chose his sharpest dart:
With all his might his bow he drew:
Swift to his beauteous parent's heart
The too well-guided arrow flew.

"I faint! I die!" the goddess cried:
"O cruel, could'st thou find none other,
To wreck thy spleen on? Parricide!
Poor Cupid sobbing scarce could speak;

Like Nero, thou hast slain thy mother."
"Indeed, Mamma, I did not know ye:
Alas! how easy my mistake?
I took you for your likeness, Cloe."

Matthew Prior, 1664-1721.

'LIKE A YEAR'S CONTINUTY OF LI'L ABNER'

Berton Missed Beat in Cool World

THE COOL, CRAZY, COMMITTED WORLD OF THE SIXTIES, by Pierre Berton. McClelland and Stewart. $5.95.

Reviewed by P. E. Heron

This book is made of slightly edited transcripts of Pierre Berton's popular CBC television interview show.

The people he interviews are themselves interesting, like Ray Bradbury and Lenny Bruce, or, like Marguerite Oswald and Jean Shrimpton, they stand near the centre of interesting public events.

But arresting people and phenomena do not form a book. Some pattern, deduced from within the whole subject, or imposed upon it by an informing sensibility, or a combination of both methods, must determine the selection and order of materials, and, consequently, their meaning.

In the preface, Berton deduces the intellectual apparatus which supports his book from his observations of the sixties.

This is an "interim report" about a decade characterized by the involvement" of youth, or the "New Concern," and by the "New Frankness" about self and sex, both abetted, if not caused by, the peculiarly intimate qualities of television.

To say that the unanalyzed assumptions here are silly is no very grave charge against the middlebrow journalist, trapped in a present moment where, for example, the Freudian, Kierkegaardian, Marxist sources of these attitudes are irrelevant and foggy.

However, the charge tells against the book's design; it is not a coherent report of pop culture, but an unanalyzed chunk of it; raw material for the future historian of culture perhaps, like a year's continuity of "Li'l Abner."

If not as analyst then, Berton as interviewer ought to show us how each interview fits into one whole.

●

His view ought to illuminate, as from a single source of light, the matter at hand, but it does not. Perhaps he has edited himself too much out of the transcripts. Surely his view of his subjects is often condescending or false. The best interviews are those with his intellectual inferiors whom he can manipulate into categories determined by moral and social attitudes hoary well before the sixties.

A young, unmarried mother becomes a nineteenth-century fallen woman; Marguerite Oswald (in a brilliant interview), a Clytemnestra-Jocasta of the sort once popularized by Philip Wylie.

●

Such condescension has its place among those whose prejudices it tickles. But when Berton says of Lenny Bruce that he "attacked the most sacred taboos of Judaeo-Christian society: those short explosive words that are the commonly accepted shorthand for longer, more euphemistic phrases dealing with matters sexual," he does more than condescend; he falsifies Bruce.

The words at issue are verifiably not "the most sacred taboos" for heaven's sake, of any society, nor are they "shorthand", but precisely the reverse; euphemisms are ephemeral cryptograms, and that is part of Bruce's point. Berton plainly thinks of Bruce as merely a piece of titillating copy.

An explanation of such intellectual tinsel may lurk among yet unassessed cultural paraphernalia, but this book provides no justification for itself.

Phil Heron teaches English at the University of Victoria.

CERTIFICATION BIDS REJECTED BY BOARD

The Labour Relations Board has turned down two applications for certification at the Gold River pulp mill but a third union's bid is still under investigation.

Rejected were the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada. Reason given in both cases was that at the date of application "less than a majority of the employees in the unit were . . . members in good standing."

The International Woodworkers of America is seeking to vary its certification to include pulp workers. If successful, this would be the first time the IWA has gained a foothold in this segment of the forest industry.

Immediate Start On Model Village

DUNCAN—First stages of the Cowichan Indian band plan to develop a model village and shopping centre at Somenos reserve are to be started immediately.

The band council announced after a general meeting that work will begin on improvements to existing roads and water systems are to be installed.

The development plan is the work of Robert Williams, town planning consultant, Vancouver.

For the first time, Cowichan Indian band is to be directly involved in, and participate in, preparation of the five-year forecast of local agency estimates.

These estimates cover agricultural, housing, water, sewer and roads development.

The band council will debate the estimates at a special meeting Jan. 27 and complete recommendations at a joint meeting with Ronald Sampson, agency superintendent.

Louise Underwood, band secretary, announced this week a forthcoming visit by Reg Kelly, son of the late Rev. Peter Kelly.

He will visit Cowichan recreation hall Feb. 24 and speak about his recent tour among the Maoris and Polynesians.

Mr. Kelly's tour was sponsored by the B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society.

No Danger Of Floods On Reserve

DUNCAN — After three days and nights of rain Cowichan Indians living along Mission Road are faced with the prospect of evacuating their homes.

But Abraham Joe said today: "My neighbors have decided to stay put in their homes this time no matter what happens."

Three families from Mission Road evacuated in December when a river dam broke and flood water invaded their property cutting them off from supplies and their children from school.

Tzouhalem Road at Koksilah Flats was temporarily closed Friday when flood water ran over it about six inches deep.

E. C. Bolin, civil defence coordinator, said Friday: "There is no immediate danger to persons or property but if we get much more rain the situation could change quickly."

There was overnight rain but the skies are clear today.

In three days the Cowichan district has had five inches of rain but there has been no combination of high tides and runoff of snow to bring a repetition of the December floods.

Cowichan Lake rose 14 inches in a 48-hour period but there is still a wide safety margin.

Club To Build New Health Unit

LAKE COWICHAN — The Kinsmen Club here has undertaken to sponsor building of a new health unit.

Preliminary plans have been drawn up and are awaiting approval of the Central Vancouver Island Board of Health.

Gordon Loutet of Lake Cowichan Kinsmen Club said today total cost of the new building is estimated at $45,000.

He said about $20,000 would have to be raised locally.

At present the health unit uses an old, rented building in the village.

Mr. Loutet said a site for the new unit will depend on whether or not the forthcoming district school referendum passes.

He said: "If the referendum is approved there will be former school land available."

Chemainus Seeks Identity In Makeup of Municipality

CHEMAINUS—Nine years ago Chemainus tried to secede from North Cowichan municipality.

The attempt failed.

Today, Chemainus still covets an identity of its own.

But according to Stafford Andrews, president of Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce, the district will settle for a change in the name of the municipality.

He will propose a change when he makes his swan song address to the chamber at the installation dinner tonight.

Mr. Andrews will suggest the municipality be renamed Cowichan-Chemainus, or preferably Chemainus-Cowichan.

The retiring president says idea came from W. H. (Harry) Olsen, author of the local history, "Water Over the Wheel."

Mr. Olsen said Thursday: "After all, Chemainus is the meat in the municipal sandwich, with its heavy industrial assessment, and should be recognized."

Reeve Donald Morton said: "I think it must be a joke on Mr. Andrews' part.

"I know many people in Chemainus would still like to secede from the municipality, but they would have to pull out with less than half the assessment.

"That would mean leaving the giant Crofton pulp and newsprint complex in North Cowichan.

"Chemainus people want the rest of the municipality to pull out and leave the big industrial assessment, including the Chemainus mill, to be spent among less people."

Your new tax form, explained.

We've re-designed everything to clear up a lot of confusion.

For one thing, we've separated the new tax guide from your return.

For another, we printed the return in two colours, buff and white, so you can't lose your place. We ask the questions on the buff part. You answer on the white.

We've expanded the Simplified Tax Table so 9 out of 10 of you can use it.

And we've attempted to make our questions easier to understand.

Then to make everything thoroughly clear, we've worked out a Tax Guide that explains it all, detail by detail, including any special problems you might have.

If that still doesn't untangle all the knots, we have an understanding tax man at your local District Taxation Office.

Call him if you need him.

You'll probably get this new, understandable Tax Form and Guide in the mail by the end of January.

Be careful not to lose it before you use it. It's your Personalized Form.

If you don't get a Personalized Tax Form in the mail, it's probably because you didn't file last year.

Or you are a new taxpayer.

Or we don't know your latest address.

You can pick up a new tax form at the post office this year. Fill it out and send it in.

And next year, we'll send a Personalized Tax Form to your home. Everything clear?

Mayor Urges B.C. Ferries To Retain Freight System

Mayor Hugh Stephen told Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors Friday he has asked assurance that existing freight handling arrangements by B.C. Ferries will be retained.

This was a reference to the apparent phasing-out of the drop-trailer system employed by trucking firms in which tractor units leave trailers aboard ferries for pickup on the other side of Georgia Strait.

The system has been criticized on grounds that it wastes loading time and results in less space for private vehicles, which the ferry fleet was built to carry.

The mayor's letter to the ferry authority goes further and askes that freight-only ferry service be provided overnight if it is the intention to cut out daytime freight.

Freight-hauling firms find the drop-trailer system economic and convenient, providing the quickest possible means to move freight between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

Most of the traffic is from Vancouver to Victoria, with empty units going back.

But some of the produce required by the lower mainland moves from Saanich Peninsula farms, and some industries in the Greater Victoria area ship goods and materials to the mainland.

The chamber's concern is to encourage satisfactory service at reasonable rates, which involves a second issue.

If drop trailers are banned from the public ferry system, truckers will have to rely on private freight ferry service which at present makes only one daily round trip from Swartz Bay.

In addition, freight-hauling firms are seeking an increase in rates generally of between 6 and 12 per cent, affecting Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands and the lower mainland.

Mayor Stephen told the directors that Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee is endeavoring to have "the most highly competent lawyer in the province" to present the case against an increase in freight rates.

HEARING DUE

A rate hearing will be held before the end of February by the B.C. Public Utilities Commission, which must decide whether an increase is justified.

Chamber president Courtney Haddock remarked:

"Our consumers are going to be hit a lot harder than they realize."

He referred to a 1 per cent federal sales tax increase, which has already affected consumer prices, as well as the proposed freight handling increase.

The chamber has received letters supporting its stand on freight rate increases from the local branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada, and Saltspring Island Chamber of Commerce.

Directors agreed to a suggestion from Fred Hawes that chamber members use discretion in the raising of prices.

Strike Action Voted By Workers at CGE

TORONTO (CP)—More than 8,000 members of the United Electrical Workers Union voted Friday night for strike action if Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. does not meet contract demands at 16 Ontario plants.

George Harris of Toronto, the union's national secretary-treasurer, said negotiations have been held since October but a settlement is still not in sight.

The 8,000 men work in the 16 General Electric plants at Toronto, Peterborough, Guelph, Barrie, Trenton and Brampton.

"There may be quite a bit of negotiating before a contract is signed," Mr. Harris said. "There's a very wide gap between that they'll give and what we'll take."

A union spokesman said 92 per cent of the membership cast ballots Friday night and 96 per cent favored possible strike action.

Union and company officials are to meet in Toronto Sunday with William Dickie, the Ontario government's chief conciliation officer.

A 350-man negotiating committee, which represents workers from all 16 plants, has the power to call a strike.

PRODUCTION CUTBACK BY FORD OF CANADA

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ford of Canada Ltd. said Friday it is going on a short work week next month to cut back passenger car production and try to bring North American inventories in line with demand.

The company said it will close on the four Fridays of February, reducing production by about 3,300 cars.

The cutback was seen as reflecting the drop in sales in the U.S., since Ford's Canadian sales have continued strong. The parent Ford company in the U.S. also has used short work weeks to adjust inventories.

PRICES COMMITTEE

High Construction Costs Questioned

OTTAWA (CP) — Sen. David Croll suggested this week that extra costs have entered construction to less benefit for the customer than in any other industry.

The Ontario Liberal senator, co-chairman of the Senate-Commons committee on consumer prices, asked representatives of the Canadian Construction Association why building techniques in central Europe seem to be more advanced than in Canada.

Other senators and MPs obliged the association to turn its appearance before the committee into a defence of rising construction costs.

The group said costs of material and labor are up. The calibre of construction was improving and this was bound to be more expensive. Overhead costs were rising and pension plan contributions and sales taxes had been increased.

'DISTORTED'

Mark Stein of Montreal, national vice-president of the CCA, also sought support from the Economic Council of Canada, whose third annual review suggested that statistics on construction costs were somewhat distorted. They did not account fully for changes in the efficiency of the industry.

In its brief, the CCA said the economy is ready for government measures to stimulate the construction industry.

"Stretch-out" construction policies applied by government to prevent economic overheating were welcome.

The CCA brief said the construction industry is Canada's largest, carrying out works with an estimated value of $11,000,000,000 in 1966. So much of the Canadian economy relied on construction that its future volume and stability should be of prime concern.

Weather, business cycles and availability of crefit all affect the stability of the industry, the brief said.

It agreed with recommendations by the Economic Council of Canada that federal construction programs be better co-ordinated, with planning three to five years ahead on construction outlays, and with better cooperation between federal and provincial government levels.

Grain Backlog At Vancouver Near An End

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain shipments through Vancouver should be back on schedule by the end of January, an official said Friday.

An average of about 600 prairie grain boxcars are being unloaded daily here and the backlog of ships waiting in the harbor for grain has been reduced, said Bill Riddell, chairman of the Pacific Grain Transport Committee.

A dispute involving longshore foremen last November tied up B.C ports for three weeks and virtually halted grain shipments. Since the end of the dispute Dec. 9, 63 ships have cleared Vancouver with grain. About 12,000,000 bushels of grain has been shipped so far this month.

Lumber Sales Drop Reported

VANCOUVER (CP)—A drop in lumber sales of 70,000,000 board feet in 1966 has been reported by President L. L. G. Bentley of Seaboard Lumber Sales Ltd.

The firm markets about 60 per cent of B.C. waterborne lumber.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Banks, Golds in Spotlight

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Investors teetered between banks and golds this week.

Banks moved sharply higher at the beginning of the week and then golds took the play away at the end.

Meanwhile, Canada's major stock markets may have been losing some of their zip—but experts weren't sure this meant the end of the New Year upswing or just preoccupation with specialty issues.

As a result the Toronto industrial index, the key indicator of the market's performance, only managed a 2.17 gain to 158.88.

The Bank of Montreal set the stage when it announced a proposed five-for-one stock split effective if the proposed Bank Act becomes law.

Other banks are expected to follow.

The bank also announced it would raise its quarterly dividend to 60 cents from 55.

However, the following day investors were given a jolt on unconfirmed reports that the United States is looking into legislation which could result in limiting Canadian banks' operations in the U.S.

BANKS CLIMB

At the week's end, Montreal had climbed 3 to 59, Imperial-Commerce 3½ to 64½, Toronto-Dominion 2 to 63, Royal 1½ to 74 and Nova Scotia 1 to 67½.

Golds attracted investors and speculators late in Thursday's session after South Africa's finance minister said his country may have to close its gold operations unless there is an increase in the metal's price.

The result was a 7.18 gain on Thursday's gold index.

Then, France abandoned its demands for an immediate increase in the price of gold. This caught the market by surprise.

Despite the news, the group advanced for the five-day period. Dome rose 1¼ to 43¾, Kerr Addison ⅞ to 12¾, Giant Yellowknife 70 cents to 9.55 and Campbell Red Lake ¾ to 22¾.

Beaver Lumber was the big industrial gainer, up 6¼ to 35¾. Brokers were unable to give any reason for the increase.

Levy moved up 2¾ to 17¾, Walkers 1¾ to 32⅛ and Distillers 1⅝ to 37.

Canada Cement tumbled 4 to 38. The company said 1967 profits may be lower.

Falconbridge dropped 3¾ to 88¼ and Canadian Breweries ⅜ to 7¼.

COPPER UP

Noranda paced base-metals higher, up 2¼ to 56½. The company announced an increase in copper prices to 47¼ cents in Canada from 45.

Last week the company announced plans of a $122,000,000 takeover of Essex Wire Corp. of the United States.

Granby Mining climbed 7¼ to 45½ Friday. Officials could give no reason for the rise.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Wave of Pessimism Seizes Consumers, Survey Shows

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Anew wave of pessimism seems to have seized Canadian consumers, according to the periodic survey of Maclean-Hunter Research Bureau.

The only national survey of its kind polls representative Canadians quartery on their anticipated spending, their "buying mood" and their opinions on relative affluence in six months.

KENT

December's survey—of 1,273 persons interviewed personally —is about half as optimistic as the brightest days of 1965.

Canadian consumers "appear to be thoroughly depressed by tight money, rising prices and increased income taxes," the report says.

Persons planning to buy a house in "the next six months" have declined steadily since the end of 1965, accompanied by a shift in preference to older homes.

The current figure is 2.9 per cent compared with 4.9 per cent a year ago.

Most plans for buying major appliances such as washing machines, refrigerators and TV sets are down from the same period in 1965-66.

There is similar decline in plans to buy home furnishings.

But at the same time there is greater indication of automobile purchases, much of it by teenagers, and a steady level of major vacation plans.

Fewer persons feel they are better off today than they were six months earlier—the proportion being at its lowest of the past two years.

And in looking six months ahead, 22.6 per cent feel they will be in better financial position, or 5 percent fewer than a year ago, and 5 per cent said they will be worse off in six months' time against 2 per cent last year.

★ ★ ★

According to another respected survey, by the Financial Post, more disposable income was saved by Canadians last year than would be expected.

The reasoning is that wages went up more quickly than prices—although the latter have not been far behind—with the result that money was either banked or invested at a greater rate.

Junior Achievement week begins Monday and will be marked locally with a two-night display 7-9 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday in the program's workshops above 719 Yates.

The public is invited to see what selected high school youngsters can turn out on a business basis, advised by junior executives of four Victoria firms.

Teen-aged participants form their own "factories," boards of directors and executive management, sell shares, market products and liquidate assets before the end of school term.

There will be lectures, films, charts and text material employed in teaching candidates.

Mr. Longanecker, a prize-winning public speaker, was a field manager for Fuller Brush before coming to Canada. He is now an agent for Seaboard Life Insurance on Vancouver Island.

Recent mention of prospective B.C. coalfield development by a number of new companies interested in the Japanese market gets support from the chairman of Dominion Coal Board.

J. Watson McNaught, in Montreal, said Japanese industry is "intensely interested" in expanding its imports of coal from Western Canada.

It is understood most of the local interest is in developing bituminous coal for coking purposes, presumably for the Japanese steel industry.

A Canadian centennial project with a different twist was unveiled here Friday by National Trust, which commissioned Toronto artist Walter Coucill two years ago to paint Canada's distinctive provincial and territorial flowers in their natural settings.

A display of full-sized reproductions was shown in the Union Club and samples of small lithographed sets given to special guests. The sets are to be sold during the year at National Trust offices across the; nation.

Originals of the 12 paintings will be presented to the government of Canada, possibly to hang in the National Gallery, and the full reproductions will be given to the governments of the provinces.

National Trust thinks this is the first time such a project has been undertaken on such a scale.

But a month ago the rival Royal Trust distributed a calendar for 1967, on the back of which is a set of 12 pictures of provincial and territorial flowers, from B.C. dogwood to Yukon fireweed and Newfoundland pitcher plant, just like National's but without the landscape setting.

Appliance Sales Show Big Increase

TORONTO (CP)—Despite talk of consumer caution, sales of major appliances last year in Canada rose by almost 10 per cent to 1,744,000 units, the Canadian Appliance Manufacturers Association has reported.

The association put no dollar value on the sales, but one industry official uaid it would represent more than $300,000,000. In 1965 sales totalled 1,591,000 units.

The association said seven of the 11 appliances rated as major purchases showed significant increases.

Biggest jump came in automatic dishwashers, with 47,000 sold in 1966 compared with 35,700 the previous year—a 31.7 per cent increase.

The next biggest gain was made by food freezers, up 25.8 per cent to 185,000 from 147,000.

Some dealers have suggested the increase in freezer sales was due to consumer worries about rising food prices.

SALES WERE HIGHER

The association said freezer sales were up almost 50 per cent in the last three months of 1966 compared with the similar 1965 period—a possibleendication that the furor in Ottawa over food prices in that period has led many persons to buy freezers.

Other appliances showing major sales increases also reflect the importance of features that a few years ago were considered luxury.

Automatic washer sales rose 14.3 per cent to 222,000 from 194,000, but wringer washer sales declined 2.2 per cent to 215,000 units from 220,000.

Electric dryer sales were up 13.5 per cent to 203,000 units from 178,700.

37½-HR. WORK WEEK LABOR BOARD RULING

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Labor Relations Board ruled Thursday that Okanagan carpenters should have a 37½-hour work week even though they signed a contract for a 40-hour week.

The board ruled invalid a contract signed by representatives of four Okanagan carpenters' union locals and contractors. The ruling said the Okanagan locals are bound by the same agreement signed by the remaining 25 locals in B.C. which provides for a 37½-hour week next October.

Japanese Firm to Hunt Copper

TOKYO (Reuters) — Mitsui Mining and Smelting Co., a leading Japanese non-ferrous metal smelter, is preparing to set up a joint venture with a Canadian mining interest to launch full-scale prospecting for copper in B.C., a spokesman said Friday.

Mitsui said it will soon file an application with the Japanese government for approval of the project.

The Japanese firm has been surveying a copper body 20 miles southeast of Dease Lake in northwestern B.C., on a contract with Lytton Minerals Ltd., and recently agreed to exercise its prospecting option, it said.

The new joint firm, to be named the Dease Lake Co., is to be established in British Columbia with an authorized capital of about $2,500,000, Mitsui said.

If prospecting work proves successful, Mitsui said, it can import about 1,000 tons of copper monthly from the mine.

Wonder how many people recognize the work of Journeymen Technicians at Victoria Maple Leaf hockey games?

Not many we'll venture to guess.

Unlike the hockey players who ply their trade in full public view, the plumbing and heating specialists more often than not hide their technical skills.

But that ice surface at the Arena doesn't just happen.

Below it there is a virtual maze of pipes containing the ingredients required to make ice, keep ice hard—or melt it quickly if the ice surface needs to come out to make way for a road show.

Those pipes were not installed by amateurs, neither are they maintained or repaired by amateurs.

The installation and the maintenance is in the hands of skilled union workmen highly trained in the intricacies of every type of plumbing or heating equipment.

You may never need an ice surface, but the betting is that before too long you will need the services of a highly trained technician.

Billy Faced Racing Hazards With Honesty

By DOUG PEDEN

Billy Foster never tried to fool himself.

He knew that every time he stepped into a racing car death was looking over his shoulder. He talked about it freely, but he never brooded over the possibility of disaster.

"The danger we take is part of our job," he said recently. "It's my job and I can't do anything else.

"I don't try to kid myself," he told me shortly before he stepped into big-time racing three years ago. "I know that any race could be my last one, but I try not to take foolish chances and I worry most about the other drivers.

"You're always nervous before a race," he added. "Anybody who says he's not is lying. But once that flag drops, I sort of relax and just think about winning."

Billy didn't have to worry about other drivers Friday when he took his stock car out for a practice spin in preparation for Sunday's $85,000 race at Riverside, Calif. He didn't have to think about winning, and he probably wasn't even nervous.

He was all by himself when his 1967 Dodge Charger crashed into a retaining wall at an estimated 135 to 140 miles per hour. The popular, 29-year-old Victoria driver was killed instantly.

Foster's death came as both a shock and a surprise to his friends, who had long marvelled at Billy's great ability in handling a car. It was, as they suspected, not a miscalculation. Brake failure was blamed for the crash.

Bing Foster, a long-time friend but no relation of Billy's, guessed right.

"I can't understand what happened," said Bing when he first heard of the fatality. "It seems to me it must have been mechanical trouble.

"The success of Billy's driving was largely because of his exceptionally fast reflexes," Bing added. "I have never seen a driver respond so quickly. It kept him out of trouble."

Reg Midgely, manager of Western Speedway and another close friend of the driver, said:

"He was one of the best. He never lived long enough to hit his peak. He had all the talents and he was the idol of every car racing enthusiast. Billy didn't find much luck down there, but he was doing what he wanted to do."

Geoff Vantreight, closely associated with Foster for many years, said: "I was certainly surprised. He was a smart driver and I didn't think he would ever get it."

Foster, who used to "borrow" his father's car occasionally when he was 13 to cover his early-morning paper route, was racing on the old Shearing track near Cobble Hill when he was 15, too young to drive on the highways.

He later competed at Western Speedway and eventually graduated to the Canadian American Modified Racing Association circuit, where he swept all major honors in 1963.

He jumped into big-time racing in the United States in 1965, becoming the first Canadian to qualify for the "500" in his first try. That year he was voted rookie-of-the-year in stock-car racing.

Foster, who gave up racing for two years after marrying his childhood sweetheart Beverly, later borrowed $2,000 to buy his first racing car.

He climbed rapidly from there and was as good as any driver in the country at piloting a machine around corners and through tight openings. Until Friday's fatal crash, Billy had never suffered a serious injury.

He is survived in Victoria by his wife and three children — Debra, William and Kelly.

Funeral services will be held in Victoria next week.

LOOKS AT SPORTS

"Shoot? I saw Bobby Hull miss six shots in one period. The other guys made the goalkeepers look good by firing right at them.

"I couldn't believe some of the passes they made. Six feet in front or three feet behind. They should watch the Russians. They might learn something.

"I can't recall watching the Canadiens play better. But I know this: let them skate like that — don't hit them—and they'll run you right out on the street, all-stars or no all-stars."

The foregoing is not a paid analytical broadcast of Montreal Canadiens' 3-0 conquest of the National Hockey League all-stars.

But it was solicited. And if it has critical overtones it is also authoriative.

Gordon "Duke" Keats has been out of hockey too long. But never away from it. Every chance he has he catches 21-inch hockey at the modest suite he shares with his wife Doris on Old Esquimalt Road.

The way Doris Keats tells it, the Duke is hardly a peaceful observer.

"He's in and out of his chair, bobbing and weaving, and hollering at the players and referees. Puts on a real performance."

You Don't Get Points Hitting Pads

That's understandable. When he played for Victoria Cougars Stanley Cup champions in 1925 when he was with Quebec and Boston and Detroit and Edmonton, Duke Keats always gave them their dollar's worth.

You don't get in the Hockey Hall of Fame because they liked the way you combed your hair or brushed your teeth. Performance not appearance was the criteria.

He would make an interesting addition to the crowds (?) at Victoria games, but he doesn't catch many.

In Duke Keats' day a pension was something railroaders received, but not hockey players. He and Doris "make out" on the federal monthly dole but they go light on caviar and nights out.

But the competitive fires never really burn out, not even when the shadows grow longer.

He can look at a Robert Marvin Hull, contemporary hockey's greatest scoring phenom, and wonder how he could miss the goal six times.

"I looked at the statistics," he said. "The All-Stars had 35 shots on goal. I'd like to know how many they had off the goal."

Keats put down his pipe, lifted his bulky frame out of a chair and pretending he was holding a hockey stick in his hands said: "I would come in on a goalie — I shot right-handed — and I would begin to fake. I've faked as many as 10 times. You hardly see that any more. Then I would look left and shoot right. And low. You don't get points hitting pads."

'Maybe' Passes Banned by Russians

When Keats talks about how to score goals he is not yacking though his cocked chapeaux.

Playing for Edmonton against Saskatoon on Jan. 23, 1922, he had his greatest night — eight goals. Five years earlier — Feb. 17, 1916, to be precise — he pumped in five goals for Toronto against Quebec.

Keats lives with the conviction that passing and positional play are ingredients for winning.

"Time and again Wednesday night I would see three players on one side. Howinhell can you work a passing play that way? Several times a player would pass without looking. I watched the international tournament at Winnipeg and I don't think the Russians ever did that. They never made 'maybe' passes. You know what I mean. 'Maybe' the winger will get it, 'maybe' he won't."

On the subject of hitting, Keats was emphatic.

"I'm not taking anything away from Canadiens," he said. "But it's hard to believe that the All-Star defencemen would let those pony skaters Toe Blake has fly all night without touching them.

"I'm not talking about chippy hockey. But rough hockey. When did you last see a good bodycheck?"

Keats had been reading a national weekly magazine. It lay on a table, opened at a page with a black, scowling headline: "Stop These Stupid Hockey Fights." Accompanying the narrative were photos of players in various stages of alleged malevolence.

They Filled House to Boo the Duke

Mostly they looked like graduates of Arthur Murray's School of Dancing, specialists in the Bear Hug.

The author, Jim Hunt, decried fighting on the grounds that hockey with its constant action doesn't need it.

"Oh, No?" Keats said in reply to a question. "Let me tell you something. I promoted hockey as well as played it. I know from attendance figures that after a fight you can be sure the next game the place will be jammed.

"When I played with Edmonton, Red Dutton was at Calgary. Often we would drop our sticks and go at it. They booed me every time I stepped on the ice at Calgary. But it was usually a full house that did the booing.

"One night at Calgary, Dutton and I had a real go. After the game I went back to the Palliser Hotel with my teammates, had something to eat and went to my room.

"About 1:30 in the morning I heard this awful noise in the hall. Sounded like somebody was dropping rocks.

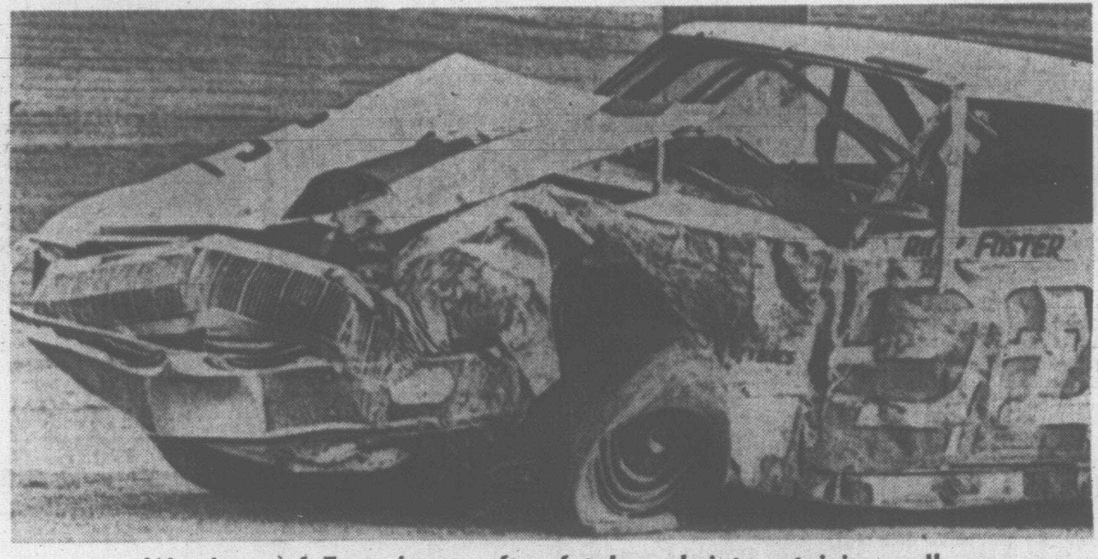
"I opened the door and there was Dutton. He had a sackful of beer but it was an old sack. Every few steps a bottle would slip through a hole and fall on the floor.

"Dutton was picking up the bottles. He saw me.

" 'Hi, old buddy,' he said. 'Thought you might like to share one with me'.

"The next night we went to Edmonton and fought again. Before 5,000."

Doris Keats smiled. "And after the game guess who came to our house? Red Dutton."



Wreckage of Foster's car after fatal crash into retaining wall.

Brake-Drum Failure Blamed For Foster's Crash Into Wall

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Racing driver Billy Foster of Victoria, whose skill never quite made up for his bad luck, was killed Friday in a crash while braving the danger he considered part of his job.

Foster, 29, died from massive head injuries when his car slammed into a retaining wall during a practice run for the Motor Trend Riverside 500 stock car race here Sunday.

His skill and love of the sport had earned him the United States Auto Club's rookie of the year honors in 1965, but his ill luck had kept him from becoming one of the world's leading drivers.

He was never unaware of the danger but took the view that it "is part of the job."

"It's my job, and I can't do anything else."

In 1965, he became the first Canadian to qualify for the 500-mile Indianapolis Memorial Day race. He dropped out on the 90th lap when a water line in his rear-engine Offenhauser burst.

He qualified again in 1966 and barely got over the starting line May 30 when he became involved in a 16-car pileup at the first turn.

No one was killed but one spectator suffered an injured back and 16 others suffered minor injuries from flying debris.

Car All By Itself, Going 135 mph

The chain - reaction crash occurred seconds after the pole car crossed the starting line. Cars skilled and crashed for 200 yards. It took an hour and 24 minutes to clear the track, after which the remaining 22 cars restarted in single file.

The U.S. Auto Club later ruled that no driver could be blamed for the pileup.

Foster placed ninth among the 10 qualifiers in Thursday's runs, averaging 105.297 miles an hour.

Foster suffered massive head injuries when his car slammed against a retaining wall as he approached turn No. 9 while travelling at an estimated 135 to 140 miles an hour.

Dr. Irving Omphroy, course physician, said the popular Canadian was killed outright.

His car, a 1967 model owned by Rudy Hoerr of Peoria, Ill., hit the wall as he started to turn to the right. The left side of the car slammed broadside with such force that all the sheet metal on that side was ripped off.

There was no car near his in Friday's smashup.

A spokesman said the apparent cause of the crash was brake drum failure. Foster started to brake on a mile-long straightaway where speeds of 160 m.p.h. are reached, but as he began to make the right turn, his car rammed broadside against the retaining wall.

The car struck with such impact that Foster's helmet hit the wall, inflicting the head injuries.

FAILED AT TURN

A spokesman for the track said Foster's car was equipped with specialized safety brake drums—common to racing stock cars—but that they apparently failed at the turn.

Foster was the second British Columbia driver to die racing in less than a year. Bob McLean, a Vancouver sports car driver, was killed when his racer caught fire at Sebring, Fla., last year.

Weather Weekend Spoiler

The sun came peeking through this morning, a trifle late to avert a weekend spoiled by the weather.

Because of saturated field conditions, the city parks department decided Friday to close the door on most of its fields to rugby and soccer.

All but three of Sunday's District League soccer matches have been postponed. Red Lions and Hourigan Kickers are to meet on Beacon Hill Park's lower field in a first division match at 2 p.m. In second-division games, also at Beacon Hill, Colony Inn plays Sidney (lower field) at 12:30 and University Norsemen face London Boxing (upper field) at 2.

Also affected by the week's heavy rains was the final round of the winter medal golf series. Scheduled to be played at Uplands, it was wiped out and the medal will be presented to pro Bill Wakeham, who built up a 12-stroke lead in the first two rounds.

DATES FOR LONGACRES

SEATTLE (AP)—Approval of a 64-day season at Longacres in 1967 has been announced by the Washington State Horse Racing Commission. The Seattle track is scheduled to open May 26 and close Sept. 4.

CROSBY TOURNAMENT

Three Double Bogeys But Jack Still Leads

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Winner of the U.S. Open, the Masters and the PGA Professional Golfers Association Tournament, big Jack Nicklaus surprised everyone, including himself, by taking a two-over-par on three straight holes in the Bing Crosby golf tournament Friday.

Even more amazing, Jack, who celebrates his 27th birthday today, leads the $104,500 tournament by two strokes.

"I can't recall ever getting three double bogeys in a row since I was 10 years old," the Ohio slugger commented after blowing six of his eight-stroke lead Friday in the gale winds at Cypress Point.

Big Jack finished with a one-over-par 73 and 36-hole total of 142 on a day when only three of the 168 professionals broke par. He's the only one under regulation figures at the halfway point.

Cyprus Point, Pebble Beach and Spyglass Hill each plays to par 72s, and by tonight all the professionals and their amateur partners will have toured all three.

PAR ON 18TH HELPS

A par at the 18th preserved Nicklaus's advantage over a lesser - known quartet at 144—Jerry Pittman, Jim Colbert, Steve Oppermann and Bob McCallister.

Meanwhile, Arnold Palmer wound up with a 75 and 149, saying the wind on the Pebble Beach ocean holes nearly blew him off his footing. U.S. Open champion Billy Casper had 74 at Spyglass Hill and 146. And Joe Carr, the unknown who led the first day with 68, disappeared again with an 82.

George Knudson of Toronto shot a 75 for a two-round total of 149. Bill Ezinicki, former National Hockey League player with Toronto Maple Leafs, carded a 78 for a 36-hole total of 150.

Equals World Record

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Millie Ignizio, a 20 - year - old left - handed bowler, rolled a three-game total of 792 Friday to tie the world woman's bowling record for a three-game series.

Miss Ignizio, whose father operates a bowling alley in Rochester, bowled ten-pin games of 256, 257 and 279 in the North Park Singles Classic League.

The International Bowling Congress at Columbus, Ohio, said Miss Ignizio tied the record held by Janet Harman of Norwalk, Calif., who rolled 792 Oct. 28, 1963.

Miss Ignizio is a professional bowler and has a 200 - plus average.

Seals' Series Key to Second For Leaf Club

Oakland Seals stumbled Friday, and now Victoria coach Frank Mario wants his Maple Leafs to pin the Californians for two more falls before they get a chance to recover.

"That could get us going for a good run at second," reasoned Mario.

Tripped 2-1 by Vancouver Canucks Friday, the Seals say hello to the Leafs at Memorial Arena tonight and then remain on hand for a return game Tuesday.

"This is a big series," Mario anticipates. "If we want to finish second, we have to win both."

The series also could put the Leafs in a proper frame of mind for a four-game swing to San Diego and Los Angeles next week.

Leafs will be buoyed by the return of wingers Bruce Carmichael and Gord Redahl. The latter returned to Victoria Wednesday after an emergency lend-lease visit to Rochester of the American League.

Because of a two-week wait regulation, Redahl was not eligible to play Wednesday, when Leafs fell 5-2 to Seattle Totems. He can dress tonight, although Mario hasn't decided on who will be his utility forward.

Mario said he definitely plans to start Carmichael, who missed the last two Victoria games because of an eye injury.

SHOWED SPEED

Carmichael, wearing a protective helmet, resumed skating Thursday and "looked good" in Friday's workout. He'll start on a line with Larry Keenan and Lou Jankowski.

Of some concern to Mario are minor injuries sustained by Rollie Wilcox and defenceman Sandy Hucul. Hucul skated well Friday despite a tender knee, while Wilcox hasn't missed a shift despite the fact he broke a toe last week.

First-period goals by defenceman Larry Cahan and veteran Larry Popein snapped Oakland's seven-game winning streak in Vancouver Friday. Forbes Kennedy scored Oakland's goal on a setup by Danny Belisle, the most sizzling Seal in recent weeks.

BLADES EXPLODE

Vancouver joined Oakland in second place as a result. Each have 44 points, seven more than Victoria and Los Angeles Blades.

The Blades, snapping a five-game skid, joined Leafs in fifth place by thumping first-place Portland Buckaroos 7-2 in Friday's only other game.

Mel Pearson and Tommy McVie each scored twice as the Blades erupted for five goals in the first period.

Val, Barbara Trip Second-Seed Duo

Val Kent and Barbara Ford took their turn Friday night in pushing the upset button in the city badminton championships at Cordova Bay Community Hall.

Unseeded by the draw committee when the annual tourney started, Barbara and Val slashed their way into the final round of the women's doubles event by eliminating the second-seeded Carol Gibson and Jean Wescott.

They will bid for the title tonight against Cordova Bay clubmates Ann Currie and Mary Jean Smith.

Another upset came in the veterans' doubles Friday when Reg Hoadley and Doug Boniface ousted defending champions Eric Hibberson and Jim Wells in three tense games. Hoadley and Boniface will oppose former champs George Lane and Bob Macmurchie in the final.

BETTER FORTUNE

Hibberson had better luck in the open men's doubles, teaming with Lane to defeat Russ Atkinson and John Meija to advance into tonight's final against defending champions Bob Hunt and Ed Hedley, winners over Lloyd Park and Jack Lequesne.

Hunt will also defend his men's singles crown against Ivor Goodmanson and Ann Currie will bid for the women's title against Diana Rogers.

In the mixed doubles final it will be Jean Wescott and Park attempting to retain their title against the challenge of Diana Rogers and Hedley.

Blanchard Gets Another Chance

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Atlanta Braves plan to give former New York Yankee slugger John Blanchard another shot at the major leagues this spring.

The 34-year-old Blanchard, used by the Yankees as a catcher, outfielder and first baseman, was given his outright release in 1965 by the Kansas Athletics.

Blanchard hit .305 and smashed 21 home runs for New York in 1961, his best season. He is expected to try for the first base job with the Braves.

Three Games Tonight For Saanichton Clubs

Three basketball games are scheduled tonight at Saanichton Agricultural Hall.

Saanichton teams will play in all three. The midget girls face Cordova Bay at 7 p.m., the bantam girls tackle Cordova Bay at 7:45 and the bantam boys meet Brentwood at 8:30.

KREGO HOT . . . . . . AS ALBERNI WINS

Macs Stopped by Start

ALBERNI—If Victoria Coffee Macs intend to reach the heights in the Inter - City Senior Men's Basketball League, they'll have to improve their break from the starting gate.

Mac's inability to start with a rush was re-emphasized again Friday night as Alberni Athletics rolled to a 70-53 victory over Victoria. Victory moved Alberni into sole possession of second, two points ahead of the Macs and Vancouver White Spots.

Alberni and Macs meet here again tonight.

The entire Victoria team managed only 19 points in the first half. Alberni's Don Krego managed almost as much (17) by himself as the A's built up a commanding lead.

"That first half has been killing us all season," said playing-coach Darrell Lorimer of the Macs. "I think we've outscored the opposition in only two of our nine games in the first half."

Although the Macs outplayed and outscored Alberni in the second half, Lorimer regarded the game as Victoria's "poorest of the season."

Lorimer led Victoria scoring with 18 points and the hot Krego topped Alberni with 21.

GLASGOW WILL BE COMING . . . . . . AND BERWICK FOLK WORRIED

Are Ye Nae Enthusiastic Aboot Scots?

BERWICK UPON TWEED, England (CP) — This old border bastion, one of the few walled towns in the United Kingdom, will have to weather another siege Jan. 28 when the mighty Glasgow Rangers tangle with the football Lilliputians of the second division, Berwick Rangers.

The soccer struggle recalls for romantics gallant bygone days when the forces of Scotland and England faced each other here — in the time of Cromwell, for instance.

Berwick became the military town of the Borders, with a militia of its own, a buffer between the two countries. The battle scars on centuries-old barracks tell their own silent story of long-past derring-do.

And now Berwick Rangers, whose ground — Shielfield Park — is in Northumberland, is the only English team in Scottish national competition. Let no one think the forthcoming game is a glamor affair. On the contrary, no one wanted it.

It results simply from the luck of the draw. On the eve of the cup draw in Glasgow, Dr. James T. Sadler, chairman of Berwick Rangers, declared:

"I hope we're not drawn against Glasgow Rangers. Last time, thousands of their supporters ran through the town, smashing windows and damaging cars. We don't need Rangers' money. I have to think of the good name of the town. We don't want you and your ghastly band of hooligans."

Berwick has known both Scottish and English rule. When the formal battles were over, the despoilers had their turn and the town remained under siege from sporadic raids.

Now the visored helmets have given way to the caps and tammies. The invaders will arrive not on horseback, as in the olden days, but by bus. Berwick, as of old, will have a defending "army" — English police — against the advancing Scots. Police reinforcements will be on hand from other English communities.

The draw matching mighty Rangers from the West and mouse-like Rangers from the East is regarded as an almost incredible coincidence. It caused local folk to recall the 1960 match between the same two teams. Trouble flared. Shop windows were smashed. Cars were overturned. Pilfering occurred in stores and pubs — perhaps not as bad as the old days. There were 30 arrests. Somebody had given permission for the pubs to remain open longer than usual.

"I will certainly oppose any extension this time," said Berwick Mayor R. H. Knox, a magistrate. "That was a big mistake last time, but it was done to be hospitable."

It will be "an all-ticket game with a limit of about 16,000," the Berwick Rangers board of directors announced after a hasty meeting.

And officials of Glasgow Rangers Supporters' Association travelled the 120 miles to Berwick on a "peace mission." Association secretary Robert Grubb reported:

"That has cleared the air. Now Dr. Sadler realizes that 99 per cent of our supporters are decent people."

Fullback's Goal Helps Champs

LONDON (CP) — Fullback Chris Lawler and inside forward Alf Arrowsmith today scored goals that sent defending champion Liverpool to the top of the English League soccer standings by a point over Manchester United.

Lawler levelled the score 1-1 against Southampton in the 23rd minute and Arrowsmith put Liverpool into a 2-1 lead in the 35th minute. The game ended without further scoring.

Manchester City and Manchester United played to a 1-1 tie. United went ahead in the seventh minute on a headed goal by centre-half Bill Foulkes from a corner by Jim Ryan. City equalled the score two minutes from time when United's Nobby Stiles, the halfback hero of England's winning World Cup team, headed the ball into his own goal.

TAKES TOP SPOT

Liverpool now leads the First Division with 37 points. Manchester United has 35 points from 26 games and Nottingham Forest 35 points from 27 games. Stoke City, Chelsea and Leeds United are locked on the 32-point mark.

The program calls for 42 matches.

Nottingham Forest earned a goalless draw at Newcastle—and so stayed in a challenging position. Newcastle's display suggested it will soon climb well clear of the foot of the First Division. At the moment Newcastle is second from the bottom. Blackpool is propping up the other 21 teams in division one.

Chelsea came back after a lean spell and scored three goals in 11 minutes through centre forward Tony Hateley, inside forward Tommy Baldwin and left winger Bobbie Tambling to defeat Aston Villa 3-1.

HIT BY BOTTLES

Sheffield United halted Stoke City's chances by winning 2-1 in a match at Sheffield that brought trouble in the crowd. Three soccer fans were taken to hospital with head injuries from flying bottles.

Leeds United remained in a challenging position on second-half goals from John Giles and Albert Johanneson to defeat Fulham 3-1.

Winger Cliff Jones and inside forward Jimmy Greaves scored two goals inside a minute to give Tottenham Hotspur a 2-0 victory over Burnley—a win that kept Tottenham within striking distance of the leaders.

Spurs, as Tottenham is known, now has 31 points, six behind pace-setting Liverpool.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Ringing right numbers in B.C. Telephone League at Town and Country Lanes was Dot McKinnon. Bowler for 15 years, Mrs. McKinnon spun 282-291-213—786 series to win women's fivepin award in 13th week of Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. She is now eligible for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs in May.

LEAVE THURSDAY

Vic High Tops With Reginans

Victoria High Totems have been seeded as the top out-of-province entry in the Centennial Invitational basketball tournament at Regina's Luther College next weekend.

Coach George Andrews' defending British Columbia champions are scheduled to leave for Regina next Thursday.

They'll play their first game Thursday at 4:55 p.m. (PST) against host Luther Lions, seeded fourth among the in-province entries.

Other out-of-province entries are, in order of seeding: Sundbury, Winnipeg and Montreal.

RAYMOND RESPECTED

Alberta will be represented by Raymond, and that team has been rated No. 1 in a bracket with the Saskatchewan teams — Regina Sheldon-Williams, Saskatoon Bedford and Luther.

Should Totems win their first game, they'll play either Saskatoon or Sudbury in the semi-final round next Saturday.

Totems and Oak Bay, entertaining mainland teams at Oak Bay Senior High, rolled to exhibition victories Friday. The Vics rallied for a 20-point output in the final quarter to clip North Vancouver 47-43 while the Bays whomped West Vancouver 51-30.

Teams switch rivals and move to Vic High for windup games tonight at 7 and 8:30.

Bob Burrows was Oak Bay's sparkplug with 16 points while Dexter Mason fired 21 for Totems.

Claremont made it 3-for-3 over the mainland by trouncing South Burnaby 70-39 in the Docker tournament at Esquimalt. Dave Tooby was the standout with 24 points for Claremont.

In a second game, St. Louis College tripped their Esquimalt hosts 32-18 as Mike Walker and Dave Mulcahy each contributed 12 points. Bob DeCosta was Dockers' top gunner with 13.

Mount View Hornets had a busy day. They played two games, and won two. Hornets swamped Sooke 57-21 in an afternoon clash and then dumped Evening Optimists' Bantam team 44-39 at night.

NORTH VANCOUVER (43) — Al Moore 1, Norm Leavoy, Jim Kardash 11, Dave Ewert, Dan Calli, Lou Klassen 8, Rod Martin 3, Bob Nelson 13, Bob Clark, Rick Roberts, Bob Trainor 7, Brent Mahood.

Cellar-Dwellers Beat Combos 5-0

A centre and a goalie took their turns as the men-of-the-hour Friday as the top and bottom clubs recorded victories in Esquimalt District Hockey League at the Sports Centre.

Centre Ted Sarkissian scored four goals and set up the other two as front-running University of Victoria Vikings clubbed Tudor Monarchs 6-2. The six-point spree put Sarkissian back in the lead in the individual scoring race.

Goaltender Bud Swanson chalked up his first shutout—and only the second in league play this year—as last-place Stocker's jolted Armed Forces Combos 5-0 in the first half of the weekly doubleheader.

Sabotaging the Spectacles Was Capital Idea

The 28th Legislature of British Columbia salutes the founders of our province in a history-making visit to New Westminster on Tuesday. To enable its readers to appreciate better the struggles of the past, recalled by the occasion, the Times devotes this page to the story of the origins of representative government here.

Assistance given by the B.C. Archives in compilation of the material used is hereby acknowledged.

By Pete Loudon

When British Columbia's legislators meet Tuesday in New Westminster it will be a temporary visit.

They'll be back in the Legislative Buildings here the next day.

But if it hadn't been that 100 years ago one of our parliamentary fathers had a drink too many, if it wasn't for the fact that his spectacles were put out of commission by a scheming deskmate, New Westminster might still be the capital of B.C.

When the legislative council assembled at New Westminster on January 24, 1867, it was the first time that representatives of B.C. as we know its boundaries today, sat down together.

There were only 22 members and a governor then—and two of them were absent—and they met in a former barracks for unmarried soldiers in the Royal Engineers' camp at Sapperton. According to notes left by Victoria representative Dr. J. S. Helmcken, the building was known as "Noah's Ark".

'A Pimple on Face of Creation'

He didn't like New Westminster. Few Victorians did. They called it "a stream of liquid mud" and a "pimple on the face of creation". New Westminster folks on the other hand, disliked Victoria. They said it was located on a frogpond.

Nub of their dispute really was the pending decision of where the capital of the newly united colonies of British Columbia and Vancouver Island would be located.

Dr. J. S. Helmcken, who had been Speaker of the assembly at Victoria for 10 years, was ready to use his eloquence to win the capital for Victoria. In this he was supported by William George Cox, a Cariboo gold commissioner, and opposed by a Nanaimo magistrate, a former sea captain, William Hales Franklyn.

Governor Frederick Seymour busied the legislators with financial and other matters for two months before allowing the problem of a capital to arise. And then he plumped for New Westminster. Dr. Helmcken ignored him and introduced a motion calling for Victoria to be the capital.

There was a nine-and-a-half-hour debate. Amor de Cosmos, the Victoria newspaper publisher, was active in the fight for the Island. But the crucial speech fell to Franklyn.

Little Nips Spelled Disaster

Helmcken's reminiscences tell what happened.

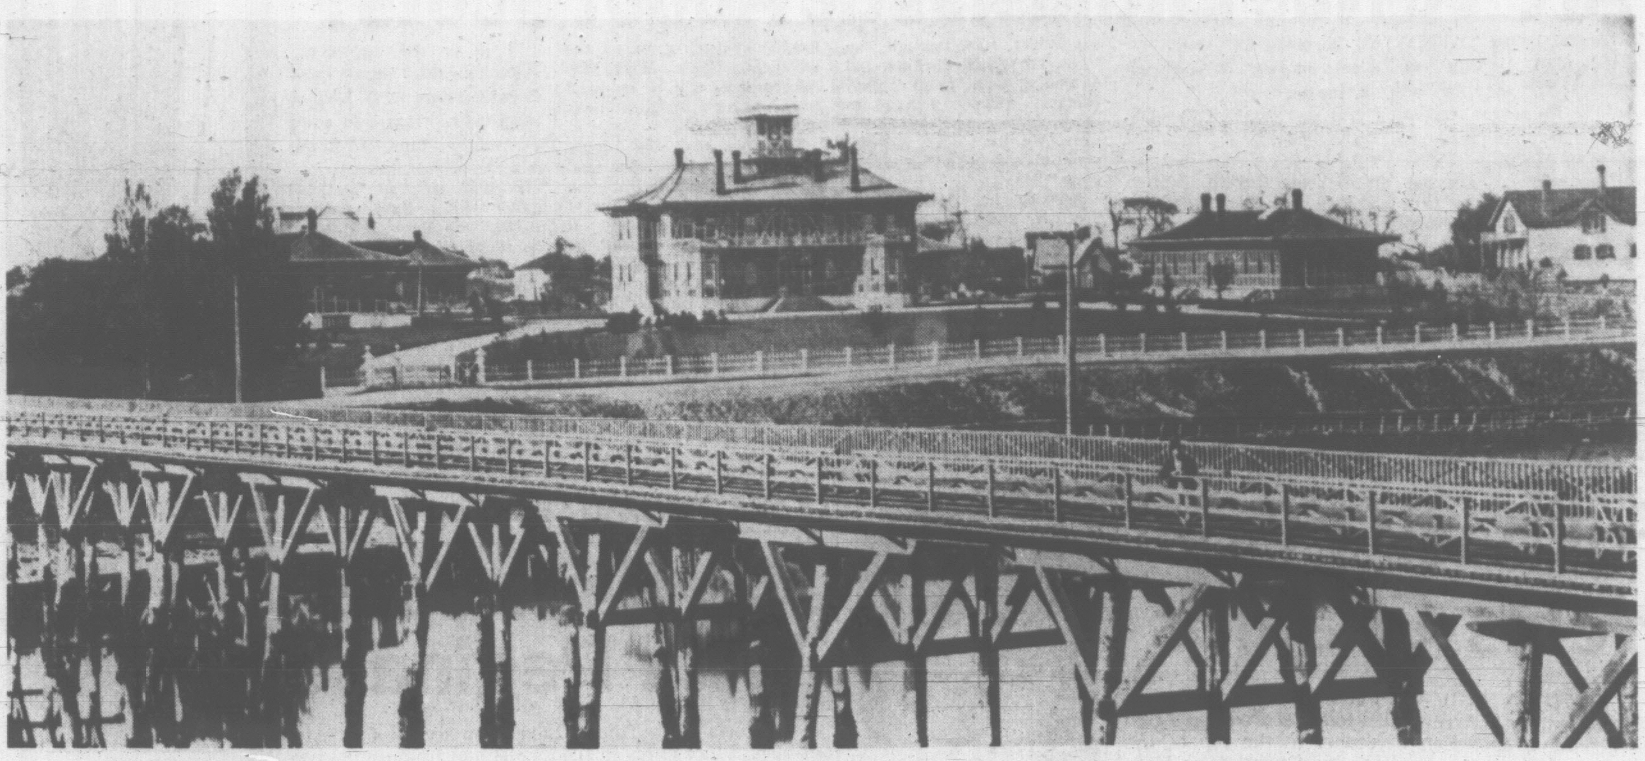
Franklyn found Noah's Ark cold. He made frequent visits to the "attachment" for warming libations and when the time came for him to read his speech he was "a little shaky".

Cox, seated beside Franklyn, took advantage of the situation to shuffle Franklyn's notes. Franklyn read his opening three times.

Then, "during an instant when he (Franklyn) laid his spectacles on the table, Cox pressed the glasses from their frames".

When Franklyn put them on again, he could see nothing. His speech faltered and died and there was great hilarity among his colleagues. Helmcken moved a recess. When the House re-assembled Helmcken objected to Franklyn making a second speech and a vote was taken. Victoria won, 13 to 8.

That didn't end the matter. There were further debates before removal of the capital to Victoria was settled upon. But Helmcken had already won the telling battle of the war even though it continued into the next spring when a final vote was taken.



Across the bridge, which now is a causeway, in Victoria, sat the Bird Cages, our first provincial legislative buildings. The Vancouver Island colonial assembly sat here. In 1868, after its formation in New Westminster the year previous, the British Columbia colonial legislative council moved here. And in 1871 they became the home of the first provincial legislature. The present buildings claimed the site in the 1890s.

* * *

The Queen's birthday, 1868, was set for proclamation and the transfer took place the next day. The legislators then moved into the drawn-out consideration of confederation with Canada, which wasn't effected until 1871.

These were the earth-shaking questions before the colony 100 years ago. When the 28th legislature meets at New Westminster, Tuesday, there may be a tendency to look back to 1867 as the date when everything began.

Strange as it may seem now, those early fathers of our province were also looking back almost a century. They were measuring progress since 1778, when Capt. James Cook first turned the eyes of England on this unknown, new world shore.

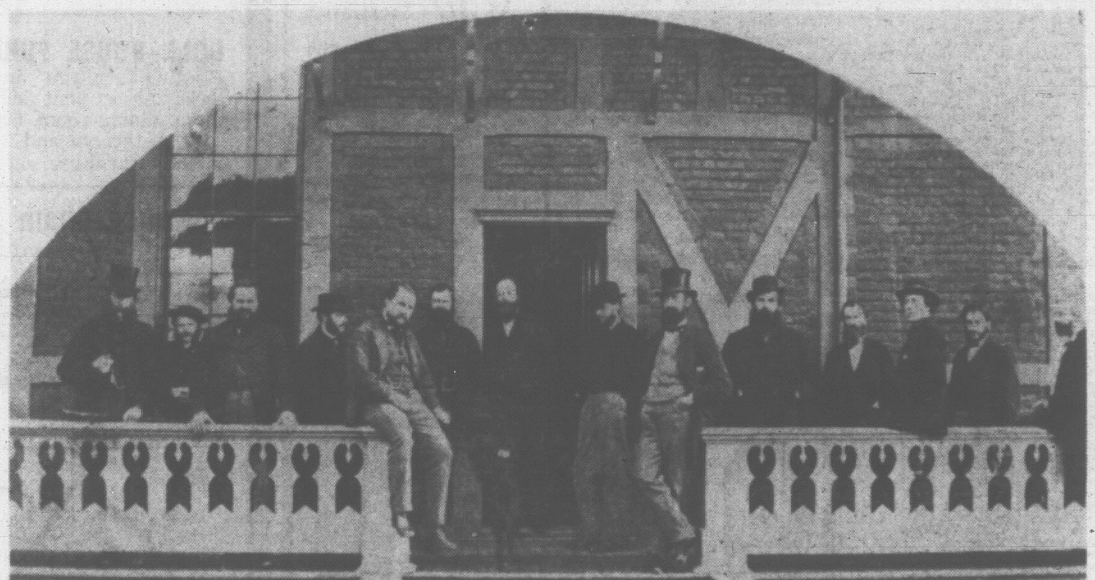
The fur traders followed Cook, accounting for the initial exploration of the west. The Hudson's Bay Company sprinkled mountains and coast with forts and trading posts. Soon the company virtually ruled the trade—and the country.

The company had its headquarters in the early 1800s at Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River, in Oregon territory. This was then a no-man's-land, neither British nor Yankee, but promised by the Nootka convention of 1790 to the country which settled it.

In 1818 Britain and the U.S. agreed on a partial boundary along the 49th parallel between Lake Of The Woods and the Rockies. Britain wanted the western extension of this line to dip south along the Columbia. Had she had her way, most of Washington State would belong to B.C. today.

Some Americans wanted control of the coast all the way north to Alaska, crying "Fifty-four-forty or fight". It wasn't until 1846 that the 49th parallel, our present boundary, was decided upon. Long before, the Hudson's Bay Company had guessed what would happen.

Accordingly, in 1843 company headquarters were moved north and Fort Victoria was founded. Britain gave control of the Island to the company and made it responsible for its settlement.



Confederation Year for British Columbia was 1871, the year this picture of some early legislators was taken. From left are Charles Good, Deputy Colonial Secretary W. H. Franklyn, a messenger, Attorney-General Phillipo, Reg. Gen. Alston, Colonial Secretary Hankin, C. P. Cornwall, Hon. W. Hamley, Robert Skinner, Amor de Cosmos, Arthur Bunster, Thomas B. Humphreys, H. Nathan and speaker, Dr. Helmcken.

The Island was made a crown colony in 1849. But the company did little to settle it. In fact, when the first governor, Richard Blanshard, came out in 1850, there was only one bona fide settler and the handful of other residents were Hudson's Bay Company employees.

Blanshard found that the colony offered him neither a home nor a salary. He couldn't even enjoy the employees' discounts at the company stores. So he quit after eight months.

For three months the colony was ruled by a three-man legislative council. One of the three, company officer James Douglas, was elevated to governor in November 1851.

Fraser Gold Rush Finished That

In 1856 the island colony added a legislative assembly. But the company still held sway in New Caledonia, the name then applied to the B.C. mainland. The Fraser gold rush finished that.

The rush began in 1858 and by the end of that year more than 30,000 gold-hungry adventurers had flocked here. There were sudden fears that because many of them came from California there might be moves by the U.S. to annex the mainland territory.

So in 1858 Britain granted colonial status to New Caledonia. Queen Victoria renamed it British Columbia and James Douglas was named as its governor. Now he ruled two colonies. But he chose to live in Victoria even when a mainland capital was established in 1859 at New Westminster.

That same year the colony of Vancouver Island built its first legislative buildings at Victoria, a cluster of wood frame, Oriental-shaped structures to forever to be known as the Bird Cages. (The present buildings weren't completed until 1897.)

The residents of the two colonies were not happy with the colonial arrangement. Douglas had a legislative council and a legislative assembly on the Island. But on the mainland his one-man rule continued until 1863.

He was still looked upon however, as a company man rather than a public administrator. People felt it was doubly expensive to maintain two governments, two capitals and two civil services in outposts of empire which were so closely linked in every other way. And both colonies were in debt.

Both Sides Debated Merger

Between 1864 and 1866 both sides of the Strait of Georgia debated the question of a merger. In 1864 Douglas stepped down from his two governorships and was rewarded with knighthood. Now Vancouver Island was governed by Arthur Edward Kennedy and British Columbia by Frederick Seymour.

Douglas had opposed any union of the colonies and Seymour wasn't keen on it either. New Westminster residents favored a merger only if the capital of the joint colony stayed in that city.

The people of Victoria generally favored the step provided Victoria was capital and was permitted to remain a free port, with no customs duties to contend with. The Island assembly however wanted a federation, not a merger, with the representative system of government maintained.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce pointed out that ships going to the north coast had to "clear" first at New Westminster, which was a costly detour.

On August 6, 1866, the British Parliament settled the matter by passage of an act.

It annexed Vancouver Island to the mainland and made Seymour new governor of the joined colonies. The legislative council created on the mainland in 1864 was enlarged. Kennedy was sent home.

This still was hardly representative government. Only nine of the 22 members were elected—five from the mainland and four from the Island.

The union didn't solve all British Columbia's problems.

The legislators who gathered at New Westminster 100 years ago were soon aware that taxes were going up instead of down, that the gold flow from the Cariboo was decreasing and that B.C. still was an isolated part of the Empire.

Many Favored States Union

On top of that there still were many residents who favored a union with the United States.

There was a great deal of fighting ahead for the new pocket parliament—even after the disposition of the capital was decided.

Men like Amor de Cosmos, J. F. McCreight, Robert Beaven, George A. Walkem and John Robson (who all were British Columbia premiers later), I. W. Powell and R. W. Carrall—all wanted union with Canada.

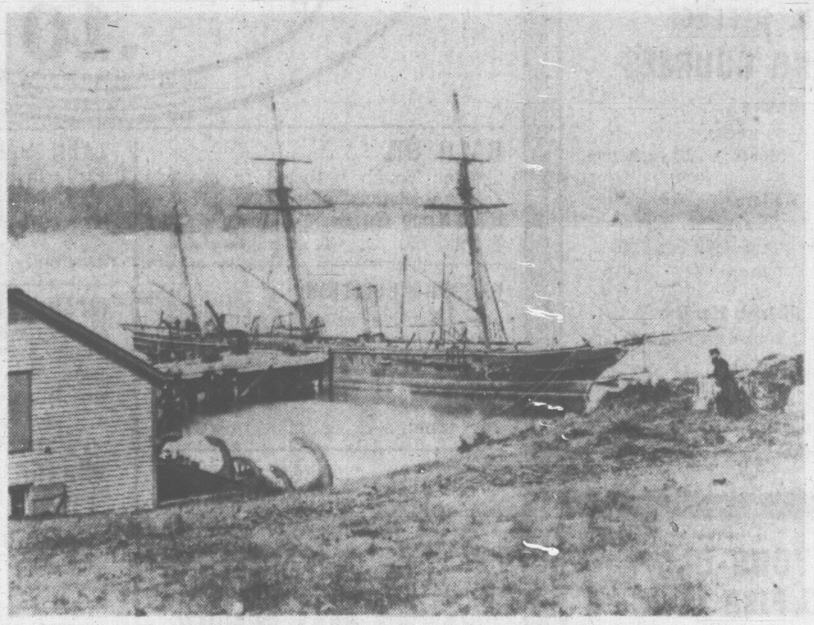
Here was an issue that went unresolved and was continuously debated until 1871 when B.C. entered Confederation. That was the same year the first truly representative assembly was formed with 25 members, 13 from the mainland and 12 from the Island.

Whatever dire decisions face our 28th legislative assembly after the Speech From The Throne is read Tuesday, their aching heads, their soul searching, their late hour studies of complicated issues will not set a precedent.

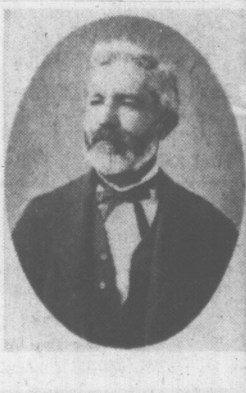
Their predecessors of a century ago had problems too.

Gov. Seymour became vice-regal representative of the merged colonies.

Gov. Douglas had ruled both colonies before union. He stepped down and was knighted prior to the merger. He said a funeral procession would have been appropriate to the occasion.

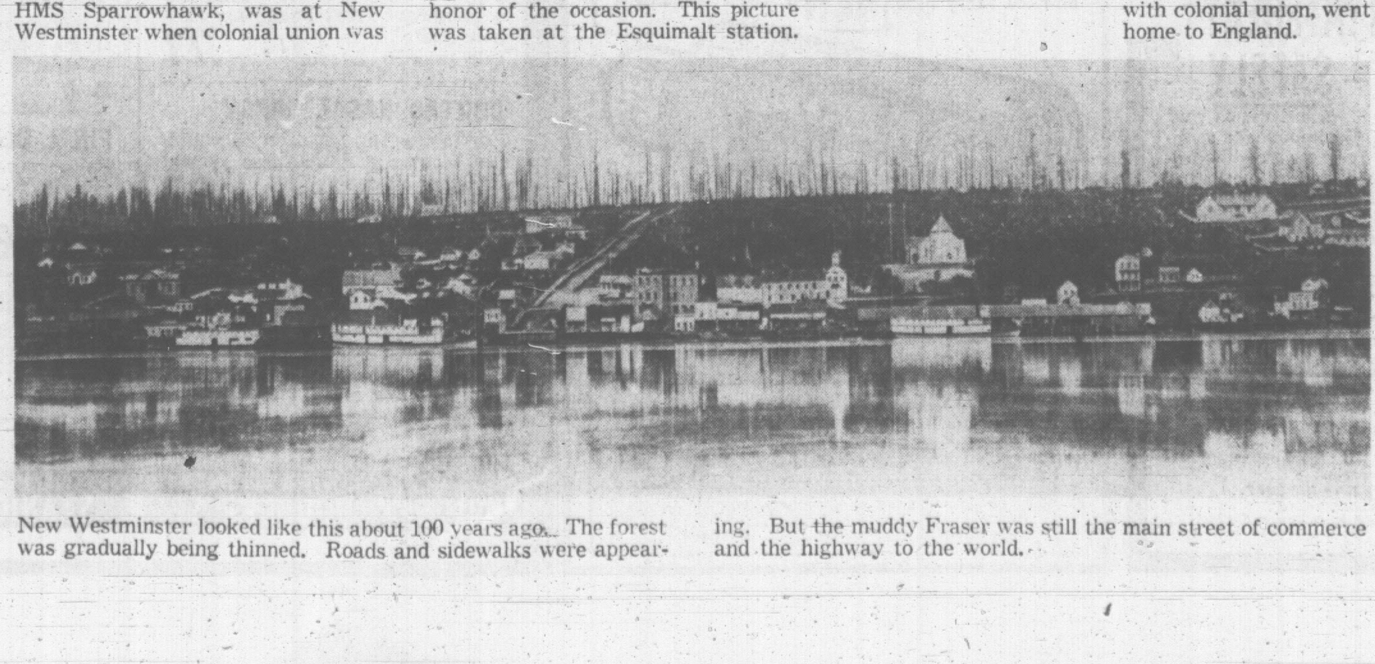


Esquimalt-based British naval vessel, HMS Sparrowhawk, was at New Westminster when colonial union was proclaimed. She fired a salute in honor of the occasion. This picture was taken at the Esquimalt station.



Pioneer doctor of Victoria, J. S. Helmcken, prescribed union for colonial health and recommended the sea air of Victoria to the pioneer politicians.

Gov. Kennedy lost his job with colonial union, went home to England.



New Westminster looked like this about 100 years ago. The forest was gradually being thinned. Roads and sidewalks were appearing. But the muddy Fraser was still the main street of commerce and the highway to the world.

Winning Colt Frustrates News Producer

When you work on a television program for almost three years there are bound to be some frustrations.

Take the case of NBC news producer Chet Hagan, whose "Thoroughbred" documentary will be colorcast on Channel 5, Sunday, at 6:30 p.m.

In March of 1964 he was present at the birth of a bay colt which was to be named Stamp Act. He followed the horse every step of the way — through its weaning, its wintering in Florida, its early training in Lexington, its preparation as a race horse at Aiken, S.C., and at Belmont Park on Long Island. It was August of 1966 before Stamp Act was ready to start.

The first race came on Aug. 2. On that day Hagan was assigned in Washington, preparing the coverage of the wedding of Luci Johnson to Patrick Nugent. When director Karl Hoffenberg called Hagan from Saratoga Springs, N.Y., and told him Stamp Act had won his first race, Hagan said: Well, Karl, as soon as I'm finished whith this job I'll come to Saratoga and see him in his second race."

But the producer reckoned without trainer John Gaver. Only four days later. Gaver ran the colt again. The date was Aug. 6 — the very day of the Nugent-Johnson wedding. This time, when director Hoffenberg called to report on Stamp Act, Hagan couldn't even take the call. He was "on the air" with the Johnson wedding.

"It wasn't until later that evening that I was able to reach Karl and get the details," Hagan recalls. "I told him I was leaving immediately for Saratoga, so as not to miss another race with Stamp Act.

When Hagan finally did see him run — on Aug. 17 — Stamp Act finished fifth in the Saratoga Special.

"I'm afraid," says the producer, "that I'll always remember the Luci Johnson wedding in relation to personally missing those two winning races by Stamp Act."

Sports Feature

The Los Angeles invitational track meet, one of the first of the season's major annual indoor meets, will be presented in color on "CBS Sports Spectacular" Sunday, on Channels 7, 12, at 11:30 a.m.

Jim Ryun, 1966 U.S. sportsman of the year and world-record holder in the mile at 3:51,3, heads an outstanding field forthe premiere event of the meet. Also listed for the mile are Jim Grelle, who has run 20 sub-four-minute miles; Bodo Tummler of West Germany, conqueror of Michel Jazy at 1,500 meters; Neill Duggan of England, with a 3:56.1 mile to his credit, and Dave Sirl of New Zealand, another sub-four-minute miler.

The two-mile-run field includes Gerry Lindgren, Tracey Smith, George Young and Ron Larrieu. The 1,000-yard run has Tom Farrell, one of the nation's best middle-distance runners; Peter Scott of Nebraska and Arnd Krueger of West Germany.

Tommie Smith heads the field for the 440-yard run. The speedster has set world records of 20.0 for the 220 and 19'5 for 220 on the straightaway. Bob Frey and Jim Kemp are expected to be his chief competition.

Bob Seagren, world indoor-record holder and former outdoor-record holder at 17 ft. 5½ in., heads the pole-vault field. Others competing are Paul Wilson and Sam Kirk, both 17-footers.

In the long jump, world record holder Ralph Boston, Darryl Horn and Gayle Hopkins are the standouts. The 60-yard-dash field nas Charlie Greene and Darel Newman. Greene is the U.S. AAU and NCAA champion and co-holder with Newman and Bob Hayes of the world indoor record of 5.9 for the 60.

Study of Israel

To millions of Jews the establishment of the state of Israel in 1948 was a miracle. Now, a generation later, young Israelis are striving to discover a national identity for their youthful country.

After the Miracle, an Australian Broadcasting Commission production for Intertel, examines how young Israel is struggling towar nationhood although beset by problems both complex and unique. The one-hour film documentary will be seen Sunday, at 2:30 on Channel 2.

An ABC unit filmed the program throughout Israel, concentrating not on Israel's problems and achievements, what they are doing about them, and how this is helping to shape their identity as Israelis.

The program begins with a study of this theme in relation to 4,000 years of Jewish history, then moves on to examine five aspects of life in Israel today: defence, religion, integration, development and the Arab minority.

Through a series of filmed sequences and interviews with residents of Israel, the program shows how Israel copes with defence, both in the military sense and in the strengthening of internal security; how efforts are being made to integrate the 80 different nationalities — with 80 different cultures — that make up Israel's population; how economic development is fostered through encouraging tourism and citrus fruit production, and scientific research aimed at making Israel, with limited natural resources, capable of supporting its people; how the government is attempting to raise the standard of living of Israels' 250,000 Arabs and is gradually relaxing military control over their movements within the country.

The ABC film unit was the first crew permitted to record brief meetings of separated Arab families at the Mandelbaum Gate in the wall between Old Jerusalem in Jordan and New Jerusalem in Israel. These meetings of separated families were arranged through negotiations between the two governments.

Producer-director Gil Brealey sums up his feelings about the Intertel program: "My work in Israel has certainly brought me a fresh and deeper understanding of the problems of the Jewish people in their homeland. I hope the film will do the same for its audience."

ASK RITHET'S
Q. A friend of mine recently had some golf clubs stolen from the storage building at his golf club and found that he had no insurance against this loss. I would like to know if a Homeowner's Policy would have covered this loss.
A. Yes. In a Homeowner's Policy the theft coverage, which provides insurance on personal property temporarily removed from permanent residence of the insured, would cover this loss. For those who are not eligible for a Homeowner's Policy, theft protection for golf clubs and equipment can be obtained by taking out a Golfer's Equipment Policy.

VICTORIA DAILY TIMES

SEEN REGULARLY on NBC-TV's "I Dream of Jeannie" is Bill Daily.

STAR NOW

Steve Allen Gave Comic Big Chance

HOLLYWOOD — Billy Daily played it safe. That's why success took a little longer.

"Good comedians today generally don't make it until they're 35," he said. "It takes that long to develop a style."

The odds against a comedian making it are great, according to Daily, who portrays Capt. Roger Healy in "I Dream of Jeannie" on the NBC Television network Mondays.

"If you work at a comedy career part-time, it takes 10 years longer," said Daily. "Full-time, the odds are 50-1, part-time they're a billion to one. But if you want it badly enough, you can do it."

Daily, who was born in Des Moines, Iowa, was a musician before serving in the Korean war as an artillery sergeant.

"After the war my wife and I wanted to adopt children so we needed a more stable life," he said. "I thought life in suburbia with its security would be great."

He found job security at NBC in Chicago, where he worked his way up to directing.

"I had a steady job but it was limiting after a while," said Daily. "Life in suburbia became oppressive.

MAKES DEBUT

During this time, though, Daily had developed his talent as a comedy writer and performer. He wrote for the network's "Club 60" show starring Dennis James and made his debut as a performer on the program. He performed in night clubs, including a seven-months run in Chicago's "The Small World."

He had done 500 Mike Douglas shows in Philadelphia when Steve Allen appeared on the program two years ago and caught Daily's act.

"During the show Steve asked me to come to Hollywood and work for him," said Daily. "I didn't believe he meant it. After the show he said, 'How about a contract forever with me? I know you have a family. You can all stay at my house until you get settled'."

Daily still treasures that moment.

"All life long you dream and hope for such a moment when someone like Steve Allen comes along and your whole life changes," he said. "Steve not only gave me my break but also offered me security. I gave two weeks notice and then went to work for Steve."

Big Ice Show on Friday

Herman's Hermits Special Guests; O'Brian Will MC

Hugh O'Brian will be host and Herman's Hermits, singers and instrumentalists, will be the special guests when the New Vienna Ice Extravaganza, featuring ice-skating champions of various countries, ushers in the new color series "Coliseum" Thursday, at 7:30 on Channels 7, 12.

The opening program was taped at the Cirque Royal in Brussels, Belgium, and, according to executive producer Joseph Cates, preserves the original Viennese flavor responsible for the show's widespread popularity.

Featured soloists will be Scotland's Ron McKenzie, professional skating champion; Joan Haanappel, a former Dutch champion and a member of the Dutch Olympic skating team; Milena from Prague, Czechoslovakia; Paul Sibley of Hollywood; comedian Duncan Whaley of Wales, assisted by Germany's Rusti Kile; Scotland's acrobatic comedy skating team, the Two Harvards; Ilse Pelikan of Vienna and Troy Anderson, a novelty dance team on skates; the adagio team of Yvette Busieau of Belgium and Manfred Wollschlager of Berln; soloist Nicole Ardent of Paris, and Lucien Meyer with Mr. Jackie, the skating chimp.

In addition to the soloists, a crop of 45 skaters will appear in the program's production numbers.

"Hello from Vienna," with all the principals and chorus participating, opens the show. This will be followed by "Tulip Time in Holland," a specialty number with Joan Haanappel and Ron McKenzie.

Next, skaters perform to music from "Annie, Get Your Gun," "My Fair Lady," "Kiss Me, Kate" and "The Gypsy Barson." "Comedy on Ice" will feature Ilse Pelikan and Troy Anderson, Whaley and Kile and the Two Harvards. The finale, "Viennese Waltz." a nostalgic production number, will again include the entire cast.

Will Move West

"The Road West" the NBC television network's series about a pioneer family's attempts to start a new life in America's rugged midsection during the violent post-Civil War years, will begin moving further west shortly. The program is seen Monday at 9 p.m. on Channel 5.

"Ben Pride and his family have had enough of 'bloody Kansas,'" reported Jim McAdams, youthful producer of the series. "They've decided to once again repack their covered wagons, and head out in search of better prospects."

McAdams and executive producer Norman Macdonnell are busy charting the Pride's course along the trail, which they promise will be a lot tougher than the main street of Lawrence.

"The Pride's move out of Kansas isn't new," says McAdams. "We never planned to make Lawrence the family's permanent home. Ben left Ohio because he wanted to be free of the strict, well-defined boundaries that relatively densely populated state imposed on him. He also wanted to leave the land where he buried his wife to start a new life in place that wouldn't hold such sad memories for him.

"Pride found that Kansas wasn't the place. "He and his family tried to farm a land that hated farmers. High winds that stripped the land of all good soil and unending droughts made it nearly impossible to raise even enough food for themselves."

In the first episode, Ben's mother was accidentally killed in a Jayhawker raid. In "No Sanctuary," airing Feb. 6, Grandpa Pride is murdered because Ben becomes involved in someone else's troubles.

These two losses and the cruelty of Kansas itself combine to drain Ben and his family emotionally. Their readiness to become involved meets sharp rebuff from others around them.

The Prides decide to give up farming for the more challenging cattle business. Tim, Ben's son, and Chance Reynolds persuade him that, with its rapidly increasing population, Kansas isn't the place to begin their new adventure, so Ben decides to move on to more suitable country.

"We hadn't intended to move the Prides to their new home until next season," says McAdams. "We decided to do it now becase we want to show just what kind of a series "The Road West" is, and what kind of people opened up Western America."

The Prides will endure greater hardships than before in their journey along "The Road West."

Essay on Women

CBS news correspondent Harry Reasoner and writer-producer Andrew A. Rooney turn their attention to a subject which has never been satisfactorily explained—women's dissatisfaction with themselves—in "An Essay on Women" in color Tuesday on Channel 7 at 10 p.m.

Other television essays bearing the Reasoner-Rooney stamp have dealt with inanimate subjects such as doors, bridges, hotels, and America and Scotland as seen from helicopters.

"An Essay on Women" develops the theme that woman's unrest is largely due to a belief that man's goals are the only ones worth achieving; the suspicion that, outside the home, the world is wonderfully interesting, and the well-intentioned efforts of experts to impress on women the magnitude of their problems.

This candid portrait of women was filmed in color by CBS News in various parts of the U.S. Sequenes show women in the home, women attending symposiums where men discourse on the difficulties of women leading fulfilling lives in a man's world, women in uniform, women ond display—beauty contestants, "bunnies," models, etc.—and beautiful women of all ages from various walks of life who contribute joy to the passing scene.

Owner Rejected an Offer Of $300,000 for 'Stone'

By EDDY GILMORE

BLARNEY, Ireland (AP) — "Neither the Blarney Stone nor any part of it is going to America or to any other place," says its owner. "But the people do still try to buy it."

Who tries to buy it?

"Americans mostly," replied Mary Penelope Hillyard, who inherited ancient Blarney Castle and its world-famous stone in 1952,

Sir George Colthurst, a former owner, wrote in his will: "It is my desire that as far as I can prevent it, the sad stone, or any part of it, shall never be sold or removed from the old castle at Blarney."

Speaking in a slow, soft voice, Mrs. Hillyard says: "If the stone ever left our family, I think misfortune would overcome us."

The Blarney Stone is at old Blarney Castle. Mrs. Hillyard and her husband, Maj. Jack Hillyard, a retired British Army officer, live at new Blarney Castle, a grey stone building about 100 years old and a quarter mile from the old castle.

The stone is one of the world's best known objects. People come by the thousands to kiss it, which is something of a gymnastic trick.

MAKES ORATORS

"We have no record," explained Mrs. Hillyard, "but as people have been kissing it for centuries, I'm sure it has been kissed by millions."

Why do they want to kiss it? Because kissing the stone is supposed to give the kisser the gift of oratory.

Does Mrs. Hillyard believe this?

"Of course I do," she answered. "I'm completely convinced that it does."

Others maintain that kissing the Blarney Stone can turn men into great lovers and politicians.

At one time kissing the Blarney Stone was dangerous, for the would-be kisser had to be suspended head downward from the battlements, with a strong man holding his ankle—in order to get his lips on the stone. Should the holder let go, the fall is about 125 feet.

After a man was killed at the old castle, kissing the stone was made easier—and safer.

"The man who killed himself wasn't trying to kiss the stone," said Mrs. Hillyard. "He was doing acrobatics on the battlements and as he had quite a bit to drink, he lost his balance."

EASIER TO GET AT

Two vertical bars now extend inside the battlements, straight down to the stone. By sitting down and leaning backwards, while holding to the vertical bars, a fairly agile person can easily plant his lips on the stone.

The best offer the owner has ever received for the Blarney Stone — four feet one - inch long, by one foot one inch wide, and nine inches thick—is £100,000 ($300,000).

"A lot of money," she said, "but still—no sale."

Where did the Blarney Stone come from?

The legends are numerous. One is that it was Jacob's pillow and was brought to Ireland during one of the Crusades.

Another is that the stone came from part of a Druids circle near the castle. Many people in the village of Blarney believe this theory.

"They won't go out on Midsummer's Night," said Mrs. Hillyard, "because they think the ghosts of the Druids are about with their white cattle."

A widely believed theory is that the stone came from Scotland as a gift from Robert the Bruce. After the battle of Bannockburn, in grateful appreciation of Irish aid, the great Bruce sent the Blarney Stone and it was stuck on the battlement.

FAVORITE TARGET for tourists with cameras is the lovely Hong Kong miss aboard junk in the city's teeming harbor.

'IMPORT DUTY'

Two Words You Seldom Hear Here

HONG KONG—The words "import duty" are pure poison to many tourists visiting foreign countries.

Hong Kong is one place where visitors never encounter the menace of burdensome import duty taxes. The city is free of duty on everything except liquor and tobacco. Thus, items such as perfume, woollens, radios, jewlery, and watches are far less expensive than in North American and Europe.

Hong Kong Island is a British Crown Colony with a population of about 3,800,000. The city is the capital of the island and has a population of just over one million. Hong Kong is made up mainly of Cantonese people (South China) along with a few northern Chinese and British.

The tourist can reach it from Canada via Canadian Pacific Airlines, which has regular flights to the city.

Aside from the inexpensive aspect, the city offers a wide range of attractions for tourits and camera buffs.

Picture takers will enjoy the numerous chances for shots of junks in Hong Kong harbor and Aberdeen. The junks are floating homes for thousands of Hong Kong residents, and are unique to Asian countries.

Tourists will enjoy visiting the Sal Ying Pun district of Hong Kong, with its narrow lanes, steep staircases, ladder-type streets, and Chinese markets. There are open air bookshops in Hong Kong, with literature ranging from children's magazines to adult books on philosophy.

Picture-takers will like the contrast between the junks, where thousands live, and the Tiger Balm Garden, a beautiful residential district inhabited by a select few.

Hong Kong has a number of good beaches, including Repulse Bay, Deep Water Bay, and Big Wave Bay. For photographers, a visit to the outer islands of Hong Kong by rented cruise boat or ferry is a must.

A side trip from Hong Kong to Macao, a Portuguese province on the peninsula of Chung Shan, Kwantung, is available by boat or air. The province is an interesting adventure for tourists as it contains a blend of Chinese and Portuguese atmosphere.

VOYAGES OF THE MOONRAKER

Sea 'Writes Itself on You'

By JOHN MANNING

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife Pat are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor. This is the tenth in a series on their adventures.

The sea had no tricks to play that morning. The wind carried into our sails gently, giving Powindah a scant three miles an hour through the water. It was a time for thought.

Doctor Peter Pye came to mind. "It's good that you are taking your chance now," he had said to us. "You never know what the future will bring."

I recalled the letter which we had written to him and his wife Anne, who were one of England's most famous cruising couples, asking if we might meet with them. The answer had come back by return post.

"Come to supper on Thursday and stay the night."

Their home as 'Mizzen Cottage' in the village of Steeple on the Essex Coast. It was comprised of two ancient cottages, tucked side by side, with the intervening wall sectioned out to make one dwelling. The interior was a deep sea sailor's mecca.

AZTEC IDOL

Charts of the South Seas were framed along one wall; a large oil painting of Moonraker, their boat, hung above the fireplace; momentoes and artifacts brought home from countless voyages were everywhere: shells from Tahiti, an Aztec idol from South America, a wine skin from Spain.

There were countless books. A study desk held the manuscript of his latest book. A chair was pushed back from the typewriter and I had the feeling that the Doctor had left off work to greet us.

Meeting the Pye's was our greatest moment in England. Over the years I had read all his books and had almost memorized The Sea Is for Sailing, in which he describes their voyage from England to British Columbia via the South Pacific. Like all his other passages, this was accomplished in the half-century old 28 foot Moonraker.

"We paid £25 for her before the war," he said with a sly grin. "But if we tried to sell her now I think she'd drown us."

HOSTILE NATIVES

Within minutes we had charts of the Atlantic and Pacific scattered over the living room floor. Anne and my wife disappeared into the kitchen to discuss provisions, while the Doctor and I mulled over routes, anchorages, winds and native peoples.

"Watch this coast," he cautioned, pointing to a chart of South America. "We went into this bay and the natives came down with bows and arrows. Interesting, most interesting."

"Did you go ashore?"

"No."

Peter Pye was a wisp of a man. Until you saw him smile, or became aware of the hard look that came into his eyes when he spoke of storms, you might assume it impossible for him to have skippered his small craft so many thousands of miles. He was wearing a rough wool shirt, a waterproof diving watch that looked oversized on his small wrist, and fisherman type pants that he hooked his thumbs into. Somehow they added to the quiet, devil-may-care aura that surrounded him.

"You know," he said suddenly, "This business of sailing across oceans has a mental effect on you."

CHANGE YOU

"How?"

"It change you. It writes itself on you. When it's all over, you're a different man. The moment someone steps aboard Moonraker and comes down our companionway I can tell whether he's been deep sea."

Over dinner the subject of future voyages came up.

"We were planning to sail down to the Cape Verde Islands this year but Anne broke her wrist. We've abandoned the idea now. We're just going to head down to Spain for a few weeks."

I thought of this now, as we sailed on in the bright morning sunlight. The Spanish Coastline was off our Starboard, or right hand bow, looking sharply brown, as though it had just been cut out and erected for a movie set. The air was intensely clear.

CARRIED WEAPONS

Within two hours we were moored in the Spanish port of Alicante. The Guardia Civil, all carrying weapons strapped to their green uniforms, a squad of port authorities neatly attired in white uniforms and also carrying forty-fives, plus another police official had come and gone. It was time to read our mail.

One letter came from an English friend. "I doubt if you have heard what happened to Peter Pye. He was on his way home from Spain with Moonraker a couple of weeks ago when he developed hernia trouble. His wife was aboard, and she, along with another crew member managed to get the boat safely home. Peter was rushed to hospital."

"The operation was nothing serious. No one anticipated any trouble, but Peter died on the operating table. The damn shame of it was that his hernia had nothing to do with it. The anesthetic was poisoned."

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, JANUARY 21, 1967—PAGE 19

Eventually, we in this province may field a government that can see farther than the end of its nose in its utilization of natural resources.

That time, however, is still over the horizon. Mr. Bennett and his hydro-happy crew are still calling the shots, and the dissenter from certain of their policies can only hope that Social Credit's fundamentalist Jehovah will see fit to visit them with a sending of wisdom.

But we do have our moments, and British Columbia Appeal Court furnished one such with its knocking back of those three Pollution Control Board permits which would have made Buttle Lake a repository for mine wastes and mining town sewage.

It may be that the fountainhead of Campbell River's water supply wouldn't have suffered; and certainly the reporters who quaffed a brew of treated tailings haven't yet turned jaundice yellow or broken out in spots.

But those Pollution Control Board concessions established a precedent, and having granted concessions of that sort to the first comer, the grounds for refusing the next are shaky indeed.

Whether the Appeal Court decision will stand remains to be seen. Still, whether it does or doesn't, I suggest that by moving to remedy a doubtful measure, the spunky Campbell River water board has accomplished some worthy pioneering.

★

By this, I don't mean that individual conservationists — which is to say, those who believe in resource use foresight rather than hindsight — should rush to clutter the courts. What we need is an organization, and it would be well if we set about forming one with no more delay than need be.

I propose — or re-propose, if you will — a provincial parks association through which our objections against industrial and unjustified commercial intrusions into our parklands can be given weight.

This, of course, would be but one function of the body I have in mind. It would also press for legitimate road and trail building where such construction was indicated.

It would throw its weight behind the development of more winter playgrounds, on occasion sweeten the conservation and recreation department kitty by contributions from its funds.

In no way would it attempt to usurp the functions of government. Its role would be that of a non-governmental agency eager to work with the provincial authority.

But it would play watchdog at need; and if it developed as it should, its bark would be loud when danger threatened.

It would also have such bite as a sizeable group of voters can apply in political skirmishes.

★

The plain fact is that government — not ours alone, but any government — bears watching, if only because it tends to become too remote from those who elected it.

If an example is needed, we need look no farther than the United States, where the earlier efforts of President Theodore Roosevelt and the conservationists-in-office who followed him were, by the mid-twenties, being systematically undone.

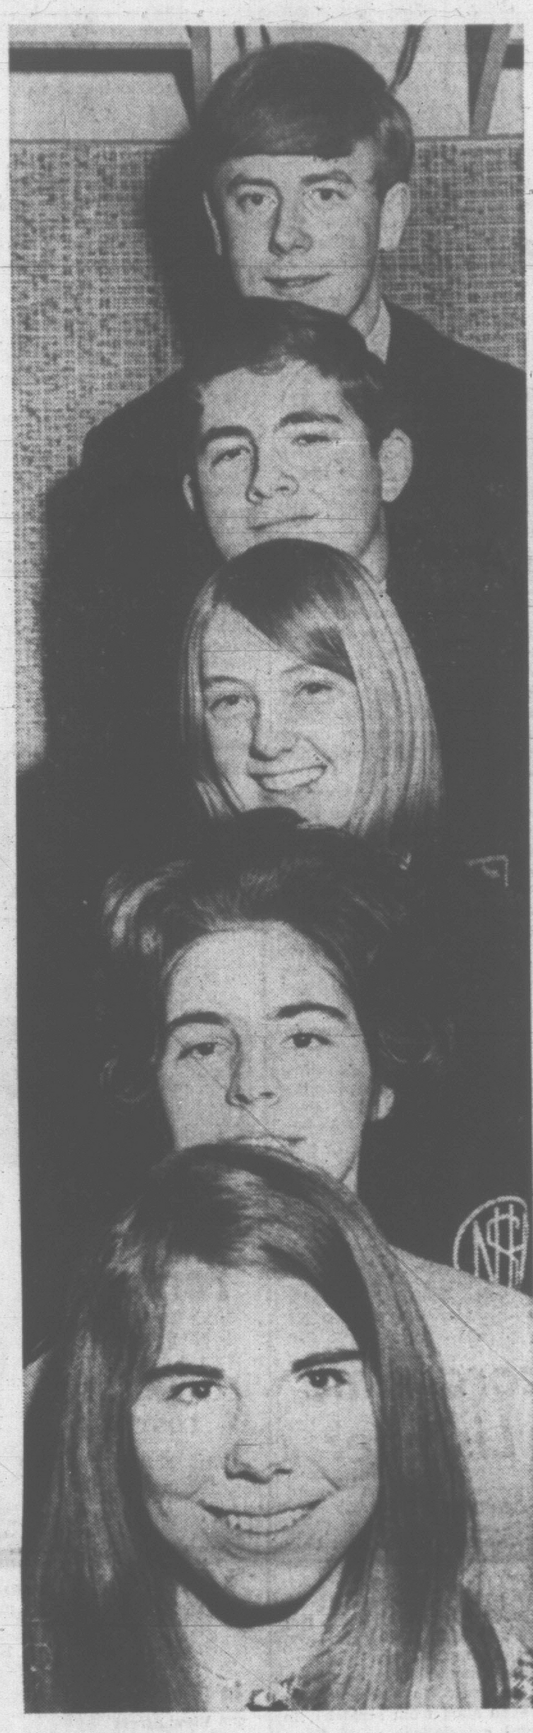
Were it not for the efforts of the U.S. National Parks Association, our neighbor would to its loss and sorrow have far fewer wild parks today.

Down there, the pressures are still on, ruthlessly applied by those who see money to be made in exploitation of the people's preserves.

More than any other group, it was the U.S. National Parks Association that fought for the Act of Congress which in 1964 "blanketed" 88 wild areas totalling close to 15 million acres as the National Wilderness Preservation System.

The act permits some mining and certain other activities ... but only under the most stringent control, and where "deemed compatible with the wilderness concept."

Provincially, our parks need more and better protection than they are getting. But I don't think they will receive it until a large, concerned and united citizens' group hammers that fact home.



WINNERS of $50 each in Lions Club essay contest, and that much closer to chance at $25,000 international prize, are local high school students (from top) Don MacIntyre, 17, Peter Chapman, 15, Alison Grant, 17, Linda Wilkinson, 16, and Felicity Earnshaw, 16. Each wrote essay describing thought-out plan for world peace. (Strickland photo).

5 PUPILS CLOSER TO $25,000 PRIZE

Five Greater Victoria teen-agers have placed first in an essay contest sponsored by local Lions Clubs.

Each has received a $50 prize this week and a chance to continue in the contest into the international level.

The winners are Don MacIntyre, 17, 740 Rock Heights of Esquimalt Sr. Secondary; Alison Grant, 17, 1307 Rockland of Norfolk House School; Felicity Earnshaw, 16, 2637 Chileo of St. Ann's Academy; Linda Wilkinson, 16, 2832 Parkview Drive of Mt. View Sr. Secondary and Peter Chapman, 15, 141 Beach Drive, of University School.

Each student wrote an essay of 5,000 words or less on the subject of world peace. The essays were judged by three persons picked by Lions Club members in each club district.

Goal of the contest, sponsored by Lions International, is to find a workable plan for world peace.

The five winners will have their essays forwarded to the zone level to try for prizes of $100, $75, and $25.

A grand prize of $25,000, to be used for education or career, is offered on the international level.

STAND BY FOR SNOW

Only 'Main Blast' Past

Weatherman Allan McQuarrie said today "we aren't out of the woods."

Mr. McQuarrie says that while the "main blast" has headed south there's a chance of wet snow mixed with rain Sunday. (At noon it was snowing in northern and western Vancouver Island.)

And when that's over "colder air" is expected from B.C.'s northern coast.

'LITTLE BETTER'

"Generally, though," said Mr. McQuarrie, "while we're not out of the woods, things look a little better."

There has been 6.53 inches of rain this month.

The normal accumulation for this time in January is 2.77 inches.

From Wednesday morning until midnight Friday, 2.65 inches fell on Victoria. It rained another .18 of an inch today.

Waterlogged basements aside, Victoria seems to have mended its fences and shaken itself dry. Roads are clear and no power and telephone lines are reported down.

IT'S POSSIBLE

A water main at the corner of Sooke and Phillips Road collapsed Friday, cutting off the nearby area for about three hours. It is now fixed.

But the floods next time?

Mr. McQuarrie has the right idea—his house is on a hillside.

STAIRWAY FATALITY ACCIDENTAL

Coroner Edmond St. Jorre ruled today that Frank Cavaz, 34, who died in hospital Wednesday after a stairway fall last Sunday, met death by accident.

While attaching no blame, the coroner said his official inquiry showed alcohol and loose canvas covers on the steps were contributing factors.

Mr. Cavaz was rushed to hospital early Sunday after he toppled down 11 steps leading to the basement of his home at 3211 Harriet, striking his head on a barbeque.

His investigation showed the dead man had been drinking earlier in the evening, said the coroner. And canvas covers on the steps were loose and could move about two inches.

RCMP Gets Man In N. Alberta For Bad Cheques

A man RCMP officers arrested in northern Alberta pleaded guilty to writing four bad cheques in Courtenay when he appeared in central court today.

Robert Isenor had his cases remanded to Feb. 3 for sentence.

Court was told one of the cheques payable to a jeweller was for a $105 wedding ring set. Another for $25 was used to pay a medical bill. The other two were cashed at stores for $20 and $15. All were returned by Isenor's bank last summer marked not sufficient funds.

Uvic Attracts Top U.K. Music Scholar

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A man with an astonishingly diverse and profound musical background has been appointed chairman of the division of music at University of Victoria, president Malcolm G. Taylor announced today.

Dr. Gerald Hendrie, a well-known British organist and music historian, is, at the age of 31, regarded as one of Britain's most erudite and gifted musical scholars.

●

He is now a lecturer in the history of music and musical palaeography at Victoria University of Manchester.

"To find the right man we made a long search on both sides of the Atlantic," says Peter Garvie, director of Uvic's School of Fine Arts.

"We are delighted and feel most fortunate that Dr. Hendrie is so strongly attracted to Victoria and to our program."

●

Under Dr. Hendrie's direction, the division of music will offer a full four-year program for the first time in the 1967-68 academic year.

Dr. Hendrie holds three degrees—MA, Mus.B and Ph.D from Cambridge University, is a Fellow of the Royal College of Organists and an Associate of the Royal College of Music in piano performing, organ performing and piano teaching.

●

Before going to Manchester, Dr. Hendrie was Director of Music at the Homerton Training College, Cambridge.

He has a long list of academic publications to his credit. He is now editing the Chandos Anthems of Handel for a new complete edition of Handel's music, and is preparing a comprehensive history of English keyboard music.

A frequent piano and organ recitalist on BBC, Dr. Hendrie has composed several works, and is a choral and orchestral conductor.

He is married and his wife is also a musician, holding the degrees of B.Mus. and Ph.D from London University. She is a professionally trained conductor.

●

Dr. Hendrie says that in the time he has left over from music, he is an ardent yachtsman.

He will take up his new post in Victoria on July 1.

Tokens Taken

For milk truck driver Melvin Hendra it was a token theft. Several tokens in fact.

He told city police Friday someone entered his delivery and took 350 tokens worth 29 cents, 75 tokens valued at 27 cents and 25 tokens worth 25 cents.

All but $10 worth of the tokens were found in a vacant lot a short time later by a Maple Avenue resident.

DEBATE STARTED IN 1867

Archivist Denies 'Warping' History

By PETE LOUDON

Victoria city hall today denied a charge that it has been warping history to suit its own ends.

Historian James K. Nesbitt noted this week the city plans this year to mark the 100th anniversary of the transfer of the capital of British Columbia from New Westminster to Victoria.

Mr. Nesbitt says the actual transfer took place in 1868 and the city is jumping the gun by 14 months.

But City Hall's new archivist, Ainslie Helmcken, put the matter straight.

He says the vital debate on the transfer of the capital to Victoria did take place in 1867. He agrees the capital was not transferred until 1868.

DEBATED IN 1867

"We never at any time said 1867 was the date the matter was concluded. But it was the year of the major battle on the question, he added.

He said the proposed City Hall display of historical material relative to the event will follow through from 1867's vital debate to the date in 1868 when the proclamation was made and the capital transferred.

He said he brought this to the attention of a reporter from another paper, pointing out that unless the point was clarified, some historian would make criticisms. But initial published reports of the city's plans said merely the centenary of the transfer of the capital would take place this year.

(See Page 14 for a complete account of the related B.C. history.)

Mr. Helmcken, who is a grandson of one of the pioneer legislators involved in those early debates, said the proposed display will not add to the cost of the centennial year celebrations.

With the exception of certain items which will be borrowed from the provincial archives, all of the material to be used is to be retained as part of the permanent archives of the city.

Mayor Hugh Stephen today said he agrees wholeheartedly with Mr. Helmcken's stand.

Ask The Times

Q. How many foreign countries have legal controls on dissemination of hate propaganda. What kinds of penalties are provided? A.S.

A. According to the report of the Special Committee on Hate Propaganda in Canada, tabled November, 1965, "most countries in Western Europe have group defamation legislation." The report mentions specifically the Netherlands, Austria, West Germany, Greece, Norway, Sweden, Italy, France, Switzerland. Penalties are prison terms or fines. Other countries with such legislation are: U.S.S.R., most of the other Eastern European states, Argentina, India.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

DRAGGING OPERATION

New Firm Eyes Shelf Minerals

An exploration permit covering the continental shelf off B.C. is being sought by a new mining company.

Conshell Resources Limited of Vancouver wants to search mainly for phosphates, phosphorites and manganese, company director and lawyer Hans Swinton told The Times this morning.

He said the application takes in the west coast of Vancouver Island and north to Alaska, covering "just about" the area of the Shell Oil permit and "just about" the extent of the continental shelf.

Phosphates and phosphorites are used in the preparation of fertilizers, becoming increasingly important in the production of food.

It has been estimated that in the second half of this century, for example, at least 20 per cent of the food produced in the United State was due directly to commercial fertilizers.

BRITTLE METAL

Manganese is a hard, brittle metal frequently found in conjunction with iron ore. Its use is essential in the stel industry.

Ninety per cent of the manganese in the U.S. is consumed in this way. Thirteen pounds of manganese is used for each ton of steel produced and no substitute exists for it.

Mr. Swinton said it is "difficult to answer at this stage" how the exploration work will be carried out if a permit is granted.

Initially, it will probably be by dragging. This would be similar to drag-net fishing "but we would be after sedimentary stuff deposited on the continental shelf" and this would provide an indication of mineral deposits.

A special cabinet order last month placed a Crown reserve on the continental shelf to prevent what Premier Bennett termed exploitation by "squatters."

Mines Minister Donald Brothers said he is working with the attorney-general's department on the method of handling the application.

The application will "be held in abeyance until we can figure out some way of going about it."

The minister said the government knows there are "manganese nodules offshore which have already been located by the oceanographic department of the University of B.C."

Trade Minister Ralph Loffmark said "there are lots of possibilities out there, a couple that people haven't even come close to talking about."

One of these is copper, he added.

HUMMING STARTED TOO SOON

An Oak Bay man has spotted a hummingbird.

Charles Errington, 1434 Mitchell, said he has "never heard anything like this" at this time of the year.

And Dr. Cliff Carl, curator of the B.C. Museum, agrees it is unusual.

"But there was one seen on the Christmas bird count, in Cadboro Bay," he said. "It could be the same bird."

He said there are previous records of hummingbirds during the winter "although how they find enough food is beyond me."

Woman 'Critical' After Car Crash

A 20-year-old Goldstream Avenue woman remains in critical condition today after a two-car crash Friday night.

Three other persons also went to hospital.

Mrs. Ruth Lacey of 1177 Goldstream is in the intensive care unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital with severe head injuries.

Her husband George, 23, the driver of one of the cars in the crash at Haultain and Shakespeare shortly after 6 p.m., is in satisfactory condition with arm and minor head injuries.

The driver of the other auto, Joseph Schmidt, 36, of 1520 Pembroke, is in fair condition.

He suffered leg and arm injuries and head cuts while his passenger, Karen Bertelsen, 45, of 1410 Bay, received injuries to her shoulders and head. Her condition is satisfactory.

All four were admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The Lacey's small European car was found in a driveway 90 feet from the accident scene at the intersection, city police said today. It had been eastbound on Haultain.

The Schmidt car came to rest against a utility pole on the corner. It had been travelling north on Shakespeare.

Officers said both cars could be classified as wrecks.

Ron Maunder, 16, of 1761 Broadmede, suffered a broken leg about 7:45 p.m. when his motorcycle collided with a car driven by Helen Marshall of 1711 Carnegie Crescent at Shelbourne and Blair.

There's Little Time for Gossip For XM13-365 and His Friends

By TERRY IZZARD

People are always drifting into Brian Wright's house.

Right out of thin air they appear, without so much as knocking.

At meal times, even bed time, they turn up—unannounced and unseen.

Sometimes it's just to say "Hi." At other times they call for help.

Brian, 34, is one of 40 people in Victoria belonging to the Citizens' Band Radio Club.

His visitors "pop in" via the tiny, two-way radio tucked in a corner of the kitchen of his home at 2745 Fifth Street.

To his friends, Brian is XM13-365.

Those are the call letters which he proudly boasts in the rear window of his car which houses a second radio set.

Along with fellow club members and others who own sets on Vancouver Island, Brian is on call 24 hours a day.

Althougth the sets are basically fun things, they are often called upon in emergencies.

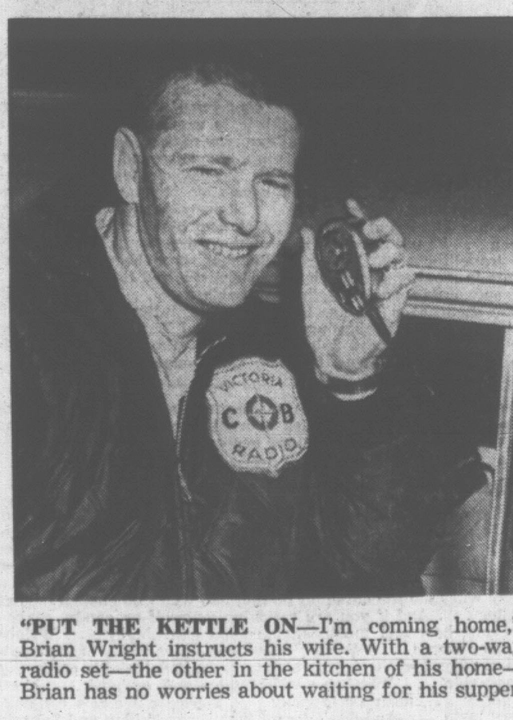
Only this week, club members helped establish a communications network to aid searchers on Green Mountain, west of Nanaimo, when a Victoria girl disappeared. She was found.

When fire broke out on Mount Douglas recently, five-club members sped to the scene to offer assistance.

Their help freed fire and policemen for other duties.

"We're not the same as radio hams," said Brian, 34. "Basically the radio should only be used to relay a legitimate message—not just for gossiping."

The sets cost $150 to $500 each and only thing needed to operate them is a free licence from the department of transport. They have a range of up to 15 miles.



"PUT THE KETTLE ON—I'm coming home," Brian Wright instructs his wife. With a two-way radio set—the other in the kitchen of his home—Brian has no worries about waiting for his supper.

Irish Coffee . . . Erin's classic after-dinner drink . . .

Cream rich as an Irish brogue . . . Coffee strong as a friendly hand . . . Sugar sweet as the tongue of a rogue . . . Whisky smooth as the wit of the land . . . that's what goes into what the Irish refer to as a "Gaelic" . . . Irish Coffee to you! . . . We got the original, genuine Shannon Airport recipe from Sydney Reynolds . . . who also sell the original Waterford stemmed Irish Coffee glasses to serve it in . . . Made to withstand heat, very attractive to look at . . . and only $1.40 each! . . . Here's the recipe, and we suggest you clip it and keep it as a handy reference . . . 1. Into a stemmed 6/8 oz. glass pour one jigger of Irish whiskey. 2. Fill glass within ½ inch of brim with hot, strong black coffee. 3. Add dark brown sugar to taste, and stir well. 4. Top off with slightly whipped cream so that cream floats on top. Do NOT stir after adding cream, since unique flavour is obtained by drinking the hot coffee and whisky through the cold cream . . . Irish Coffee is simple to make, and tops off a dinner with glamour . . . Of course the proper glasses make all the difference . . . and Sydney Reynolds' Irish Coffee glasses are so gala-looking that lots of people use them for serving regular coffee too! . . . Sydney Reynolds Ltd., 811 Government St., 383-3931.

Hardy Amies, who makes some of the Queen's clothes, says he is "striking a note between the bizarre and confused" this spring.

New suits make good travellers . . .

You know those word association tests where someone says a word and you answer the first thing that comes into your head? . . . Well, when we hear "spring", our immediate reaction is "suit" . . . because while suits are pretty much a year-round proposition nowadays . . . there isn't a woman among us who doesn't want a new one to greet the daffodil season! Wilson's spring suits are starting to come in . . . stunners all of them . . . For instance the white and navy tattersal with four flap pockets . . . crisply tailored, and just the thing for now if you're going south . . . then wearable right through the summer . . . Another perfect traveller is the loose weave silk and wool suit in black and white, with the "soft construction" which makes it fit so well under a topcoat . . . This one . . . a petite 14 . . . is absolutely uncrushable . . . There's a linen blend dress and jacket ensemble in cream and cocoa with narrow leather belt low on the hips . . . inverted side pleats and tailored jacket . . . another black and white dress and jacket with short sleeves, 2-way patent belt and black, marble-like buttons . . . And a new arrival we like is a white Italian knit shirt-dress with pleated skirt, cap sleeves, navy and red trim . . . Smart as a whip! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

A dancing course especially for teenagers . . .

An acquaintance of ours who's the mother of a couple of lively teenagers was bewailing the fact that while the kids can frug and watuski with best of them . . . they're totally lacking in any knowledge of ballroom dancing . . . "And after all," she sighed, "they'll be adults one of these days, and can't go on jumping up and down like Mexican jumping beans forever!" . . . Of course we couldn't agree more . . . Ballroom dancing is a social grace everyone should acquire . . . and the younger the better . . . The Arthur Murray dance studio is doing something constructive to supply this need . . . Starting immediately they will hold a 10-week course in ballroom dancing . . . every Saturday afternoon from 3 to 4 p.m. . . . for 13- to 15-year-olds . . . The kids will be taught all the modern ballroom dances from the waltz to the cha-cha-cha to the bosa nova . . . And at the end of the 10-week course . . . when they're all dancing like little ladies and gentlemen . . . there'll be a bang-up party for the class. Cost of all this is just $12.50 . . . money well spent, we'd say . . . For adults only, Arthur Murray's are offering a special . . . 5 private lessons and 3 studio parties for only $14 . . . How about you parents brushing up on your dancing too? . . . Arthur Murray School of Dancing, 715 Yates St., 385-1476.

Ursula Redwood's customers, in turn, not only revel in her unerring taste, but feel her clothes are part of themselves rather than something they put on . . . truly haute couture in the grand manner! . . . Why not let Mrs. Redwood design and make your new spring suit? . . . We assure you it will be the smartest, most comfortable garment you've ever owned! . . . Ursula Redwood, 1008 Fort St., 385-5833.

Overweight comes from overeating, says dieting authority John Yudkin. But he defines overeating as eating "more than you use up". Varies, therefore according to each individual.

Welch's satisfy every sweet tooth . . .

Seems like a bit of a paradox to mention candy in the same breath as dieting . . . which is a perennial New Year resolution nearly everyone we talk to seems to have taken . . . But our own theory is you'll persevere longer if you're not too hard on yourself . . . and that's where the candy comes in: one chocolate a day will take the curse off dieting and won't do enough harm to matter . . . And if you are rationing yourself on candy, make it the very best and most delicious you can obtain . . . Welch's, in other words . . . Welch's more than 50 varieties of chocolates and candies are the freshest, purest, most delectable confections imaginable . . . Whether you like them soft or hard . . . chewy or gooey . . . nutty or crunchy . . . there's a Welch's candy for every taste . . . And don't forget that every Friday and Saturday Welch's have a special . . . one of their several varieties of chewy wrapped candies which are regularly 80 cents a pound reduced to 67c for the weekend . . . Nice to take to the movies with you . . . or to reward children who have been extra good all week! . . . If there's someone to whom you'd like to give a small gift, a box of Welch's chocolates is invaribably well-received . . . And you can have Welch's mailed just about anywhere in the world . . . so give a sweet surprise to one of your expatriated Victoria friends one of these days . . . Phone Welch's and ask them to send a box of chocolates off with all dispatch! . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort St., 383-6422.

Exotically beautiful from the unusual jungle orchid print to the flow of the short floating skirt, the shirt-sleeve drape of long sleeves . . . all show the unique talent of designer Ken Scott who created both the print and the "Ban-Lon" creation. As packable as a scarf and truly crease-resistant . . . a go-around-the-world girl's best friend.

Color Explodes in Coming Season's Fashions

Nona

Looking back over the New York Couture Group's 48th National Press Week, the big look which comes to mind for spring and summer 1967 is of a bold, brightly patterned whisper-weight dress with long sleeves, high neck and worn well above the knees. Dresses of this type were in every collection . . . in varying silhouettes and patterns, the most popular being a straight sheath with either a high armhole, long tight sleeve or a deep dolman or batwing sleeve. The tent shape with its yards and yards of filmy fabric is worn loose by the New York models but could just as well be sashed. The in-between dress is the A-line with its narrow fitted top and softly swinging skirt.

Color combinations are mad but beautiful . . . flower prints are in top position followed by zany stripes and geometrics.

Many of these dresses are companioned by one of the new sleeveless or short sleeved coats in a solid shade.

Pants go to the city, country, dances, intimate dinners at home or away. The pant look is less tailored this season . . . more feminine. Daytime finds the culotte suit a fashion favorite.

Evening trousers capture the exotic flavor of a harem or look like twin skirts in beautiful chiffon floats.

There is a distinct military influence in coats, suits and tailored dresses. Waist-length jackets with bands at the bottom have the Eisenhower or battle-jacket look. Officer-like collars, crested with buttons and epaulettes, are part of this scene.

Turtle-neck shaping remains a fashion favorite. There are many cut-outs . . . back or front of bodice or on sleeves. The neckline cut-outs are most attractive on dark solid shades as the exposure of flesh shows the cut to advantage.

Millinery, which I will cover at greater length in the furture, is big and beautiful, seemingly as a balance for the short, narrow skirt look.

There are many open-heel shoes . . . heels are still low and toes are blunter than ever.

Textured hose leans to the stringy varieties. Body stockings or tights are recommended for the mini-skirt wearer.

Hairdos are longer, less architectural and hair pieces are the big news.

Earrings have taken over the jewelry story with massed bracelets gaining by the moment.

The hectic fashion week closed with a formal dinner in the ballroom of the Pierre Hotel where Mayor John Lindsay as guest of honor presented citations to seven women who have been covering New York collections for 25 years.

Joan Crawford, member of the board of directors of the Pepsi-Cola Company who hosted the dinner, welcomed each of us with a word and a handshake. Miss Crawford was beautifully gowned in a white and silver brocade floor-length sheath and jacket.

Would you believe that mini-skirts are responsible for an overflowing lost and found department in New York City? Mayor Lindsay says no girl can bend down in public to retrieve any lost item!

Learn in Record Time By Being a Listener

By Penny Saver

Do you have extra time on your hands that you don't know what to do with? Leisure time is something to cherish because there are so many things that you can do. If you have projects or hobbies, spare time is relaxing and fruitful. You could always bake a cake, build a bird house, take Fido for a long jaunt, ring up old friends, knit a sweater or paint a picture. Better still—you could take a course in some subject that interests you.

You don't even have to leave your living room to become a student of almost any language in the world, to take refresher courses in typing or shorthand (or even start from scratch), to learn the latest techniques in mental calculations or to learn how to play an instrument. Do any of these things the "fun" way—take a six-week course, complete on four long-play high fidelity records.

Each course comes complete with lesson books. The method is an audio-visual technique. In languages, for example, you listen to pronounciation, see the written words and phrases in your book, then repeat the same passages.

Some of the languages available in these 40-lesson courses are French, German, Russian, Spanish, Italian, Hebrew and Japanese.

Are you on a "ban the bulge" campaign? Reduce in "record time" with a course on reducing. These records contain 80 exercise routines designed to improve your figure fast and easy. All the above courses come complete for $11.95.

If you're planning on a world cruise in the near future, there are 20-lesson courses that would be ideal for you. Learn Swahili, Indonesian, Vietnamese, Korean, Turkish or Arabic, to name just a few, for $4.20 per language.

Turn your living room into a classroom. Give me a call at 382-3131 if you would like to learn any of these courses.

But Even Winnie Wig Has Social Register

GAL'S BEST PAL IS 'EXTRA' HAIR

By PAT DUFOUR

Dufour

If any little green men with antennas sticking out of their craniums decide to take a space flight to Victoria, they'd better head for the beauty shop I was in this week. They'll feel quite at home.

Being a fairly conventional type of female who balks at the effort of washing her unfashionably long hair herself, I'd decided to treat my tresses to a professional dunking. Instead, I almost ended up as a candidate for a psychiatrist's couch.

Not being the best organized of women, I was late and had no time to glance at the battery of dryers, waiting like soldiers to add me to their ranks. It wasn't until my wet locks were all gussied up with pins and net that I looked at the rest of the hot-head army. It was enough to make any gal burst her bandanna!

Stony-eyed as any Martian, my companions sat, minus the customary knitting or magazines, each chalky face blanked out with the rather disdainful pout often worn by top-flight fashion models. What's more, each had decided to leave the rest of her body behind her!

Too late, the proprietor of this setting for a space horror movie explained that this was wig day and that there was no danger of an Indian war party dropping in to give me a scalping treatment in reverse. By the time my body had collapsed in the chair my knees were banging out a war dance of their own.

Luckily, my mother had borne herself a fairly healthy daughter and it wasn't long before I was coherent enough to carry on a conversation. None of my fellow victims were in the mood for light talk so I turned to the hairdresser for a spot of verbal enlightenment.

He appeared as anxious to indulge in a little small talk as I was. He admitted, "A wig can't answer you back but a chorus line of them isn't exactly the most animated in the world!"

According to his statistics, at least 10 per cent of his customers now assign their beauty shop visits to these removable stand-ins. Imagine the time they save for bridge games and the spending of 'mad money' when Winnie the Wig takes their place.

With nothing else in their heads, the wig brigade can pamper itself under the dryers, completely oblivious to the closeness of dinner hours or the family mending to be faced.

There's one drawback. Even in this inanimate world, class distinction has crept in to disturb the status quo. If Winnie started her career in Europe she can boast of being among the elite. But, if she decided to go into business in Hong Kong, she's liable to end up blushing pink to the roots.

One of the "working class" variety was shown to me by the hairdresser. The Hong Kong beauty, in for a dye job, had ended up with a pink streak right down her back.

The explanation was, "In Hong Kong, all the hair, whatever color or texture, is put into a big bucket and dyed, so the owner is never sure of what she's getting."

The hairdresser didn't want to be named but confessed that he's sure that some of the strands had their beginning on the rear end of a horse. Small wonder they have a tendency to blush under certain conditions!

Even so, the plucked horse should still be able to retain a certain amount of pride — when fitted on an elastically banded base, its fly-swatter can still demand a price tag of $69 on the Canadian market.

If Winnie hails from either England, France, Germany, Holland or Italy, she can afford to play "hard to get". Her "second head" will have to pay $425 for the pleasure of her company. This is because Winnie is definitely "the real thing," no false hair in her coiffure. What's more, it comes in the color that Mother Nature intended it to be.

Statistics being what they are, this means that Winnie may take her time in crossing the ocean to her new home, especially if she's anything as rare as a natural honey blonde or redhead!

Outshone as she is by a mademoiselle, even a Hong Kong hussy can afford to sneer at yet another of the wig "women". This is the one that owes nothing to nature and takes up her stand at drug stores, asking to be picked up and demanding only $6.95.

Even at that price, she's hardly worth giving head room. One bargain Betty that I saw this week, in for a hair-do and fitting job, looked amazingly like a ball of wool that our Newfoundland mauled during her puppyhood.

While my visit to the beauty shop hasn't yet resulted in convincing me on the merits of having "another woman" around the house, even if I do carry her on my head, it has given me a new guessing game. Now, when I go to parties, I'll be able to test my ability to spot the hoi-poloi in the wig world. It always pays to know the best people!

DEAR ABBY . . .

Visit Your Parents, Love Them Now

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: About seven years ago you printed a letter in your column signed "TOO LATE".

Abby, I must have read that letter a hundred times. I finally cut it out and framed it because I realized that I had been guilty of neglecting my own parents in their declining years. I made up my mind then and there that I would turn over a new leaf while there was still time, and I did.

Not only did I try to make up for the times I was "too busy" to go to see them, but I explained to my children how important it was to give their grandparents the pleasure of seeing them often. Now I know that I will never have to write a letter like the one I framed. Perhaps if you were to print that letter again, it would do for others what it did for me. God bless you.

GRATEFUL

DEAR GRATEFUL: Thank you for your letter. Curiously enough, the custodian of a cemetery wrote to tell me that "TOO LATE'S" letter had been framed and was hanging in the chapel. What a pity that it would be read by those for whom it was also too late. Now much more good might be accomplished were it posted on the bulletin board in a high school. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat at home alone, loving me just the same. It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them. I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have their parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think.

TOO LATE

CONFIDENTIAL TO K. H. P.: In Canadian courts a man is innocent until proved guilty. Surely every child has the right to the same consideration from his parents.

ANNUAL MEETING FOR DOCTORS

Crash Victim Study Urged

OTTAWA (CP)—Regional organization of accident services would improve the chances of the injured getting neurosurgical treatment, a Winnipeg neurosurgeon said Friday.

Dr. Rankin K. Hay, assistant neurosurgeon at the Winnipeg General Hospital and head of the neurosurgery department at Deer Lodge Hospital, also urged that general practitioners be given a broader training in emergency care of accident victims with head injuries.

Dr. Hay submitted his proposals to the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada, which concludes a three-day annual meeting here today.

He said accidental injury constitutes a grave social and public health problem. The incidence of such injuries is rising annually. Head injuries have become the commonest cause of death in children, in adolescents and in adults under age 45.

But statistics in Manitoba showed that only a small proportion of these cases were treated by neurosurgeons.

NEED QUICK AID

"The relentless annual increase in numbers, the high incidence of early death, particularly after rural accidents, and the increasing frequency of multiple injuries all suggest that a greater effort must be made to bring adequate, efficient and timely aid to these patients.

"Much could be achieved by the more efficient use of transport and hospital facilities which already exist but more could be achieved if accident services were established and organized on a regional basis."

In other scientific sessions of the college, an Edmonton surgeon held out some hope for fat girls who haven't been able to shed pounds through present reducing methods.

Dr. Peter A. Salmon of University of Alberta hospital reported on four patients who underwent intestinal operations to bypass a portion of their small intestines. The result was a dramatic and apparently permanent weight loss without the constant diarrhea experienced in other intestine bypass operations.

Among examples given by Dr. Salmon were a 386-pound woman whose weight dropped by 166 pounds after the operation and a mother of five who reduced from 240 pounds to 165.

Dr. Salmon cautioned that the operation should be applied only where all existing reducing methods fail to give permanent weight reduction.

Drs. G. T. Quigley and R. T. Richards of Hamilton, described their work aimed at finding a rapid, efficient and inexpensive test that could guide doctors in making a decision whether to perform a caesarian operation in an effort to save an unborn child.

Such a test has been worked out by the Hamilton obstetricians to establish the presence of a recently-discovered substance found only in the blood of pregnant women.

They have established normal levels and are making further tests to see whether variations indicate if a need exists for a caesarian operation.

RUSSIA LAMENTS SINS OF BRITAIN

MOSCOW (UPI) — Miniskirts, dirty words and gangsterism are undermining Britain's old traditions and the more's the pity, a Soviet newspaper lamented today.

The labor union newspaper Trud said even the staid old Times of London had let the mod look overtake its front page which ranked for years with Speakers' Corner as a London fixture.

"Changes and new tendencies are undermining the morals and ancient traditions in all fields of British society," the paper said.

In a rare bow to the capitalist heritage of the West, it added, "Youth has risen up against the traditional British style which used to be considered a blueprint for good taste all over the world."

Among the symptoms of Britain's decline, as seen by Trud:

to get into "fighting trim"

- Television sound men have to get into "fighting trim" before learned panel discussions so they can switch off literary figures and artists before they spout dirty words over the air.
- London's center is "enveloped by night spots, striptease clubs and semi-legal and illegal blue movie houses . . ."
- Dirth, lewness, pornography which existed before in secret now show themselves impudently . . ."
- Britain has "borrowed" gangsterism from America, and the Home Office has "borrowed" mass fingerprinting from America's Federal Bureau of Investigation.
- "Former ideals are dead or dying."
- Even Piccadilly Circus is going to be rebuilt.

No wonder, the paper says, British clerics are wondering about the fate of their flocks

Think Young Could Be Best Answer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Thinking young may keep you that way, a University of Michigan researcher says.

If you can't run a mile, lift 100 pounds, or do all those vigorous things you did in your youth, it may be because you really don't want to.

"There is no doubt that our population loses its physical conditioning and it may be completely unnecessary," says Dr. James Conway.

Dr. Conway told the Midwest regional meeting of the American College of Sports Medicine Conference Friday night that his research has revealed no apparent medical cause for a man losing the capacity to do exercise as he grows older.

"I think the trouble with most of us is that life really gets easier as we get older," Dr. Conway said.

"We're not used to exercising as much and gradually lose our desire to do so. Our muscles get weaker. Then we lose our inclination, feel less and less like doing it."

Dr. Conway discovered that heavy exercise for persons with high blood pressure is no handicap for them and, except for severe cases, normal work and activity can be done with no cause for worry.

KERR
. . . fired

Feud With New Governor Costs Educator His Post

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — The University of California regents Friday fired Clark Kerr, 56, the school's $45,000 a year president who has been sharply criticized by newly-elected governor Ronald Reagan.

The regents voted 14-8 to dismiss Kerr immediately. The action was taken in a closed session and announced by university vice-president Thomas Sorenson.

Kerr has been president of the university for almost 10 years, during which it has doubled in size and in recent years, has been the scene of rebellious student demonstrations.

TRIMMED BUDGET

Reagan was elected last fall after a campaign in which he criticized the university administration. When he took office three weeks ago his first move was to trim the university's budget and recommend that tuition be charged.

The governor was at the regents' meeting Friday but was not present when Kerr's dismissal was announced. He had left earlier, after telling the regents that higher education in California would have to "come down to the cold world of reality."

Kerr annoyed Reagan last weekend when he ordered a freeze on university admissions, because of Reagan's economy drive.

The university president also was outspoken in his opposition to the idea of instituting a tuition charge for the first time in the 100-year history of the school.

REVERSE ORDER

The regents reversed the freeze order, and called on the university to trim costs wherever possible without reducing the quality of education. But they took no action to impose tuition, postponing a decision until March.

A mild-mannered, bespectacled man, Kerr was a key advocate of California's master plan for education, under which the university, state colleges and junior colleges are organized into a co-ordinated system to put low cost higher education within the reach of every Californian.

Police Offer of Help Refused by Drinker

A man who refused a police offer to call him a taxi and was caught driving a short time later was convicted of impaired driving Friday.

Steve Kaminsky of 119 Superior will be sentenced Monday. He pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Police testified they found the accused drinking rice wine when they were called to his house Jan. 8 on an assault complaint.

His common-law wife, who he admitted assaulting in a court appearance earlier this week, said Friday "he was drinking Sakki like it was going out of style."

The officers told the accused to leave the house and not to drive his car. He refused their offer to call a cab and walked from the house.

He was arrested about 20 minutes later after officers spotted him driving his car on Michigan

Prosecutor Peter Birkett alleged Kaminsky had a previous conviction for assault which the accused denied. He will be sentenced Monday after the Crown has had an opportunity to check on any criminal record.

Traffic Fines

Fined for careless driving when they appeared in traffic court Friday:

Blair James Masson, 1346 Merritt, $35; John David Hughs, 1010 Balmoral, $35; Glenn Smith, 2770 Thorpe Place, $35; Pauline Blay, 2748 Dunlevy, $40; Melvin Greencorn, 975 Bewdley, $40; David Hogarth, HMCS Yukon, $36; Freeman Perry, 1679 Pear, $40, and Frederick Smith, 914 Runnymede Place, $35.

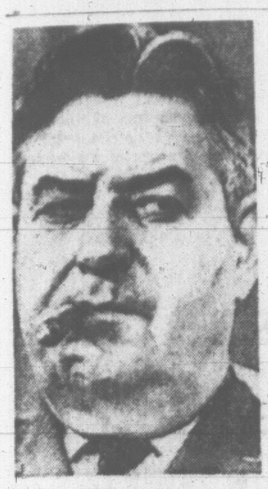
More Polling Places Likely



GEN. LeMAY

Multiple polling stations may have only limited effect in getting out the municipal vote but city council must at least make the effort, business leaders were told Friday by the mayor.

"We must make it more convenient to vote," said Mayor Hugh Stephen at a meeting of Chamber of Commerce directors.

He noted that experience in B.C. shows that spreading the polls around does not always increase the percentage of voter turnout in local elections.

There has been intermittent pressure on Victoria council to provide for more than the one polling station traditional in civic elections here.

The chamber is among agencies and individuals promoting multiple polling stations and recently went a step further in suggesting a form of ward system.

'BAD SYSTEM'

"If what is meant is one alderman for one district of the city, I think it was a bad system in the past. We got away from it and I wouldn't want to go back to it," Mayor Stephen said.

He pointed out that corporate voters could be more particular about getting registered for civic elections.

He said he know of one large business with considerable property holdings which has registered as its voting agent a person who left the city five years ago.

Reeve Hugh Curtis added that it would be a good project for the chamber to encourage voter registration well ahead of local elections.

"Some sort of assistance rendered by a body such as this would be most effective," he said.

Police Force In Space Called For

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired Gen. Curtis LeMay says he does not think the United States is "in space for a peaceful purpose."

"The Russians are not in space for peaceful purposes" either, he adds. "They have a program that is militarily-oriented. If we are going to keep peace in space we will have to have a police force out there."

LeMay said the United States is not ready to develop a weapons system in space "but we ought to learn as much as we can about it and, if weapons systems are needed there, be in a position to build the first and build the best ones first."

The former air force chief also called in a wide-ranging interview for a stepped up air and naval offensive in Vietnam. The U.S. has no choice but to win the war there "and win it quickly," he said.

He discounted chances of a negotiated settlement. ". . . Even if we did negotiate I don't think it would stop the war unless we completely give in . . ." he said.

In calling for military victory, LeMay added: ". . . To pull out of Vietnam now would mean that dozens of Vietnams would break out all over the world, immediately."

Man Fined $25

A man who argued too loudly in a hospital lobby over a cab fare Thursday night, was fined $25 Friday.

Henry Rogowski, 432 Wilson, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by shouting when he appeared in central court.

Police were called to the Bay Pavilion at Royal Jubilee Hospital after Mr. Rogowski, who police said had been drinking, became abusive when his taxi driver asked for a payment on account if he was to wait while the accused was visiting a patient.

LOST ITEMS

Is Someone Missing 12-Foot Boat? Keys?

Somewhere there's a man in a raincoat.

That's hardly news. But the raincoat isn't his. He picked it by mistake when he left a New Year's reception at Victoria's City Hall.

His raincoat is at the city police station waiting for him. It was turned in by another guest at the same reception who would like his own coat back.

The raincoat is just one of innumerable items turned in to area police, gathering dust while they wait for their owners to call.

The Times' new "found" column, appearing each Saturday, has already brought a number of people together with lost items since it first appeared three weeks ago.

Five wallets, two fire extinguishers and several sets of keys were reunited with their owners last week, for example.

Here are the reports from area police on items they are holding for this week:

Esquimalt police have a 12-foot clinker boat, a girl's purse with change in it, a lighter, a bank book and a ring with car keys and accessories on it.

At the Sooke RCMP office, there is a fancy brown umbrella left in the post office some time ago.

A small change purse containing some money was found at Clover Point and turned over to city police. They also have a pair of men's glasses with dark rims, a girl's Triumph bicycle, an RC book of worship and a brown leather club bag.

And there are two wallets, one with the name of Anthony Wilson in it and one the property of Wayne Waddell. Police have not been able to trace these two.

Saanich police report a sum of money was found at Saanich and Tattersal and turned over to them this week as well as two boys' bicycles, one a Robin Hood brand and one a CCM make.

More Teen-Age Facilities Again Urged by Stephen

CANDIDATE for leadership of Conservative Party is John Maclean, 40, who ran unsuccessfully in the 1965 federal election in Leeds, Ont. He announced this week he would stand for the top Tory post. (CP Wirephoto)

An off-the-street place for youths to gather socially was supported by Mayor Hugh Stephen Friday at a meeting of Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors.

"What are we doing for the kids who are roaming the streets?" the mayor asked as discussion took place on corporal punishment and the use of school board facilities for Scout and Cub activities.

He said there should be a hall or similar club-like place where youngsters could play ping-pong or engage in some limited recreational activity.

From there, he said, youth workers would be in a better position to channel young interests into productive areas.

Banker William Armstrong agreed there should be a broader youth program in Victoria, and that the 9:30 curfew for up to 16-year-olds should be enforced.

Mayor Stephen said there are difficulties involved in the curfew enforcement. Deputy police chief Ray Maitland, a guest at the meeting, pointed out that lack of parental co-operation was the greatest obstacle to enforcing the bylaw.

He said parents accuse police of harassing their children when they sometimes ask them to pick youngsters up late at night at the police station.

Mayor Stephen said he thought greater use of school facilities after school hours could be expected in view of the stated policy of new school board chairman Peter Bunn.

Theological Colleges Bid for Cash Support

This Sunday will be observed in Anglican churches of Vancouver Island as Theological Sunday.

Members of the faculty and students at the Anglican Theological College at the University of British Columia will preach at all services.

In Christ Church Cathedral, Victoria, Walter Donald will be heard at the 9:30 p.m. and 11 a.m. services.

"Theological Sunday provides an occasion for church people to give financial support to the theological college in their area," writes Very Rev. Brian Whitlow, dean of the cathedral.

"As in all places of higher education, the costs of operation are only partially met by students' fees. In the secular universities, the balance is met from public funds. In the case of a theological college, it must come from the church at large."

The morning service in First Baptist Church will centre on the theme Receptive to the Highest (Luke 10:38-42).

Royalty to Attend Service in Abbey

LONDON (CP) — Westminster Abbey will mark Canada's Centennial this summer with an "ecumenical" service attended by royalty.

The Dean of Westminster, Very Rev. Eric S. Abbott, says the Archbishop of Canterbury will preach the sermon and there will be "full participation" by Roman Catholics.

The Archbishop of Canterbury preaches rarely in the twin-towered Gothic abbey, which is one of two churches in Britain that come under the jurisdiction of the Queen rather than the head of the Church of England

It was decided to hold the service June 30, the eve of Canada's birthday, the dean said, because July 1 falls on a Saturday and many of the London diplomatic corps head for the country at weekends.

The Queen and Prince Philip will be in Canada at the time, but the monarch will be represented by a member of the Royal Family, perhaps the Queen Mother.

The request for a special service came from Canadian High Commissioner Lionel Chevrier.

"We want to do this for Canada — it will be our contribution to Canadian unity," Dr. Abbott says.

"Unity" — in its ecumenical meaning, in the sense of international understanding and in gestures of goodwill towards non-Christians — was the watchword and driving force behind the Abbey's 900th anniversary celebrations in 1966.

This historic symbol of the marriage of church and state, its origins as a Thames island monastery lost in the mists of antiquity, was built on its site in what now is Parliament Square by Edward the Confessor, the Saxon saint-king. It was consecrated Dec. 28, 1065, a few days before Edward died.

Rebuilt in its familiar Gothic form in the mid-13th century, the abbey is a treasury of England's noblest traditions. Kings and queeens have been crowned, wed and buried here; poets, statesmen and warriors lie beneath its worn stones; and the earliest British Parliament met in the octagonal Chapter House adjoining the towering nave.

During the year that ended Dec. 28, 1966, the ancient church in a series of 50 special services embraced the world and its faiths — not always without protest from a rearguard faction among Anglicans.

Dean Abbott expresses quiet satisfaction with the years. achievements.

"On the ecumenical side, certainly we have made progress. The abbey has been thronged with Christians of all traditions, notably in the week of Christian unity held last January, when prayers were said by Anglicans, Roman Catholics, Orthodox, Baptists, Congregationalists."

Opposition was swift and angry, however, when the abbey tried to move beyond Christian ecumenism in its pursuit of unity.

Anglican clergy picketed Westminster on Human Rights Day, Dec. 10, when the dean took part in a service for members of non-Christian faiths, including Jews, Moslems, Buddhists and Hindus.

Dean Abbott went out to meet the picketers and offer greetings.

"Some of them were friends of mine," he recalls with a grin.

The service was one of "silent intercession," broken only by readings from the holy books of the various faiths. About 250 attended.

"There were no, spoken prayers, so that no one's faith was compromised," Dr. Abbott says.

"It was an extremely significant occasion."

Later The Church Times, leading journal of the Church of England, registered strong disapproval of the move. Its objections boiled down to a feeling the Christian faith and Anglican tradition were somehow being diminished, "watered down," the dean says.

"That is an understandable point of view, but there is another, positive one to be considered.

"The abbey belongs to mankind, and I feel we are moving into a phase where men and women of goodwill are really willing to work together without feeling any one has a monopoly of truth."

AT ST. JOHN'S

Anglicans to See Divine Healing By Hand Laying

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Times Church Editor

Healing by the laying on of hands, as described in the Bible, will be practised in St. John's Anglican Church, Victoria, next Thursday and Friday.

The ancient practice will be demonstrated by Rev. Alfred W. Price, DD, now serving his 25th year as Rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, in downtown Philadelphia.

He will conduct a Mission of Christian Healing at three services in St. John's at 10:30 a.m. Thursday and at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Friday.

After the two morning services there will be a question and answer period.

Dr. Price believes that many physical disorders stem from diseased minds and spirits.

REV. A. PRICE

"Practical co-operation between priest and physician is therefore increasingly desirable in overcoming the subtle disorders of body, mind and spirit.

"Christian belief is that all healing comes from God. Spiritual healing and medical practice are not opposed—they are complementary."

* * *

Dr. Price declares he is not a faith healer, but "a channel of God's health-giving power, flowing through a sacramental act of the church."

He says a mission of healing is a demonstration of the gospel in action.

"To heal the sick—in body, heart, soul and mind—was a basic command of Our Lord. The power of the healing Christ, the great physician, has always been latent in the church.

"Never has this power been more needed than it is today."

•

A man of towering physical structure, Dr. Price is sometimes called The Tall Man of God.

He is warden of the International Order of Saint Luke the Physician, a non-monastic assembly which is open to clergy, doctors, psychiatrists, nurses, social workers and persons wishing to restore the ministry of healing to the church.

Dr. Price has conducted missions of Christian healing in 37 of the United States, as well as in Canada, England, Scotland, Ireland, Holland, Germany and South Africa.

He holds degrees from the University of Pennsylvania, Harvard Divinity School and Webster College and has studied at Oxford University, England, and the New York School of Social Work.

He has been identified with many rehabilitation programs in U.S. veteran's hospitals.

Speaking of his 25 years as rector of St. Stephen's, Philadelphia, Dr. Price says:

"I have seen a most remarkable resurgence of activity in this 145-year-old parish, as well as an astonishing growth in public awareness of Our Lord's commandment to preach the gospel and heal the sick."

ELECTED president of Christ Church Cathedral Women's Parish Guild is Mrs. J. F. K. English. Mrs. T. Evans is first vice-president; Mrs. F. G. Bass, second vice-president; Miss Mildred Chrow, third vice-president; Mrs. M. H. Barrie, recording secretary; Mrs. D. Weaver; corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. C. Riach, treasurer; Mrs. W. C. Winkel, publicity secretary.

SERVICE UNITES FAITHS

Victoria's fifth inter-church service will be held in First United Church Sunday at 3 p.m.

It will be conducted by Rev. Dr. S. J. Parsons, president of Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

Prayers will be led by Very Rev. William Bullock, rector of St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral; Rev. Robert Morris of First United Church; Dr. Parsons and Major R. D. McKerracher of the Salvation Army.

The two main addresses will be given by Rev. Roy Hoult of Christ Church Anglican Cathedral and Rev. E' Laura Butler of Metropolitan United.

Monsignor Michael O'Connell, chancellor of the Roman Catholic diocese of Victoria, will give the invocation.

Victoria Citadel Band of the Salvation Army will lead the congregation in hymn singing.

Throne Speech Will Be Worthy of Occasion

Bennett Ready for Dramatic 100th Punch?

By JOHN MIKA

Times Legislative Reporter

Mika

Premier Bennett has an innate sense of the occasion so it can be expected that he will strain his ghost writers' talents to the utmost to provide a throne speech Tuesday worthy of the first meeting of the 28th legislature on the 100th anniversary of the start towards responsible government in this province.

Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes' measured tones undoubtedly will recount stirring moments of the past and urge the province to scale greater heights in the next century.

And then what? remains the question that makes politicans' hearts thump and pundits' mouths go dry as the annual game of guessing the premier's plan goes down to the wire.

Can't Win

It's a game that really can't be won because the throne speech is designed to unveil some intentions and hide others as surprises for later in the session.

I would expect that the premier will try to dramatize the historic aspect of the day by announcing some sort of memorial—physical or statutory. But I haven't the foggiest what it might be—except that I doubt it would be secession from Canada or a decision to return the seat of government to New Westminster permanently, electrifying as these gestures might be.

The currents of political change are picking up pace. Nineteen totally new legislators are trying to make their marks. The province is nearing the threshold of multi-millions of population and $1 billion of budgetary expenditures. So this inevitably will be an exciting and important session.

Not Whole Hand

Here's a list of some certain, some probable and some possible cards that the government will deal out in the next 8½ weeks before prorogation this side of Good Friday, March 24. Some, likely, will be shown in the opening speech but don't expect to see the whole hand.

The certainties are that there will be major bills to strengthen the securities act, require disclosure of true interest in credit transactions, reduce abuses in door-to-door selling and provide a $500 home-purchaser grant for first-time buyers of voting age.

It's almost certain that the home-owner grant will be raised and this could go as high as $125.

It is certain too that the groundwork will be done to streamline the Municipal Act extensively. The likelihood: there will be fewer restrictions on who can seek office; a compulsory contribution by subdividers to park and school lands; a reduction in the traditional 60 per cent needed to pass a referendum so that a simple majority will suffice; and — just possibly — freedom for communities to hold local option votes on Sunday afternoon commercial sport and entertainment.

There will be mention in the speech of B.C.'s third international trade fair opening in May and, in this connection, there may be announcement of trade missions to South America (where the premier thinks we have a chance of developing a hemispheric common market), to Scandinavia and Russia and to China but, if the turbulent cultural revolution continues, India might be substituted.

The program for chronic care probably will be expanded, either with a boost in the present 50 per cent provincial grant for building public facilities to speed buying out commercial nursing homes and hospitals or some scheme to extend the $1 a day benefit to custodial cases in private establishments. More day-care centres where working mothers can leave children will be forecast.

Allowance Hike

Moves to broaden the scope of the B.C. Medical plan for its third consecutive year are a good bet and look, too, for a general revision upwards in social welfare allowances, perhaps as much as $25 a month, to keep pace with living costs.

At least half of the present provincial old-age assistance supplementary payments will be continued even though the new direct federal bonus will guarantee needy pensioners a mimimum of $105 income a month. Although Finance Minister Bennett won't like it, it is probable that Premier Bennett will feel constrained by public pressure to pass on all of the supplement ($30 monthly maximum) whether or not Ottawa continues rebating half of it to the provincial government's coffers.

Labor probably will be appeased with elimination or moderation of the ex parte injunctions it hates so much. But there may be more restrictive amendments on strikes, perhaps banning those by crown company employees as a result of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway stoppage which angered Mr. Bennett because it spoiled a long-awaited chance to boast that at last the railway was operating completely in the black.

WCB Appeals

Also in the labor legislation field, there may be some important amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act, particularly to provide an independent committee for appeals from the administering board's decisions which have been criticized frequently and bitterly even by those outside labor. There probably will be some concrete moves to meet some of automation's problems through re-training programs.

A harvesting manpower scheme may be introduced for farmers' benefit and they probably will get their requested protection from the depredations of prospectors and miners permitted by hoary laws handed down from the days when all B.C. was a wilderness.

The field of education likely will see some major changes, partly because of the student explosion (in temper as well as numbers) and partly because the new federal-provincial agreements drastically alter the relationship of the senior governments in this area.

I expect a slight increase in the school board grants formula, a boost to about $60 million in grants for the universities, special financial help for out-of-town college students, a significant raise in the money-for-marks program and possibly jurisdiction over nursing training being transferred from the health to the education department.

There likely also will be establishment formally of a regional college for the Okanagan and promise, again, of early action to set one up on the Island, too.

It will be a surprise if we don't hear something specific about the government's plans for exploring and developing the continental shelf and this under-water area might be lumped with commercial fisheries to justify a new department of government (another portfolio which might be on the way is a youth ministry).

In the category of new developments, announcement of a major smelting plant on the way; extension of the PGE to Stewart (or, for that matter, a formal offer to buy the CNR's Prince George-Prince Rupert branch line); one or two more pulp mills and perhaps efforts towards international agreement on paving the Alaska highway are all within the realm of possibility.

And the premier must have been reminded by the steel band music of the Caribbean recently how much more he would like to hear the roar of an oxygen-fired blast furnace making steel in B.C. I wonder if we'll hear echoes of this favorite tune of his?

With the Bank of B.C. chartered, it's almost a cinch we'll hear of the university-supporting Crown corporation's plans to build a skyscraper building in downtown Vancouver to house the bank and various government offices on a lease basis.

And, looking to the future, it may be that the premier will announce resumption of work on the seven-storey archives building here alongside the Centennial museum. It must give him shudders to think of such an ugly skeleton remaining on view three years from now when election thoughts will be returning, so he'll have to get a move on, restraint or no restraint.

With the new seat distribution acknowledging the political power of city folk, it's patently obvious there will have to be some major strides taken to meet the problems of urban centres.

There will be a boost in low-rent housing grant appropriations, mayhap announcement of special negotiations to make a deal on tranist buses acceptable to the metropolitan areas, substantial increases in provincial help for main city roads, and breakthrough on the lower mainland's much-delayed new First Narrows crossing.

Who knows? The municipal affairs department might be renamed to urban affairs or at least see its staff expanded.

10th Ferry?

For Vancouver Island, which is showing signs of really becoming nasty over the coming hearings on truck freight increases, the government may offer some help by announcing it will ask VMD to build a 10th ferry after all so it does not have to refuse trucks trying to board its fleet for the Georgia Strait crossing. This might ease the truckers' pressure for freight rate increases and hence ease the political pressure building up against the government.

It could be that this session will see some additional advances towards comprehensive legal aid and it would not be startling if the government agreed to the Social Credit League's convention request that it set up a Good Samaritan fund to compensate persone injured or damaged in some way while voluntarily coming to another's rescue or assistance.

Appointment of an ombudsman to rescue citizens from the tangles of red tape in government offices has a reasonable chance but, to show it is not opposed to its bureaucracy, the government will pat civil servants on the back with an average wage increase of about 5 per cent.

Promise may be made to start soon the 35-mile connecting line across the steep waterside cliffs between Kelsey Bay to Port Hardy, which would provide a breathtakingly beautiful drive a la Malahat to the intended permanent terminal for the Prince Rupert ferry service.

With the shots of hunting season still ringing in our ears, we may see the legislature take the next step towards requiring youths and firearm lawbreakers to pass examinations before they can get their hunting licences.

The travel bureau probably will be given an augmented status as well as staff and, if the cabinet is feeling devilish this year, we might see the recreation department establishing a small but full-fledged feature film unit to put Beautiful B.C. before the mass-market movie audience.

Two major reforms may finally be conceded by an unwilling premier — a Hansard record for the House debates and a permanent provincial voters' list based on house-to-house enumeration.

All this has been a view of the government side of the coming session which is a little easier to predict because cabinet actions and reaction provide a form chart.

It's harder to figure out what the opposition is likely to raise — particularly this year with so many newcomers who are much younger, brighter and tougher than the assembly chamber is used to welcoming.

But undoubtedly, the opposition will try to nail a wriggling government on the secrecy surrounding its financing of power development, pollution control, programs for the chronically ill and handicapped, especially children.

The Sargent royal commission on "bugging" will not deter many opposition members from pressing the government benches for legislation now to protect the privacy of citizens. And some backbenchers might join them on this demand.

There will be several rows over the Workmen's Compensation Board if it is not reformed along the lines of a royal commission report last year that took 250,000 words to point out how it could be improved.

The thievery of inflation, and this government's contribution to its causes and failures to ameliorate its injustices — as the opposition sees it anyway — will fill many an hour.

But there will be some things on which both sides agree. Hard to think of just what these might be, but I'm sure ... oh, yes, the need for divorce reform will find general agreement. But it's a job for Ottawa, of course.

Well, that's the way I see it. If you want to know which were bullseyes and which went wild, ask me about 1,000 speeches from now.

Newcomers Will Make New Session Exciting

The very makeup of the 28th B.C. legislature should make its first session an exciting one.

Nineteen newcomers — almost one-third of the 55-member House — are bound to make it a very volatile chamber where almost as much attention will be devoted to making reputations as making laws.

Many of the newcomers are rank greenhorns but there are a number of civic government veterans and even one who was a short-term MP.

Not counted among the newcomers, although he wasn't in the last House, is Thomas Audley Bate (SC—Vancouver South) who returns after a 1964 defeat ended a decade as an MLA.

With all these freshmen, even political veterans will feel the need of a score card for the first couple of weeks of the session, so here's some capsule biographies of the new boys.

Thomas Rodney Berger (NDP — Vancouver-Burrard) was born March 23, 1933, in Victoria, grew up in Vancouver and graduated with a BC in 1955 and an LLB in 1956 from UBC. Married, with two children, he is a prominent labor lawyer who spent one year in Ottawa as an MP in the short-lived 1962-63 Parliament.

Harold Peter (Herb) Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) was born April 24, 1925, in Kelowna, and holds BA and B.Comm. degrees from UBC and a teaching diploma from the University of Italy. Also married, with three children, he was general manager of the B.C. Lions football team and now is in business.

Barrie Aird Clark (L—North Vancouver-Seymour) was born Nov. 17, 1932, in New Westminster, and studied history and theology at UBC. Married, with three children, he is a civic councillor and was a well-known television and radio broadcaster in Vancouver.

Eileen Elizabeth Dailly (NDP — Burnaby North) was born Feb. 15, 1926, in Vancouver, and attended the provincial normal school. Married, with one child, she is a former teacher, chairman of a school board and a metropolitan board of health member.

Minister without portfolio Isabel Pearl Dawson (SC—Mackenzie) was born Oct. 13, 1917, in Camrose, Alta. She is married and has one child and is a former CWAC officer, rural route mail carrier and the 1962 Good Citizen of Powell River.

Garde Basil Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) was born July 17, 1924, in Banff. He holds BA and LLB degrees earned in 1949 at UBC, is married, with four children. A practising lawyer and businessman, he is a former executive member of the B.C. Red Cross Society, and past chairman of the Canada-Mexico Davis Cup team.

Ernest Hall (NDP—Surrey) was born Sept. 16, 1929, in Manchester, England, where he attended grammar school and college. Married, with two children, he is a former teacher, soldier, hospital worker, administrator, Hudson's Bay Company branch manager and provincial secretary of the NDP.

Minister without portfolio Patricia Jane Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) was born Dec. 7, 1930, in Vernon, and obtained her education at UBC, Vancouver General Hospital, Texas Junior College in San Antonio and Aldrich Memorial School in Rochester. Married, with two children, she is a registered nurse and former instructor at the Rochester State Hospital and once was chosen as the Vernon Beauty Queen. She is a director of the Vernon Winter Carnival and the Vernon Hospital Auxiliary and belongs to numerous clubs and societies.

Minister without portfolio, Grace Mary McCarthy (SC—Vancouver-Little Mountain) was born Oct. 14, 1927, in Vancouver, and is president of a florist firm. Married, with two children, she is a former elected commissioner and vice-chairman of the Vancouver parks and recreation board and is a governor of the Vancouver Aquarium Association.

McDIARMID

Howard Richmond McDiarmid (SC—Alberni) was born June 3, 1927, in Edmonton, and won his B.Sc. from the University of Alberta in 1949 and his Doctorate of Medicine from the University of Manitoba in 1954. Married, with four children, he is medical superintendent of Tofino General Hospital.

George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney) was born Jan. 5, 1908, in Winnipeg. He is a widower and has three children. He is president of an auto agency and has served as B.C.-Yukon president of the Boy Scouts of Canada.

Raymond Parkinson (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) was born March 22, 1922, in Winnipeg, and obtained a BSc in psychology and an MD from UBC and is a psychiatrist certified with the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons at Ottawa. Married, with four children, he is in private practice but also serves as a clinical instructor at UBC. He spent 1940 to 1946 with the RCAF and now is a member of the boards of Vancouver Halfway House addiction centre and Vancouver Indian Girls' Cooper House.

Donald McGray Phillips (SC—South Peace River) was born Aug. 24, 1929, in Woodstock, N.B. Married, with two children, he is secretary-treasurer of one auto agency and a director of the second. He is a past president of the B.C. Junior Chamber of Commerce and a senator of the International Junior Chamber of Commerce and is a past president and life member of the Dawson Creek Centennial Band.

Dean Edward Smith (SC—North Peace River) was born Oct. 21, 1926, in Champion, Alta., and is a certified life underwriter with a diploma from the University of Toronto. Married, with two step-children, he is a district manager for an insurance firm, a former Fort St. John alderman and past district president of the B.C. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Frederick Justin Vulliamy (NDP — Burnaby-Willingdon) was born April 30, 1913, in Winnipeg. Married, with four children, he is a partner in a firm of chartered accountants.

Robert Lloyd Wenman (NDP—Delta) was born June 19, 1940, in Maidstone, Sask., and attended the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon Teachers College, Florida State University, Redlands University and Western Washington University. Married, with one child, he is a teacher and has served as an executive member of the B.C. teachers' Federation.

Louis Alan Williams (L-West Vancouver-Howe Sound) was born May 22, 1922, in Glenavon, Sask., and holds a bachelor of laws degree from UBC. Married, with three children, he is a lawyer and a retired RCAF flight lieutenant.

Robert Arthur Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) was born Jan. 20, 1933, in Vancouver, and obtained a B.A. and M.Sc. in community planning from UBC. He is single and a town planning consultant.

Evan M. Wolfe (SC—Vancouver Centre) was born Nov. 8, 1922, in Edmonton, and obtained a B. of Comm. from U. of A. Married, with four children, he is a chartered accountant and president of an auto agency. He served as an RCAF flying officer from 1943 to 1945, is past president of Vancouver Curling Club, director of the Vancouver Mounties Baseball Club and chairman of the Broadway East YMCA advisory board.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Today's hand shows Eric Murray at work again. We approve of his double of one spade but sort of shudder at his two no-trump call. On the other hand, Eric's style is to bid when it is his turn and his two no-trump bid produced fine dividends.

Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead—♥4

Sammy Kehela in the East went to three hearts and if South had only passed even Sammy would have had to work to hold his loss to down two. Down two undoubled and not vulnerable would not have represented any real loss but if South had doubled three hearts, Eric's two no-trump call would have been a real loser.

As it was the bid produced a five International Match Point profit for the Canadian star.

South won the opening heart lead and returned the suit. East won and shifted to a diamond. South allowed this to run to Eric's queen and Eric led another heart. South ruffed in dummy, discarded a diamond on the ace of clubs and lead a diamond for a finesse. The finesse lost to Eric's king and because the defence still had to make two trump tricks, South was down one.

At the other tables, South was allowed to play two spades and with the play going the same way, these South players made the same eight tricks for a plus of 110 points instead of a minus of 100 points.

These small swings don't amount to much in a rubber bridge game but in IMP competition they actually determine who wins and who loses.

In the IMP scale a swing of 170-210 points is worth 5 IMPs. A swing of 750 points which represents the difference between a vulnerable game and a slam is worth 13 IMPs so that three such part-score swings more than balance a missed slam.

'No Harm Done' By Tailing Leak

MANY COLORED nightshirt for men was shown in Rome during Italian spring and summer fashion show. It is red, white and blue checkered cloth. Dutch actress Talitha Pol, wife of Eugene Paul Getty, son of the U.S. millionaire, sits at left. (AP Wirephoto).

Tailings from Western Mines, earlier this week reported leaking into Buttle Lake, are not doing any harm, company president Harold Wright said today.

"It's only ground-up rock," said Mr. Wright from Vancouver. "There's nothing in it."

He was replying to criticism by lawyer Anthony Sarich, who is representing Campbell River Water Board in its bid to prevent dumping of mine tailings and treated effluent in the lake.

DISCOLORED AREA

After flying over the lake this week, Mr. Sarich said there was "a discolored area stretching from the mouth of Myra Creek at least a couple of miles into the lake and at least 100 yards wide."

The stain, he said, was caused by leaks in the tailings pond situated above the lake level.

Said Mr. Wright: "When the leaks were pointed out to us we immediately took steps to repair them.

"To the best of my knowledge nothing is escaping now."

The discolored area would soon disappear as the heavier tailings sank to the bottom, he said.

"It's just the same as the sludge brought down to the lake by rivers."

My People Highlight Of Concert

By DON VIPOND

They are four girls and two boys, armed with a clarinet, cello, guitar, piano, drums and a voice.

If that isn't strange enough, they call themselves My People.

My People were everybody's people Friday night in a four-hour folk song and blues orgy on the old Lansdowne campus which had the crowd still riding high at midnight.

Plenty of talent belted it out on the stage at the Young Building for the 170 bodies who came along to lend an ear and throw a dollar in the pot for retarded children.

But it was My People and their singer, a 16-year-old Esquimalt High School student who brought the party to life.

PERT BLONDE

Dena Noble is a pert little blonde with a great big voice. She can sing Summertime so you forget the rain. And there was a real lick of the torch in What Now My Love.

The daughter of a tenor and with three sisters who sing too, she is hoping for the big break that will put her in the entertainment business one of these days.

"It's all I live for," she says of singing.

Both My People and Friday night's bash were produced by a talented 19-year-old musician, Helga Bo. She's a piano teacher and sometimes song writer who handles the group's arrangements too.

And the name?

FOUR MONTHS

Well Helga had this boyfriend and she didn't know what to call him so she finally settled for the nickname People. Then she wrote this song about him and had to gather the group together to put it on tape. They've been rolling along for about four months now.

Other members are Carol Braithwaite, clarinet; Anne Valdal, cello; Jim Greive, electric guitar, and Bruce Wright, drums.

The concert, Sounds of 67, brought out the best among local and travelling coffee house talent to give their free time to charity, among them Valdy, John Martyn Booker and Beverlie and Charles Robertson.

Many Many Many Ahead of You At Goldstream

If you were unable to find space in the camp or picnic sites at Goldstream Provincial Park near Langford the annual visitor figures show why.

Released Thursday, they show the highest rate of increased use among all B.C.'s parks last year—an astounding 78 per cent.

The visitor count leaped to 151,900 from 85,400 the preceding year, at a time when many parks including most on Vancouver Island, barely held their own or lost some public favor.

The overall increase for the province's parks was 5.1 per cent with 5,155,200 visitors tallied

Among Vancouver Island parks, the figures, with 1965 totals in brackets, were: Ivy Green 114,400 (117,400); Little Qualicum Falls 101,500 (100,900); Miracle Beach 158,500 (192,800); Sproat Lake 165,200 (151,600).

LEVESQUE . . . Feb. 20

Levesque At Uvic Next Month

Quebec's Rene Levesque will come to Victoria Feb. 20 to address the newly-formed Victoria Political Forum, forum organizer Gordon Pollard announced today.

A 22-year-old University of Victoria graduate, Mr. Pollard last year organized the highly successful Uvic political science forum.

Last term's academic curriculum was spiced with public lectures from such renowned figures as Harvard economist, Dr. John Kenneth Galbraith, civil rights crusader James Meredith and ex-Russian premier Alexander Kerensky.

Hampered by a lack of funds and chaffing under student council controls, Mr. Pollard resigned from the Uvic forum to set up his own organization.

Lord Charles Moran, the late Sir Winston Churchill's personal but not so confidential physician, will address the forum on April 4.

"We plan to present a leading national or international political personality every month," Mr. Pollard said.

Free-Loading Duck Hits Show Biz

TORONTO (CP) — An early-morning dip almost cost Smitty, a wise-quacking mallard duck, a chance in show business.

Until Friday, Smitty was hanging around the Port Arthur waterfront, free-loading off bits of lunch thrown to him by workmen and delaying a trip south.

One of Smitty's daily rituals was his early-morning dip, which turned out to be a mistake Thursday.

The duck didn't find out how cold it was—30 below—until he hopped out of the water. Before he could shake the water from his feathers it froze. Then Smitty froze to the ice.

Workmen from the Provincial Paper Co. mill came to his rescue, cut him free and carried him inside to thaw out.

Then someone talked to someone in Air Canada and the next thing Smitty knew he was all set to fly south by plane as far as Toronto—and showbusiness.

Stan Simmons of the department of lands and forests, was on hand to meet Smitty at Toronto International Airport. Smitty proved to be just what the department was looking for—a good-looking mallard drake to star in their exhibit at the Sportsmen's Show in March.

Special Warrants Approved

The provincial cabinet Friday approved special warrants adding almost $1 million to its authorized expenditures on the eve of the new legislative session.

Largest of the warrants was for $500,000 toward construction of the $3.5 million paved access road which had been promised to link the instant town of Gold River, on the wst coast of Vancouver Island, with tidewater 7.8 miles away at the head of Muchalat Arm.

Next largest was a $200,000 addition to the fully expended $750,000 appropriation for grants in aid of senior citizen housing.

UNDER-ESTIMATED

The orders also revealed a major under-estimation of the costs of insuring government vehicles — $75,000 had to be added to the original appropriation of $35,000 for repairs and maintenance of crown vehicles.

A $100,000 addition was made to the $610,000 administration of justice account, $25,000 added to an earlier special warrant of the same amount to help set up a crop insurance office, $50,000 added to $282,552 already spent for court reporters and $10,000 was pumped into the finance department's internal contingency fund of $38,500.

The cabinet also approved a construction progress payment of $116.962 for the trade fair and sports building at the Pacific National Exhibition grounds in Vancouver, bringing its one-third share to $270,662 so far. The other portions will be covered by the federal government and Vancouver city.

Appeal Judges Rap Association Of Optometrists

VANCOUVER (CP) — A panel of B.C. appeal court judges this week threw out charges by the B.C. Optometric Association against one of its members accused of unprofessional conduct.

The court ruled void charges against optometrist I. F. Hollenberg that he placed advertising at the entrance to his place of business and acted as an agent of a person other than an optometrist.

"The gross and inexcusable nored and violated the plainest provisions of the (Optometry way in which the association and executive council have ig-Act) . . . goes far beyond mere irregularity," said the judgment.

The charges were first laid against Mr. Hollenberg in June. 1962, but a hearing did not proceed. The association then elected new board members and a new set of charges was prepared, said the appellate court judges.

The court said the new board members, instead of being elected to the unexpired terms of their predecessors, were elected for a full term of three years and this was clearly contrary to the Optometry Act.

Cabinet Blamed By Teachers In Walkout

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec today was confronted with spreading teacher strikes in a conflict that one official warned could be protracted.

Talks went on in an effort to settle the biggest walkout affecting 9,000 Roman Catholic teachers and 217,000 students in 500 Montreal schools.

But Raymond Laliberte, president of the 50,000-member Quebec Corporation of Catholic Teachers, said of disputes elsewhere that he was not optimistic.

He accused the Quebec government of exerting pressure on local school commissions which forced them to cut their salary offers.

Jean Lesage, leader of Quebec's opposition Liberal party, brought the school situation into the realm of political controversy Friday night, saying at Drummondville that the strikes resulted from failure by the Union Nationale government of the province to act in time.

TEACHERS ACT

In the Yamaska area southeast of Montreal, 500 Roman Catholic teachers who have been on strike since Nov. 24 were taking counteraction against a provincial government threat of strike-ending court injunctions.

The teachers, whose strike has left 8,500 students without classroom instruction, decided Friday night to resign as a group, effective immediately.

The provincial government has said it will seek injunctions against the Yamaska teachers Monday now that the teachers have rejected the government's choice of a mediator for the dispute.

Inquest Tuesday In Traffic Death

An inquest into Greater Victoria's first traffic death this year will be held Tuesday at McCall Brothers Funeral Chapel, Vancouver and Johnson.

William Dealey, 92, of 37 Cadillac Avenue, was fatally injured when struck by a car as he crossed Douglas near the Trans-Canada Highway Thursday night.

The inquest will start at 7:30 p.m.

Warm Clothing Needed

Warm used clothing is urgently needed for the flood victims of Florence, Italy.

It is being collected locally by the Victoria branch of OXFAM (Oxford Committee for Famine Relief) and will be shipped to Florence without charge by Air Canada and Alitalia.

Clothing will be received at the Italian Hall, 804 Kings Road, Sunday between 10 and 12 noon. All next week it can be delivered to the following:

Thunderbird Motel, 600 Douglas Street; Friends Meeting House, 1831 Fern Street; Totem Travel Service, Mayfair Shopping Centre, 3117 Douglas; Hudson's Bay store (parkade entrance), 1701 Douglas; Mrs. Yolanda McKimmie, Italian vice-consul, Suite 206, 1400 Camosun Street.

"The need is urgent," said Mrs. Robin Skelton, chairman of Victoria's OXFAM committee, "because money cannot buy the warm clothing that is needed in the flooded areas."

The original request came from Mrs. Elsa Oiesen Bement in Florence. It was addressed to her sister, Mrs. A. J. Tullis, who lives at 1014 Verrinder, Victoria.

Cuban Executed; He Lost Refugees

The broadcast identified the man as Enrique Gonzalez and said he was a member of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency. A U.S. government spokesman denied two weeks ago that Gonzalez was a CIA agent.

HOME GARDEN

Perfect Seeds Or No Fruit

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

The gardener whose life has been spent on the Pacific Coast fails to appreciate the excitement of picking fresh fruit from trees in his own garden.

It is only when you move to the coast from a climate unsuited to fruit growing that you crave fruit trees before lawns and flowers.

Being unfamiliar with fruit tree culture is no hindrance to acquiring a property containing established trees, but the illusion that these will be weighted down with luscious fruit is soon dispelled.

After enjoying a wealth of blossom in spring, and watching eagerly the formation of tiny fruits, it is disconcerting to find most of the crop lying on the ground sometime during June.

Consternation grips the newcomer and he pleads for an explanation: what has happened? What have I done wrong?

In seven cases out of 10, this discarding of small fruits, or "June drop", is caused by circumstances beyond the powers of the gardener.

HOW IT OPERATES

It may help if we spend a few moments considering how a fruit tree operates.

From the gardener's point of view the purpose for growing fruit trees in the back garden is to obtain fresh, luscious fruits.

From the tree's point of view the purpose for producing luscious fruits is to provide food for seedling trees which will perpetuate the species. Any fruit that does not contain perfect seeds is useless as far as the tree is concerned.

Perfect seed depends on perfect pollination of the flower.

First, the flowers must be perfect, especially in regard to the parts which are linked with seed production. These parts can be damaged by sharp frosts or low temperatures and either of these conditions at flowering time can result in faulty or incomplete pollination.

Secondly, the pollen has to be dry. A rainy period across flowering time can ruin the pollen.

WIND, RAIN

Rain also decreases the activities of insects on which pollination depends, and high wind speed will keep flying insects grounded. Both prolonged rain or high winds at flowering time have a marked effect on pollination.

Thirdly, most of the fruits we grow in the home garden produce flowers which cannot use their own pollen. They require the pollen from another flower on the same tree, or the pollen from another variety of the same fruit on a nearby tree.

Many fruit trees in gardens depend on a tree in the neighborhood for pollination and if that tree is cut down the crops on the home tree are severely reduced, or may cease entirely.

After the flower petals have fallen we can see the tiny fruits develop, but this is no indication that complete pollination has taken place. In fact, several weeks will pass during which the fruits increase in size.

FASCINATING STORY

It is usually June before the tree discards all those fruits in which seed is not developing. Plant scientists are just beginning to unfold for us the fascinating story of how this shedding of useless (or seedless) fruits is activated but the finding to date are too involved to discuss here.

Once the tree has dropped the useless fruits, it then adjusts the remainder of the crop to its general health and vigor. It will also drop the wormy fruits, those in which the partly formed seeds have been eaten by a worm, in line with the policy, no seed, no fruit.

Since the final crop which remains on a tree is proportionate to the general health and vigor, it stands to reason that well-fed trees will carry more fruits than those which are under-nourished.

Many gardeners religiously feed their trees every year but quite often it is done too late in the season to have any effect on the current crop.

APPLY CLEARLY

Orchard experiments have shown that fertilizers (or plant food) must be applied early enough to reach the root zone by the time the trees become active and late January to early February is recommended.

The gardener can use a straight 6-8-6 or similar general garden fertilizer, or a mix especially compounded for fruit trees in the coastal regions. The Department of Agriculture and your fertilizer supplier can advise you on the mixes obtainable.

In January, with plenty of rain around, the food can be spread over the root area of a mature tree, that is, from a circle two feet from the trunk to a circle one foot beyond the outermost spread of the branches.

In February, when rainfall is usually less, one inch holes are punched six inches deep and one foot apart over the same area, and a measuring teaspoon of food put into each hole, after which the holes are filled in with soil.

The foregoing applies only to mature fruit trees. Young trees not yet in full producton are naturally vigorous and therefore do not require the same feeding schedule.

WEEK'S WORK

From now until end of month, sow seed indoors of lobelia, snapdragon, petunia, carnation and verbena.

Clean the glass inside and out of greenhouse or sunroom where seedlings and plants are being grown.

Any bed or border which can be reached without standing on the wet soil should be hand-weeded on suitable days. Every weed seedling or tuft of grass removed now is one less for later growth.

A few peat pots of two-inch size are good for sowing broad beans individually. Arrange the pots closely in a shallow box or a flat, fill with screened compost and keep indoors until germination takes place. After the seed leaves are free from the soil, begin putting the flat out in a sheltered place during the warmest part of the day, gradually increasing the time outdoors until the flat is left out by a south-facing wall for the plants to grow. Transplant pots with beans growing, when garden soil can be worked.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Q. I started freesias last August in pots and they are growing in my slightly heated greenhouse. There is no sign of flowers. Is there any way for me to hurry them along? — L.M., Shoal Bay.

A. Freesias like sunshine as well as a little bit of heat to bring them into flower and there has been more cloud than sunshine for the past month. We hope freesias will burst into bloom by the end of the month!

Q. I have recently taken over a property with an extensive orchard of various kinds of apples which I am told are all good varieties. The growth of some seems to be rather wild and others appear to be normal. Should they all be pruned the same amount and, if so, when should this be done? Uncertain, Gordon Head.

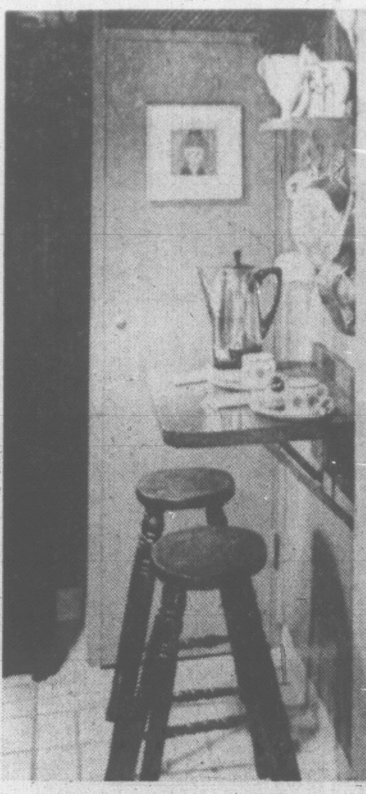
A. If you are planning on selling some of the crop, it would pay you to have the pruning done this year by tree specialists who would know the correct amount to remove from the various trees. It might help if you could find out from a previous owner or from neighbors the names of varieties. Fruit tree pruning is done from now until about end of February.

Recruits Sought By Accountants

The Institute of Chartered Accountants of B.C. is seeking new recruits to the profession in high schools and universities.

Interviews with students interested in accountancy will be conducted at the University of Victoria, Jan. 23 through Feb. 3.

Next month special vocational tests sponsored by the institute will be given in high schools on Vancouver Island and the mainland. About 1,200 students took the tests last year.



INSTANT TABLE is devised for a tiny kitchen by attaching a fold-away model to an unused wall. Utensils are stored above table for convenience and to add to decoration.

Drop-Leaf Shelf Proves Answer

By PAULINE GRAVES

Do you put up with uncomfortable room situations becase you feel they are hopeless?

You might be surprised at the number of possible solutions, if you put your mind to it. Shown here is a prime example, in the home of decorator Dorothy Paul.

In this older house, as built originally, no provision was made for breakfast or quick snack eating and becase of the small size of the kitchen, no extra space could be utilized there. The tiny service porch, needed for overflow storage of canned goods and cleaning equipment, seemed to offer no solution either, but there was wall space above a low cupboard. This provided the answer.

A small drop-leaf shelf serves beautifully as a table. Just 36 inches wide and 18 inches deep it is large enough for two people to use. Sturdy board of one-inch plywood forms the back and is bolted to the wall. To this, the drop leaf is attached. Metal arms hold the ledge firmly when it is up, and fold out of sight when it is down, flat against the wall.

In addition to functioning for quick meals, the shelf has proved convenient as an extra counter when bringing in groceries or sorting laundry.

To make the wall attractive, copper, brass and porcelain kitchen utensils hang on colorful hooks and, above, a narrow shelf holds greenery and decorative accessories.

KING-SIZED YEAR AHEAD

CHICAGO (UPI) —The biggest thing that's happened to the bedding industry in decades is bigness.

The first billion-dollar sales year the industry ever had kept the cash registers ringing in 1966, with A. R. Gennet, president of the National Association of Bedding manufacturers, crediting it all to king-sized beds.

The extent of the bedding size revolution can be seen in industry estimates that more than one-third of the total volume for mattresses and box springs last year came in super sizes. In higher-priced lines the big beds accounted for half the sales volume.

FOR HOMEOWNER, WORKER

Do-It-Now Campaign Pays

The winter employment campaign is once again in operation in the Greater Victoria area to remind everybody of the importance of having as much work as possible done during the winter months.

The benefits derived by a community, working together to defeat winter layoffs, are not easily seen since it is impossible to record the multitude of little jobs that residents have done. Nor is it possible to tabulate the hours, days or weeks of extra work provided by these jobs. However, the broad figures recorded over a period of several years do indicate the increasing prosperity during the winter months.

THREE TIMES HIGHER

In the winters before the winter employment campaign began to show results, the number of unemployed persons in the area used to be 2½ to three times larger than the summer total. For instance in the period 1957-58 the number of unemployed persons went down to 2,206 in the summer and increased to 6,202 in the winter. However, as more people began to practise campaign suggestions, seasonal layoffs were steadily reduced. For the past eight years the increase has averaged only 72 per cent of the summer totals.

STEADY DROP

Expressing the gains thus made as a percentage of the labor force might clarify this picture still further. For instance, in the winter of 1957-58 the unemployed persons were 12.08 per cent of the labor force; by 1958-59 this was reduced to 11.09 per cent; in 1959-60 it went down to 10.28 per cent, and by progresseive steps over the following years went to 8.29, 7.8, 7.64 and 7.1 per cent last winter.

Some people like to see the benefits expressed in dollars, therefore, while several other factors are involved, the following data published by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce may serve to indicate the advantage of steady winter employment. "Monthly cheques cashed in the Victoria Clearing Centre during the Februarys of the past five years, expressed in millions of dollars were: 1962—181, 1963—206, 1964—219, 1965—270, and 1966—320.

Ships Bring Thrill

Even landlubbers are inclined to agree few sights are more thrilling than a ship under full sail.

This could be one reason for the perennial popularity of the sailing ship as a decorative motif. Some families are lucky enough to own scale models of actual sailing vessels or authentic ships in bottles. Pictures are easy to get, of course, but they lack the dimensional quality that is so fascinating in a scale model.

PUZZLING THOUGHT

Four black cows and three brown cows give as much milk in five days as three black cows and five brown cows give in four days. Which kind of cow is the better milker?

Answer: Brown is correct.

STRAW IN THE WIND QUERY

What country in the world has the most windmills? Holland? Not so. Holland has some 400 windmills, but there's a country in southern Europe with over six times that number. Hint: It's a country whose provinces include the Azores and Madeira Islands. What country is that? If you don't know, guess.

Answer: It's Portugal, whose windmills in active service number 2,300, with 40 more in the Azores and 20 in the Madieras.

EXERCISE FOR FUZZY MATH FANS

Said I. M. Quick: "I am thinking of a number which is twice as large as the number which is 4 more than one-third of the one I have in mind."

Quickly, what number does the speaker have in mind?

Answer: The second number referred to is one-third of the first and four more; this number is one-half of the one of which the speaker is thinking; two times the second is two-thirds of this number and 8; 8 being one-third. the number is 24.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR ABC's?

If a fifth of A is equal to a fourth of B and a third of C, and if the difference between A and C is 50, what are the three numbers, A, B and C?

Answer: The numbers are: A—125, B—100, C—75.

THE STRANGE ESCAPE

A prisoner who escaped from a federal penitentiary was recaptured and was persuaded to tell how he had made his getaway. He explained that after cutting through steel bars of his cell with emery dust obtained from the prison machine shop, he found that the 30-foot rope he had also managed to steal and conceal, lacked 20 feet of reaching the ground. Because of a leg injury, he could not risk dropping the 20 feet and pondered for a moment what to do. Then, he said, he recalled a funny story of a man in an odd predicament who cut off the top of a rope and attached it to the bottom. So that gave him an idea. He cut the rope into two equal parts and, tying them together, had a rope long enough to reach the ground.

At this point in his story, of course, prison officials expressed disbelief. But the prisoner convinced them he had actually done this. How?

Solution: The rope was not cut in two, but was separated into two lengths by untwisting, and the two lengths were tied together. This, of course, made the rope nearly 60 feet long.

PLAY A ROUND OF GOLF

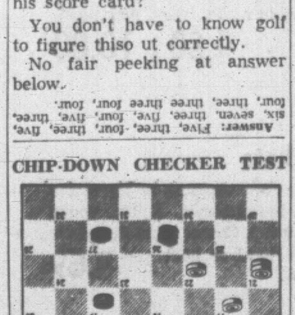
On an 18-hole golf course, Dubb, playing "lucky" and better than his usual game, did the first nine holes in 41, and the homeward nine in 33. He did the even-numbered holes in 32. His five 4s were at the 3rd, 10th, 13th, 17th and 18th, and his seven best holes were 3s, including three in succession. He had one row of three holes where his score was the same as the hole number. What was his score card?

You don't have to know golf to figure thiso ut correctly.

No fair peeking at answer below.

Answer: Five, three, four, three, five, six, seven, three, five, four, five, three, four, three, three three four, four.

CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST



It may interest you to learn that White's king on square 21, right, is slated to clear the board of opposing men. But, of course, White must lay some groundwork for this endeavor first. White side, moving up the board, to move first and win in four moves is the challenge. Let's see if you can mastermind the winning plays.

Long-time checker champ Millard Hopper provides his solution below, if needed.

Solution: White 12-8, Black 4-11, White 7-13, Black 26-17, White 13-6, Black 1-10, White 21-14-7-16-23-32.

Answer: She's twenty years old this year (1967).

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

The United States announced several weeks ago that they would issue a special stamp to honor Expo '67. Now other countries are following suit, the latest being Czechoslovakia, which has promised a set of six, as well as a miniature sheet.

The latter will be printed in four colors and will depict the skyline of Montreal as seen from the Czechoslovak pavilion, a drawing of which is also included in the design.

The sheet will be a 3 crown value (or about 20c in our money).

Botswana's new definitive issue was released Jan. 3. The set of 14 values replaces the Bechuanaland provisional series overprinted "Republic of Botswana" which has been in use since the country realized its independence Sept. 30.

The new stamps all feature the birds of the territory in full color and will make an interesting addition to any thematic collection.

Another new definitive set may be expected Feb. 1, when the Turks and Caicos Islands will issue 14 denominations running from the 1d to the £1.

All will illustrate local industry and sport, with the exception of the 3sh. 10sh, and £1, which will feature a map of the islands, the coat-of-arms, and the Queen, respectively.

* * *

Antigua will shortly release a set of four Constitution Day commemoratives, all featuring the colony's "rising sun" flag. For the first time, this British West Indian island will bear its new title "State of Antigua."

On Jan. 2 Ceylon issued four stamps to mark the first anniversary of the Poya holiday system, of which most of the world would have been undoubtedly unaware had there been no stamp collectors to spread the tidings.

It seems that while under British rule the island observed Sunday as the day of rest, along with the rest of us. This did not fit in with Buddhist observances, which are based on the more erratic phases of the moon.

So a year ago the calendar was adjusted accordingly. Only three days later, by the way, Ceylon issued a 25c value in connection with the Galle Municipal Council.

Revolt Against Mao Spreads in Five Areas

BATTLE of the wall posters has been a highlight of China's current power struggle. Both the Red Guards and the anti-Mao factions put up their signs to tell the citizens about the nation's political struggle. Much of what the outside world knows about the crisis is taken from these signs.

Radio Slams 'White Terror'

Times News Service

HONG KONG—Factions in the entire southwestern quarter of China are rebelling against Mao Tse-tung and his defense minister, Lin Piao, according to reports reaching here.

Battles have been reported.

These reports come on the heels of a Japanese dispatch Friday that there was speculating "the entire sountry now is in a state of rivil war."

The reported southeastern revolt against Mao and Lin has spread from cities, where workers were reported to have fought bloody street battles with Mao's Red Glards, to rural areas in the Pacific seaboard provinces of Chekiang, Fukien and Kwantung and the inland provinces of Kiangsi and Eastern Kwangsi.

Provincial radio stations, still in the hands of pro-Mao forces, warn of growing "white terrorism" by "reactionary and revisionists enemies" of Mao and imply these activities have the support of provincial party officials in many areas.

Chinese travellers arriving here claim provincial officials are behind the formation of "new Red Guard units" who oppose Mao and Lin and support the man Mao and Lin are trying to bring down, President Liu Shao-Chi.

OPPOSE MAO

Many say army units are refusing to support Mao's Red Guards, and some insist that troops in the Nanchang and Canton areas are actively supporting the pro-Liu forces.

Another Japanese account from Peking said high-ranking navy and air force officers were reported being denounced as reactionaries and plotters.

Lin is believed to be No. 2 man in the Chinese Communist party hierarchy under party Chairman Mao.

The correspondent of the Tokyo Yomiuri said Lin's statement appeared without official confirmation in one of the thousands of wall bulletins that have turned Peking into a paper-and-ink city.

Reuters news agency reported the Peking wall newspaper as saying:

"Now is total civil war. We have to fight resolutely on the one hand, but on the other we should not use violence without good reason."

The defence minister, 59, has been in the forefront of the battle to oust President Liu Shao-chi and restore Mao to the position of state power he once held.

Dr. Lin Yutang, noted Chinese author and scholar, predicted in Manila that the current upheaval in China will leave Mao's regime a "wreck."

Arriving from Taipei, Formosa, for a goodwill visit, Lin told a press conference: "The worst is yet to come. By the time the purging of Communist leaders is completed, Mao's machinery will be a wreck and shaken to the bottom."

Whether there is a civil war in the classic sense or not, there could be no doubt that the vast Chinese mainland and its 720,000,000 people were in the grip of civil confusion.

CHINA STORES 100 N-BOMBS?

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japanese military officials believe China already has nearly 100 nuclear bombs and will arm itself with medium-range ballistic missiles before the end of this year, the newspaper Nihon Keizai reports.

The paper also says the officials tend to think China will have intercontinental ballistic missiles around 1972 — three years ahead of the forecast made by U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara in November, 1965.

Sales Bugging Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Murray, counsel for a provincial royal commission on electronic bugging, said today he will investigate allegations of bugging in the car sales, real estate and financing industry.

Mr. Murray said he had received reports of bugging at several car sales firms and at two real estate companies and a finance company office.

"This bugging business certainly appears to be more widespread than I thought," he added.

Mr. Murray had said Friday he would investigate reports of equipment capable of bugging in booths in the showroom of a Vancouver car sales company.

OTHER REPORTS

He said today he had received a number of other reports since and planned to investigate. He described most of those calling him as former employees in the industries allegedly involved in bugging. He said most offered to testify at the Royal Commission.

Meanwhile, one car sales firm here Friday posted a $10,000 reward to any past or present salesman who can produce evidence that it engaged in illicit bugging of customers' conversations.

The royal commission was formed following allegations that Pat O'Neal, western organizer of the International Brotherhod of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Workers, had hired a private detective who placed electronic bugging equipment at a convention of the rival independent Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

In Victoria, car sales firms denied using any kind of bugging apparatus.

Said sales manager Norman Britnell of Thomas Plimley Ltd.: "We have discussed this matter and ascertained that none of the main Victoria distributors use bugging devices.

"The same goes for the finance companies we deal with."

KILLED FRIDAY when his stock car hit wall on practice run at Riverside, Calif., track was popular Victoria driver Billy Foster, shown above when he was presented with plastic-mounted edition of Times Weekend Magazine in 1965. Foster was featured by magazine after he became first Canadian to qualify for 500-mile race at Indianapolis. (See stories on Page 12.)

Ky Effigy Burned

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — About 3,000 chanting demonstrators today burned an effigy of South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky after he and his wife flew here from Brisbane.

The South Vietnamese leader, on a 10-day goodwill tour of Australia and New Zealand, was accorded a friendly and sometimes warm welcome when he drove from the airport to the city.

But at the government's official residence police armed with firehoses ringed roadblocks as demonstrators converged on the building which will accommodate the Kys during their stay here.

The demonstrators — some carrying North Vietnamese flags — exploded fireworks, shouted slogans and sang peace songs as they marched toward the barricades and mingled with 400 police.

A lifesize dummy of the 35-year-old Marshal Ky carrying the slogan "killer Ky" was set up on the sidewalk about 250 yards from the official residence and burned.

NEW WESTMINSTER

Anvil Salute For Session

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

The Hyack Anvil Battery will boom out its salute, some 4,300 distinguished guests and ordinary folk will rise from their seats and in will walk Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes in his ceremonial cocked hat and colonial uniform.

Another legislature opening will be under way — but it won't be in Victoria as it has for the past 98 years.

The ceremony begins at 3 p.m. Tuesday in New Westminster where the first B.C. legislatative council met for its opening. The 100th opening will be in the Queen's Park Arena there.

The centennial gesture will last only one day.

The legislature will be back here Wednesday for business as usual with Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) and Dr. H. R. McDiarmid (SC—Alberni) to move and second the reply to the Speech from the Throne temporarily located across Georgia Strait the previous day.

Every effort will be made to simulate the assembly chamber with which Victorians are familiar.

Carpenters have laid a plywood floor over the ice (it was kept frozen because the floor has an eight-inch tilt as a result of age) and on this they have erected a platform of the exact dimensions of our chamber.

Over this a plush red rug has been laid and the MLAs' benches and chairs, the elaborate Speaker's chair, the clerks' tables, the mace of authority and the sergeant-at-arms' desk will be transported from here Saturday to their new places.

A blue curtain, trimmed with gold, will form a backdrop behind the Speaker's position and green shrubbery will add more color along the platform's sides.

Overhead, radiant heating lamps will keep the 1,600 invited guests and 2,800 other spectators comfortable during the 1½-hour ceremony. Special loudspeaking equipment will let them hear the time-honored rituals.

10 PREMIERS CONTROL OUR FUTURE

For 100 years Canadians have been hoping that problems inherent in Confederation would disappear with time. Now it is becoming more and more likely we'll have to make a new beginning by renegotiating the original pact.

The fathers of this new Confederation will be the premiers. The opinions, ambitions, of these 10 men are becoming increasingly important to the evolution of the nation.

In an attempt to assess the true temper, The Times political columnist, Peter C. Newman, is talking with premiers, advisers, their critics and their constituents. The first of his reports appears today on Page 5.

DOGS GO TO THE PHILHARMONIC

Symphony Puppies Yelp and Paddle on Cue

NEW YORK (UPI)—twenty yelping, tail-wagging beagles invaded New York's Philharmonic Hall Friday night.

The dogs were supposed to be there—as performers. They turned out to be hams.

The musical canines were the soloists in Leopold Mozart's Sinfonia de Caccia, or hunting symphony, which calls for the barking of dogs.

When conductor Thomas Dunn gave the cue, the backstage barking began.

The laughter that greeted the barking was nothing compared to the eruption which followed the dogs' entrance. A door on the side of the stage opened and, led on by two men in full hunting regalia, they came—twenty beagles.

In informal formation they marched straight across the stage and out another door. But before you knew it, they were back again.

If the beagles seemed perplexed by the strange goings-on at first, by the second trip around they caught on and, like hams, seemed to be enjoying the applause.

One beagle lagged behind the pack, his tail wagging madly. Another strayed close to the audience, while a third sniffed the violin section.

By this point, you could hear none of poor Leopold's music. The laughter and applause were deafening. The dogs were the stars and they knew it.

Then one nervy hound headed straight for the first row. He was halted by a trainer. Another, more determined, got further, however, and had to be brought back by a gallant gent in the audience.

HERE THEY COME AGAIN and despite heroic efforts of Beagle Master John Gelsner the 20 young dogs fail to keep formation. They provided sound effects for Hunting Symphony in New York. (AP Wirephoto).

CERTIFICATION BIDS REJECTED BY BOARD

The Labour Relations Board has turned down two applications for certification at the Gold River pulp mill but a third union's bid is still under investigation.

Rejected were the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada. Reason given in both cases was that at the date of application "less than a majority of the employees in the unit were . . . members in good standing."

The International Woodworkers of America is seeking to vary its certification to include pulp workers. If successful, this would be the first time the IWA has gained a foothold in this segment of the forest industry.

Chemainus Seeks Identity In Makeup of Municipality

CHEMAINUS—Nine years ago Chemainus tried to secede from North Cowichan municipality.

The attempt failed.

Today, Chemainus still covets an identity of its own.

But according to Stafford Andrews, president of Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce, the district will settle for a change in the name of the municipality.

He will propose a change when he makes his swan song address to the chamber a tthe installation dinner tonight.

Mr. Andrews will cuggest the municipality be renamed Cowichan-Chemainus, or preferably Chemainus-Cowichan.

The retiring president says idea came from W. H. (Harry) Olsen, author of the local history, "Water Over the Wheel."

Mr. Olsen said Thursday: "After all, Chemainus is the meat in the municipal sandwich, with its heavy industrial assessment, and should be recognized."

Reeve Donald Morton said: "I think it must be a joke on Mr. Andrews' part.

"I know many people in Chemainus would still like to secede from the municipality, but they would have to pull out with less than half the assessment.

"That would mean leaving the giant Crofton pulp and newsprint complex in North Cowichan.

"Chemainus people want the rest of the municipality to pull out and leave the big industrial assessment, including the Chemainus mill, to be spent among less people."

Trip To Russia

Miss Ella Walker will give an illustrated talk on her recent trip to Russia in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Kirk Hall, Monday, Jan. 30 at 8 p.m. The lecture is being sponsored by the church choir and proceeds will go to its centennial project fund.

Immediate Start On Model Village

DUNCAN—First stages of the Cowichan Indian band plan to develop a model village and shopping centre at Somenos reserve are to be started immediately.

The band council announced after a general meeting that work will begin on improvements to existing roads and water systems are to be installed.

The development plan is the work of Robert Williams, town planning consultant, Vancouver.

For the first time, Cowichan Indian band is to be directly involved in, and participate in, preparation of the five-year forecast of local agency estimates.

These estimates cover agricultural, housing, water, sewer and roads development.

The band council will debate the estimates at a special meeting Jan. 27 and complete recommendations at a joint meeting with Ronald Sampson, agency superintendent.

Louise Underwood, band secretary, announced this week a forthcoming visit by Reg Kelly, son of the late Rev. Peter Kelly.

He will visit Cowichan recreation hall Feb. 24 and speak about his recent tour among the Maoris and Polynesians.

Mr. Kelly's tour was sponsored by the B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society.

No Danger Of Floods On Reserve

DUNCAN — After three days and nights of rain Cowichan Indians living along Mission Road are faced with the prospect of evacuating their homes.

But Abraham Joe said today: "My neighbors have decided to stay put in their homes this time no matter what happens."

Three families from Mission Road evacuated in December when a river dam broke and flood water invaded their property cutting them off from supplies and their children from school.

Tzouhalem Road at Koksilah Flats was temporarily closed Friday when flood water ran over it about six inches deep.

E. C. Bolin, civil defence coordinator, said Friday: "There is no immediate danger to persons or property but if we get much more rain the situation could change quickly."

There was overnight rain but the skies are clear today.

In three days the Cowichan district has had five inches of rain but there has been no combination of high tides and runoff of snow to bring a repetition of the December floods.

Cowichan Lake rose 14 inches in a 48-hour period but there is still a wide safety margin.

Club To Build New Health Unit

LAKE COWICHAN — The Kinsmen Club here has undertaken to sponsor building of a new health unit.

Preliminary plans have been drawn up and are awaiting approval of the Central Vancouver Island Board of Health.

Gordon Loutet of Lake Cowichan Kinsmen Club said today total cost of the new building is estimated at $45,000.

He said about $20,000 would have to be raised locally.

At present the health unit uses an old, rented building in the village.

Mr. Loutet said a site for the new unit will depend on whether or not the forthcoming district school referendum passes.

He said: "If the referendum is approved there will be former school land available."

Your new tax form, explained.

Guide to the T1 Short 1966

We've re-designed everything to clear up a lot of confusion.

For one thing, we've separated the new tax guide from your return.

For another, we printed the return in two colours, buff and white, so you can't lose your place. We ask the questions on the buff part. You answer on the white.

We've expanded the Simplified Tax Table so 9 out of 10 of you can use it.

And we've attempted to make our questions easier to understand.

Then to make everything thoroughly clear, we've worked out a Tax Guide that explains it all, detail by detail, including any special problems you might have.

If that still doesn't untangle all the knots, we have an understanding tax man at your local District Taxation Office.

Call him if you need him.

You'll probably get this new, understandable Tax Form and Guide in the mail by the end of January.

Be careful not to lose it before you use it. It's your Personalized Form.

If you don't get a Personalized Tax Form in the mail, it's probably because you didn't file last year.

Or you are a new taxpayer.

Or we don't know your latest address.

You can pick up a new tax form at the post office this year. Fill it out and send it in.

And next year, we'll send a Personalized Tax Form to your home. Everything clear?

The understandable tax form.

Eventually, we in this province may field a government that can see farther than the end of its nose in its utilization of natural resources.

That time, however, is still over the horizon. Mr. Bennett and his hydro-happy crew are still calling the shots, and the dissenter from certain of their policies can only hope that Social Credit's fundamentalist Jehovah will see fit to visit them with a sending of wisdom.

But we do have our moments, and British Columbia Appeal Court furnished one such with its knocking back of those three Pollution Control Board permits which would have made Buttle Lake a repository for mine wastes and mining town sewage.

It may be that the fountainhead of Campbell River's water supply wouldn't have suffered; and certainly the reporters who quaffed a brew of treated tailings haven't yet turned jaundice yellow or broken out in spots.

But those Pollution Control Board concessions established a precedent, and having granted concessions of that sort to the first comer, the grounds for refusing the next are shaky indeed.

Whether the Appeal Court decision will stand remains to be seen. Still, whether it does or doesn't, I suggest that by moving to remedy a doubtful measure, the spunky Campbell River water board has accomplished some worthy pioneering.

★

By this, I don't mean that individual conservationists — which is to say, those who believe in resource use foresight rather than hindsight — should rush to clutter the courts. What we need is an organization, and it would be well if we set about forming one with no more delay than need be.

I propose — or re-propose, if you will — a provincial parks association through which our objections against industrial and unjustified commercial intrusions into our parklands can be given weight.

This, of course, would be but one function of the body I have in mind. It would also press for legitimate road and trail building where such construction was indicated.

It would throw its weight behind the development of more winter playgrounds, on occasion sweeten the conservation and recreation department kitty by contributions from its funds.

In no way would it attempt to usurp the functions of government. Its role would be that of a non-governmental agency eager to work with the provincial authority.

But it would play watchdog at need; and if it developed as it should, its bark would be loud when danger threatened.

It would also have such bite as a sizeable group of voters can apply in political skirmishes.

★

The plain fact is that government — not ours alone, but any government — bears watching, if only because it tends to become too remote from those who elected it.

If an example is needed, we need look no farther than the United States, where the earlier efforts of President Theodore Roosevelt and the conservationists-in-office who followed him were, by the mid-twenties, being systematically undone.

Were it not for the efforts of the U.S. National Parks Association, our neighbor would to its loss and sorrow have far fewer wild parks today.

Down there, the pressures are still on, ruthlessly applied by those who see money to be made in exploitation of the people's preserves.

More than any other group, it was the U.S. National Parks Association that fought for the Act of Congress which in 1964 "blanketed" 88 wild areas totalling close to 15 million acres as the National Wilderness Preservation System.

The act permits some mining and certain other activities ... but only under the most stringent control, and where "deemed compatible with the wilderness concept."

Provincially, our parks need more and better protection than they are getting. But I don't think they will receive it until a large, concerned and united citizens' group hammers that fact home.

A grand prize of $25,000, to be used for education or career, is offered on the international level.

STAND BY FOR SNOW

IT'S POSSIBLE

Only 'Main Blast' Past

Weatherman Allan McQuarrie said today "we aren't out of the woods."

Mr. McQuarrie says that while the "main blast" has headed south there's a chance of wet snow mixed with rain Sunday. (At noon it was snowing in northern and western Vancouver Island.)

And when that's over "colder air" is expected from B.C.'s northern coast.

'LITTLE BETTER'

"Generally, though," said Mr. McQuarrie, "while we're not out of the woods, things look a little better."

There has been 6.53 inches of rain this month.

The normal accumulation for this time in January is 2.77 inches.

From Wednesday morning until midnight Friday, 2.65 inches fell on Victoria. It rained another .18 of an inch today.

Waterlogged basements aside, Victoria seems to have mended its fences and shaken itself dry. Roads are clear and no power and telephone lines are reported down.

A water main at the corner of Sooke and Phillips Road collapsed Friday, cutting off the nearby area for about three hours. It is now fixed.

But the floods next time?

Mr. McQuarrie has the right idea—his house is on a hillside.

STAIRWAY FATALITY ACCIDENTAL

Coroner Edmond St. Jorre ruled today that Frank Cavaz, 34, who died in hospital Wednesday after a stairway fall last Sunday, met death by accident.

While attaching no blame, the coroner said his official inquiry showed alcohol and loose canvas covers on the steps were contributing factors.

Mr. Cavaz was rushed to hospital early Sunday after he toppled down 11 steps leading to the basement of his home at 3211 Harriet, striking his head on a barbeque.

His investigation showed the dead man had been drinking earlier in the evening, said the coroner. And canvas covers on the steps were loose and could move about two inches.

RCMP Gets Man In N. Alberta For Bad Cheques

A man RCMP officers arrested in northern Alberta pleaded guilty to writing four bad cheques in Courtenay when he appeared in central court today.

Robert Isenor had his cases remanded to Feb. 3 for sentence.

Court was told one of the cheques payable to a jeweller was for a $105 wedding ring set. Another for $25 was used to pay a medical bill. The other two were cashed at stores for $20 and $15. All were returned by Isenor's bank last summer marked not sufficient funds.

Uvic Attracts Top U.K. Music Scholar

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A man with an astonishingly diverse and profound musical background has been appointed chairman of the division of music at University of Victoria, president Malcolm G. Taylor announced today.

Dr. Gerald Hendrie, a well-known British organist and music historian, is, at the age of 31, regarded as one of Britain's most erudite and gifted musical scholars.

●

He is now a lecturer in the history of music and musical palaeography at Victoria University of Manchester.

"To find the right man we made a long search on both sides of the Atlantic," says Peter Garvie, director of Uvic's School of Fine Arts.

"We are delighted and feel most fortunate that Dr. Hendrie is so strongly attracted to Victoria and to our program."

●

Under Dr. Hendrie's direction, the division of music will offer a full four-year program for the first time in the 1967-68 academic year.

Dr. Hendrie holds three degrees—MA, Mus.B and Ph.D from Cambridge University, is a Fellow of the Royal College of Organists and an Associate of the Royal College of Music in piano performing, organ performing and piano teaching.

●

Before going to Manchester, Dr. Hendrie was Director of Music at the Homerton Training College, Cambridge.

He has a long list of academic publications to his credit. He is now editing the Chandos Anthems of Handel for a new complete editoin of Handel's music, and is preparing a comprehensive history of English keyboard music.

A frequent piano and organ recitalist on BBC, Dr. Hendrie has composed several works, and is a choral and orchestral conductor.

He is married and his wife is also a musician, holding the degrees of B.Mus. and Ph.D from London University. She is a professionally trained conductor..

●

Dr. Hendrie says that in the time he has left over from music, he is an ardent yachtsman.

He will take up his new post in Victoria on July 1.

Tokens Taken

For milk truck driver Melvin Hendra it was a token theft. Several tokens in fact.

He told city police Friday someone entered his delivery and took 350 tokens worth 29 cents, 75 tokens valued at 27 cents and 25 tokens worth 25 cents.

All but $10 worth of the tokens were found in a vacant lot a short time later by a Maple Avenue resident.

DEBATE STARTED IN 1867

Archivist Denies 'Warping' History

By PETE LOUDON

Victoria city hall today denied a charge that it has been warping history to suit its own ends.

Historian James K. Nesbitt noted this week the city plans this year to mark the 100th anniversary of the transfer of the capital of British Columbia from New Westminster to Victoria.

Mr. Nesbitt says the actual transfer took place in 1868 and the city is jumping the gun by 14 months.

But City Hall's new archivist, Ainslie Helmcken, put the matter straight.

He says the vital debate on the transfer of the capital to Victoria did take place in 1867. He agrees the capital was not transferred until 1868.

DEBATED IN 1867

"We never at any time said 1867 was the date the matter was concluded. But it was the year of the major battle on the question, he added.

He said the proposed City Hall display of historical material relative to the event will follow through from 1867's vital debate to the date in 1868 when the proclamation was made and the capital transferred.

He said he brought this to the attention of a reporter from another paper, pointing out that unless the point was clarified, some historian would make criticisms. But initial published reports of the city's plans said merely the centenary of the transfer of the capital would take place this year.

(See Page 14 for a complete account of the related B.C. history.)

Mr. Helmcken, who is a grandson of one of the pioneer legislators involved in those early debates, said the proposed display will not add to the cost of the centennial year celebrations.

With the exception of certain items which will be borrowed from the provincial archives, all of the material to be used is to be retained as part of the permanent archives of the city.

Mayor Hugh Stephen today said he agrees wholeheartedly with Mr. Helmcken's stand.

Q. How many foreign countries have legal controls on dissemination of hate propaganda. What kinds of penalties are provided? A.S.

A. According to the report of the Special Committee on Hate Propaganda in Canada, tabled November, 1965, "most countries in Western Europe have group defamation legislation." The report mentions specifically the Netherlands, Austria, West Germany, Greece, Norway, Sweden, Italy, France, Switzerland. Penalties are prison terms or fines. Other countries with such legislation are: U.S.S.R., most of the other Eastern European states, Argentina, India.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

DRAGGING OPERATION

New Firm Eyes Shelf Minerals

An exploration permit covering the continental shelf off B.C. is being sought by a new mining company.

Conshell Resources Limited of Vancouver wants to search mainly for phosphates, phosphorites and manganese, company director and lawyer Hans Swinton told The Times this morning.

He said the application takes in the west coast of Vancouver Island and north to Alaska, covering "just about" the area of the Shell Oil permit and "just about" the extent of the continental shelf.

Phosphates and phosphorites are used in the preparation of fertilizers, becoming increasingly important in the production of food.

It has been estimated that in the second half of this century, for example, that at least 20 per cent of the food produced in the United State was due directly to commercial fertilizers.

BRITTLE METAL

Manganese is a hard, brittle metal frequently found in conjunction with iron ore. Its use is essential in the stel industry.

Ninety per cent of the manganese in the U.S. is consumed in this way. Thirteen pounds of manganese is used for each ton of steel produced and no substitute exists for it.

Mr. Swinton said it is "difficult to answer at this stage" how the exploration work will be carried out if a permit is granted.

Initially, it will probably be by dragging. This would be similar to drag-net fishing "but we would be after sedimentary stuff deposited on the continental shelf" and this would provide an indication of mineral deposits.

A special cabinet order last month placed a Crown reserve on the continental shelf to prevent what Premier Bennett termed exploitation by "squatters."

Mines Minister Donald Brothers said he is working with the attorney-general's department on the method of handling the application.

The application will "be held in abeyance until we can figure out some way of going about it."

The minister said the government knows there are "manganese nodules offshore which have already been located by the oceanographic department of the University of B.C."

Trade Minister Ralph Loffmark said "there are lots of possibilities out there, a couple that people haven't even come close to talking about."

One of these is copper, he added.

HUMMING STARTED TOO SOON

An Oak Bay man has spotted a hummingbird.

Charles Errington, 1434 Mitchell, said he has "never heard anything like this" at this time of the year.

And Dr. Cliff Carl, curator of the B.C. Museum, agrees it is unusual.

"But there was one seen on the Christmas bird count, in Cadboro Bay," he said. "It could be the same bird."

He said there are previous records of hummingbirds during the winter "although how they find enough food is beyond me."

Woman 'Critical' After Car Crash

A 20-year-old Goldstream Avenue woman remains in critical condition today after a two-car crash Friday night.

Three other persons also went to hospital.

Mrs. Ruth Lacey of 1177 Goldstream is in the intensive care unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital with severe head injuries.

Her husband George, 23, the driver of one of the cars in the crash at Haultain and Shakespeare shortly after 6 p.m., is in satisfactory condition with arm and minor head injuries.

The driver of the other auto, Joseph Schmidt, 36, of 1520 Pembroke, is in fair condition.

He suffered leg and arm injuries and head cuts while his passenger, Karen Bertelsen, 45, of 1410 Bay, received injuries to her shoulders and head. Her condition is satisfactory.

All four were admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The Lacey's small European car was found in a driveway 90 feet from the accident scene at the intersection, city police said today. It had been eastbound on Haultain.

The Schmidt car came to rest against a utility pole on the corner. It had been travelling north on Shakespeare.

Officers said both cars could be classified as wrecks.

Ron Maunder, 16, of 1761 Broadmede, suffered a broken leg about 7:45 p.m. when his motorcycle collided with a car driven by Helen Marshall of 1711 Carnegie Crescent at Shelbourne and Blair.

There's Little Time for Gossip For XM13-365 and His Friends

By TERRY IZZARD

People are always drifting into Brian Wright's house.

Right out of thin air they appear, without so much as knocking.

At meal times, even bed time, they turn up—unannounced and unseen.

Sometimes it's just to say "Hi." At other times they call for help.

Brian, 34, is one of 40 people in Victoria belonging to the Citizens' Band Radio Club.

His visitors "pop in" via the tiny, two-way radio tucked in a corner of the kitchen of his home at 2745 Fifth Street.

To his friends, Brian is XM13-365.

Those are the call letters which he proudly boasts in the rear window of his car which houses a second radio set.

Along with fellow club members and others who own sets on Vancouver Island, Brian is on call 24 hours a day.

Although the sets are basically fun things, they are often called upon in emergencies.

Only this week, club members helped establish a communications network to aid searchers on Green Mountain, west of Nanaimo, when a Victoria girl disappeared. She was found.

When fire broke out on Mount Douglas recently, five-club members sped to the scene to offer assistance.

Their help freed fire and policemen for other duties.

"We're not the same as radio hams," said Brian, 34. "Basically the radio should only be used to relay a legitimate message—not just for gossiping."

The sets cost $150 to $500 each and only thing needed to operate them is a free licence from the department of transport. They have a range of up to 15 miles.

"PUT THE KETTLE ON—I'm coming home," Brian Wright instructs his wife. With a two-way radio set—the other in the kitchen of his home—Brian has no worries about waiting for his supper.

SWIFT KICK FOR OTTAWA?

MacEACHEN
. . . slow motion

HALIFAX (CP) — Health Minister MacEachen said Friday rules of Parliament should be reformed to "bring it into the 20th century."

Addressing the organizational meeting of a new Halifax federal constituency in suburban Bedford, Mr. MacEachen said:

"I don't ask for much. Just to bring our Parliament as up to date as the British Parliament."

He said the British House has spent only two days this session on overhauling its social security program while it took two months to get four bills past the Canadian House.

Referring to a committee vote the government lost this week when dealing with transportation, he said:

"I feel that in the old days we would have had another government by this time. However, I believe that the Canadian people are becoming used to a minority government."

The guaranteed wage of $105 a month for pensioners had "a hell of a time" getting through Parliament.

"It seems as if practically every member of the opposition was against me. But when it came time to vote, no member could afford to vote against it."

NDP Leader Will Seek Re-Election

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP)—NDP leader Douglas said Friday night political leaders should not hang on too long and he expects to retire before he reaches the age of either of the two old party leaders.

The 63-year-old NDP leader added in an interview:

"Political leaders ought not to hang on too long. There comes a time when they no longer have the energy and drive and political sensitivity."

He made the comment at a news conference while referring to a call by Progressive Conservative Leader Diefenbaker this week for an early leadership convention for the Conservatives.

He added he would not be too surprised if Mr. Diefenbaker attempts to retain his position as PC leader.

Mr. Diefenbaker is 71 and Prime Minister Pearson, who heads the Liberals, is 69.

Mr. Douglas said he will definitely stand for the NDP leadership when the party holds its own convention in Toronto in July.

Transport Bill Nearer Terminal

OTTAWA (CP)—Using a mixture of friendly persuasion and numerical voting strength, Transport Minister Pickersgill hauled his big transport bill closer to passage Friday.

During the day's debate—11th on clause-by-clause study of the bill—the Commons approved 40 clauses in the 94-clause bill, the greatest number in a single day.

LaPierre Bids to Run In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP)—Two McGill University profesors announced Friday they will seek New Democratic Party nominations in Montreal Island ridings for a federal election they predict will be held this fall.

Laurier LaPierre, 37, history professor and former co-host of the old Seven Days program on CBC TV, will go after the NDP nomination in the new Lachine riding.

Charles Taylor, 35, party chairman in Quebec and professor of political science at both McGill and the University of Montreal, will seek the NDP nomination in Dollard. He had run three times without gaining election in the Mount Royal riding.

Asked why the pair had chosen two ridings where the electorate is fairly well-off, Mr. LaPierre said the NDP's breakthrough in Quebec would have to come in the urban ridings peopled by skilled craftsmen, union members and white collar workers.

The party has yet to elect a member of Parliament in the province.

Chlorophyll Find Hints Life In Space

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Using a system of identification similar to fingerprinting, a California physicist claimed Friday he has found chlorophyll in outer space.

Fred M. Johnson, chief scientist at a University of California meeting said that his discovery implies that life itself could exist on other planets.

The life forms could be familiar to man, he said.

Addressing a specially-convened astronomy and biodynamics meeting, Dr. Johnson noted that dust particles have been telescopically observed for more than 80 years as cloud formations in space that partially obscure light from distant stars.

"The significance of my findings, if correct," Dr. Johson said, "is that a case for life chemistry in space can only be inferred but the end product can be looked upon as a form of life similar to that on earth."

PLANT FORM

Since chlorophyll is essential to the basic building process of life — or photosynthesis — it can be speculated that space chlorophyll could reach surfaces of other planets and undergo photosynthesis as on earth. This would produce at least simple plant forms, Dr. Johnson said.

He said he has identified space chlorophyll through both spectroscopic studies and laser research.

QUEBEC TO ASSUME CONTROL OF NATIVES

QUEBEC (CP) — A secret report prepared by a federal official and a Quebec government representative recommends that Quebec take over certain tasks now handled by the federal government in the province's northern area, it was learned Friday.

The work involves Eskimo and Indian populations in the area.

A provincial source said the report will be submitted to Premier Daniel Johnson and Arthur Laing, federal minister of Indian affairs and northern development.

The report took several months to prepare and says the federal government should transfer to Quebec money it now spends in the territory. The province also should take over all federal buildings and institutions in the area.

New Man in U.K. Foreign Office Is Very Rare Type—A Woman

COLLINGS
. . . anyone can try

LONDON (AP) — The new "spokesman" at the foreign office is a spokeswoman.

Juliet Jeanne d'Auvergne Collings took up the post this week, joining 10 male colleagues who answer reporters' questions and hold briefings on Britain's foreign policy. They do this anonymously.

Women are rare in Britain's foreign service.

Miss Collings, 31, entered it by doing well in a public examination open to anyone who cares to try.

Her 73-year-old father is retired Maj.-Gen. Wilfred d'Auvergne Collings, who served in both world wars. The daughter spent her early years in the Middle east.

"I had a great deal of contact with diplomats in those days," she says. "This led me to the choice of a diplomatic career."

Her first overseas assignment came as a member of the British delegation to the Brussels Conference in 1961-63, when Britain was making its first bid to join the European Common Market.

Then Miss Collings was transferred to the British embassy in Thailand. Last year she was a first secretary doing information work in the British delegation to the North Atlantic Treaty Oganization.

She holds an Oxford degree in politics, economics and philosophy and speaks French and some Arabic.

'Study Sessions' New Plan of MDs

MONTREAL (CP)—The provincial council representing some 2,100 interns and residents in 25 Montreal hospitals and 18 in other parts of the province Friday rejected the latest government offer to settle their salary dispute.

Dr. Nicholas Steinmetz, a vice-president of the council which negotiates for three associations of interning and resident doctors in Quebec hospitals, said the group is planning to hold "study sessions" starting Jan. 26.

A general meeting of the 900-member Syndicat des medecins residents de Montreal, and 450-member Association des medecins residents et interns de Quebec, and the 800-member Association of Residents and Interns of Montreal is to be held Tuesday to discuss wage problems.

Present salaries range from between $3,060 a year for junior interns to $5,160 a year for senior residents. They are asking for a new wage scale that would range from $5,200 for interns to $8,400 for senior residents.

The provincial government Thursday offered a new schedule of from $3,780 to $6,480 a year. The council rejected this on the grounds that "the offer does not correspond to the minimum needs of its members."

The government offer was identical to the one it made Jan. 12, except the newest proposal included retroactive pay to last July 1 ranging from $420 to $595. It also provided for a further three-per-cent salary increase based on the mean wage of interns and residents.

Train Derailed

EDMONDS, Wash. (AP) — A 50-foot span of a concrete bridge collapsed on a Great Northern freight-train three miles west of here shortly before midnight Friday night, derailing 12 cars, crushing a cargo of new automobiles and ripping up about 200 feet of track.

Mayor Urges B.C. Ferries To Retain Freight System

Mayor Hugh Stephen told Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors Friday he has asked assurance that existing freight handling arrangements by B.C. Ferries will be retained.

This was a reference to the apparent phasing-out of the drop-trailer system employed by trucking firms in which tractor units leave trailers aboard ferries for pickup on the other side of Georgia Strait.

The system has been criticized on grounds that it wastes loading time and results in less space for private vehicles, which the ferry fleet was built to carry.

The mayor's letter to the ferry authority goes further and askes that freight-only ferry service be provided overnight if it is the intention to cut out daytime freight.

Freight-hauling firms find the drop-trailer system economic and convenient, providing the quickest possible means to move freight between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

Most of the traffic is from Vancouver to Victoria, with empty units going back.

But some of the produce required by the lower mainland moves from Saanich Peninsula farms, and some industries in the Greater Victoria area ship goods and materials to the mainland.

The chamber's concern is to encourage satisfactory service at reasonable rates, which involves a second issue.

If drop trailers are banned from the public ferry system, truckers will have to rely on private freight ferry service which at present makes only one daily round trip from Swartz Bay.

In addition, freight-hauling firms are seeking an increase in rates generally of between 6 and 12 per cent, affecting Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands and the lower mainland.

Mayor Stephen told the directors that Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee is endeavoring to have "the most highly competent lawyer in the province" to present the case against an increase in freight rates.

HEARING DUE

A rate hearing will be held before the end of February by the B.C. Public Utilities Commission, which must decide whether an increase is justified.

Chamber president Courtney Haddock remarked:

"Our consumers are going to be hit a lot harder than they realize."

He referred to a 1 per cent federal sales tax increase, which has already affected consumer prices, as well as the proposed freight handling increase.

The chamber has received letters supporting its stand on freight rate increases from the local branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada, and Saltspring Island Chamber of Commerce.

Directors agreed to a suggestion from Fred Hawes that chamber members use discretion in the raising of prices.

Strike Action Voted By Workers at CGE

TORONTO (CP)—More than 8,000 members of the United Electrical Workers Union voted Friday night for strike action if Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. does not meet contract demands at 16 Ontario plants.

George Harris of Toronto, the union's national secretary-treasurer, said negotiations have been held since October but a settlement is still not in sight.

The 8,000 men work in the 16 General Electric plants at Toronto, Peterborough, Guelph, Barrie, Trenton and Brampton.

"There may be quite a bit of negotiating before a contract is signed," Mr. Harris said. "There's a very wide gap between that they'll give and what we'll take."

A union spokesman said 92 per cent of the membership cast ballots Friday night and 96 per cent favored possible strike action.

Union and company officials are to meet in Toronto Sunday with William Dickie, the Ontario government's chief conciliation officer.

A 350-man negotiating committee, which represents workers from all 16 plants, has the power to call a strike.

PRODUCTION CUTBACK BY FORD OF CANADA

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ford of Canada Ltd. said Friday it is going on a short work week next month to cut back passenger car production and try to bring North American inventories in line with demand.

The company said it will close on the four Fridays of February, reducing production by about 3,300 cars.

The cutback was seen as reflecting the drop in sales in the U.S., since Ford's Canadian sales have continued strong. The parent Ford company in the U.S. also has used short work weeks to adjust inventories.

PRICES COMMITTEE

High Construction Costs Questioned

OTTAWA (CP) — Sen. David Croll suggested this week that extra costs have entered construction to less benefit for the customer than in any other industry.

The Ontario Liberal senator, co-chairman of the Senate-Commons committee on consumer prices, asked representatives of the Canadian Construction Association why building techniques in central Europe seem to be more advanced than in Canada.

Other senators and MPs obliged the association to turn its appearance before the committee into a defence of rising construction costs.

The group said costs of material and labor are up. The calibre of construction was improving and this was bound to be more expensive. Overhead costs were rising and pension plan contributions and sales taxes had been increased.

'DISTORTED'

Mark Stein of Montreal, national vice-president of the CCA, also sought support from the Economic Council of Canada, whose third annual review suggested that statistics on construction costs were somewhat distorted. They did not account fully for changes in the efficiency of the industry.

In its brief, the CCA said the economy is ready for government measures to stimulate the construction industry.

"Stretch-out" construction policies applied by government to prevent economic overheating were welcome.

The CCA brief said the construction industry is Canada's largest, carrying out works with an estimated value of $11,000,000,000 in 1966. So much of the Canadian economy relied on construction that its future volume and stability should be of prime concern.

Weather, business cycles and availability of crefit all affect the stability of the industry, the brief said.

It agreed with recommendations by the Economic Council of Canada that federal construction programs be better co-ordinated, with planning three to five years ahead on construction outlays, and with better co-operation between federal and provincial government levels.

Lumber Sales Drop Reported

VANCOUVER (CP)—A drop in lumber sales of 70,000,000 board feet in 1966 has been reported by President L. L. G. Bentley of Seaboard Lumber Sales Ltd.

The firm markets about 60 per cent of B.C. waterborne lumber.

Grain Backlog At Vancouver Near An End

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain shipments through Vancouver should be back on schedule by the end of January, an official said Friday.

An average of about 600 prairie grain boxcars are being unloaded daily here and the backlog of ships waiting in the harbor for grain has been reduced, said Bill Riddell, chairman of the Pacific Grain Transport Committee.

A dispute involving longshore foremen last November tied up B.C ports for three weeks and virtually halted grain shipments. Since the end of the dispute Dec. 9, 83 ships have cleared Vancouver with grain. About 12,000,000 bushels of grain has been shipped so far this month.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Banks, Golds in Spotlight

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Investors teetered between banks and golds this week.

Banks moved sharply higher at the beginning of the week and then golds took the play away at the end.

Meanwhile, Canada's major stock markets may have been losing some of their zip—but experts weren't sure this meant the end of the New Year upswing or just preoccupation with specialty issues.

As a result the Toronto industrial index, the key indicator of the market's performance, only managed a 2.17 gain to 158.88.

The Bank of Montreal set the stage when it announced a proposed five-for-one stock split effective if the proposed Bank Act becomes law.

Other banks are expected to follow.

The bank also announced it would raise its quarterly dividend to 60 cents from 55.

However, the following day investors were given a jolt on unconfirmed reports that the United States is looking into legislation which could result in limiting Canadian banks' operations in the U.S.

BANKS CLIMB

At the week's end, Montreal had climbed 3 to 59, Imperial-Commerce 3½ to 64½, Toronto-Dominion 2 to 63, Royal 1½ to 74 and Nova Scotia 1 to 67½.

Golds attracted investors and speculators late in Thursday's session after South Africa's finance minister said his country may have to close its gold operations unless there is an increase in the metal's price.

The result was a 7.18 gain on Thursday's gold index.

Then, France abandoned its demands for an immediate increase in the price of gold. This caught the market by surprise.

Despite the news, the group advanced for the five-day period. Dome rose 1¼ to 43¾, Kerr Addison ⅞ to 12¾, Giant Yellowknife 70 cents to 9.55 and Campbell Red Lake ¾ to 22¾.

Beaver Lumber was the big industrial gainer, up 6¼ to 35¾. Brokers were unable to give any reason for the increase.

Levy moved up 2⅝ to 17¾, Walkers 1⅝ to 32⅛ and Distillers 1⅝ to 37.

Canada Cement tumbled 4 to 38. The company said 1967 profits may be lower.

Falconbridge dropped 3¾ to 88¼ and Canadian Breweries ⅜ to 7¼.

COPPER UP

Noranda paced base-metals higher, up 2¼ to 56½. The company announced an increase in copper prices to 47¼ cents in Canada from 45.

Last week the company announced plans of a $122,000,000 takeover of Essex Wire Corp. of the United States.

Granby Mining climbed 7¼ to 45½ Friday. Officials could give no reason for the rise.

GLASGOW WILL BE COMING . . . . . . AND BERWICK FOLK WORRIED

Are Ye Nae Enthusiastic Aboot Scots?

BERWICK UPON TWEED, England (CP) — This old border bastion, one of the few walled towns in the United Kingdom, will have to weather another siege Jan. 28 when the mighty Glasgow Rangers tangle with the football Lilliputians of the second division, Berwick Rangers.

The soccer struggle recalls for romantics gallant bygone days when the forces of Scotland and England faced each other here — in the time of Cromwell, for instance.

Berwick became the military town of the Borders, with a militia of its own, a buffer between the two countries. The battle scars on centuries-old barracks tell their own silent story of long-past derring-do.

And now Berwick Rangers, whose ground — Shielfield Park — is in Northumberland, is the only English team in Scottish national competition. Let no one think the forthcoming game is a glamor affair. On the contrary, no one wanted it.

It results simply from the luck of the draw. On the eve of the cup draw in Glasgow, Dr. James T. Sadler, chairman of Berwick Rangers, declared:

"I hope we're not drawn against Glasgow Rangers. Last time, thousands of their supporters ran through the town, smashing windows and damaging cars. We don't need Rangers' money. I have to think of the good name of the town. We don't want you and your ghastly band of hooligans."

Berwick has known both Scottish and English rule. When the formal battles were over, the despoilers had their turn and the town remained under siege from sporadic raids.

Now the visored helmets have given way to the caps and tammies. The invaders will arrive not on horseback, as in the olden days, but by bus. Berwick, as of old, will have a defending "army" — English police — against the advancing Scots. Police reinforcements will be on hand from other English communities.

The draw matching mighty Rangers from the West and mouse-like Rangers from the East is regarded as an almost incredible coincidence. It caused local folk to recall the 1960 match between the same two teams. Trouble flared. Shop windows were smashed. Cars were overturned. Pilfering occurred in stores and pubs — perhaps not as bad as the old days. There were 30 arrests. Somebody had given permission for the pubs to remain open longer than usual.

"I will certainly oppose any extension this time," said Berwick Mayor R. H. Knox, a magistrate. "That was a big mistake last time, but it was done to be hospitable."

It will be "an all-ticket game with a limit of about 16,000," the Berwick Rangers board of directors announced after a hasty meeting.

And officials of Glasgow Rangers Supporters' Association travelled the 120 miles to Berwick on a "peace mission." Association secretary Robert Grubb reported:

"That has cleared the air. Now Dr. Sadler realizes that 99 per cent of our supporters are decent people."

Fullback's Goal Helps Champs

LONDON (CP) — Fullback Chris Lawler and inside forward Alf Arrowsmith today scored goals that sent defending champion Liverpool to the top of the English League soccer standings by a point over Manchester United.

Lawler levelled the score 1-1 against Southampton in the 23rd minute and Arrowsmith put Liverpool into a 2-1 lead in the 35th minute. The game ended without further scoring.

Manchester City and Manchester United played to a 1-1 tie. United went ahead in the seventh minute on a headed goal by centre-half Bill Foulkes from a corner by Jim Ryan. City equalled the score two minutes from time when United's Nobby Stiles, the halfback hero of England's winning World Cup team, headed the ball into his own goal.

TAKES TOP SPOT

Liverpool now leads the First Division with 37 points. Manchester United has 35 points from 26 games and Nottingham Forest 35 points from 27 games. Stoke City, Chelsea and Leeds United are locked on the 32-point mark.

The program calls for 42 matches.

Nottingham Forest earned a goalless draw at Newcastle—and so stayed in a challenging position. Newcastle's display suggested it will soon climb well clear of the foot of the First Division. At the moment Newcastle is second from the bottom. Blackpool is propping up the other 21 teams in division one.

Chelsea came back after a lean spell and scored three goals in 11 minutes through centre forward Tony Hateley, inside forward Tommy Baldwin and left winger Bobbie Tambling to defeat Aston Villa 3-1.

HIT BY BOTTLES

Sheffield United halted Stoke City's chances by winning 2-1 in a match at Sheffield that brought trouble in the crowd. Three soccer fans were taken to hospital with head injuries from flying bottles.

Leeds United remained in a challenging position on second-half goals from John Giles and Albert Johanneson to defeat Fulham 3-1.

Winger Cliff Jones and inside forward Jimmy Greaves scored two goals inside a minute to give Tottenham Hotspur a 2-0 victory over Burnley—a win that kept Tottenham within striking distance of the leaders.

Spurs, as Tottenham is known, now has 31 points, six behind pace-setting Liverpool.

Cellar-Dwellers Beat Combos 5-0

A centre and a goalie took their turns as the men-of-the-hour Friday as the top and bottom clubs recorded victories in Esquimalt District Hockey League at the Sports Centre.

Centre Ted Sarkissian scored four goals and set up the other two as front-running University of Victoria Vikings clubbed Tudor Monarchs 6-2. The six-point spree put Sarkissian back in the lead in the individual scoring race.

Goaltender Bud Swanson chalked up his first shutout—and only the second in league play this year—as last-place Stocker's jolted Armed Forces Combos 5-0 in the first half of the weekly doubleheader.

Vic High Tops With Reginans

Victoria High Totems have been seeded as the top out-of-province entry in the Centennial Invitational basketball tournament at Regina's Luther College next weekend.

Coach George Andrews' defending British Columbia champions are scheduled to leave for Regina next Thursday.

They'll play their first game Thursday at 4:55 p.m. (PST) against host Luther Lions, seeded fourth among the in-province entries.

Other out-of-province entries are, in order of seeding: Sundbury, Winnipeg and Montreal.

RAYMOND RESPECTED

Alberta will be represented by Raymond, and that team has been rated No. 1 in a bracket with the Saskatchewan teams — Regina Sheldon-Williams, Saskatoon Bedford and Luther.

Should Totems win their first game, they'll play either Saskatoon or Sudbury in the semi-final round next Saturday.

Totems and Oak Bay, entertaining mainland teams at Oak Bay Senior High, rolled to exhibition victories Friday. The Vics rallied for a 20-point output in the final quarter to clip North Vancouver 47-43 while the Bays whomped West Vancouver 51-30.

Teams switch rivals and move to Vic High for windup games tonight at 7 and 8:30.

Bob Burrows was Oak Bay's sparkplug with 16 points while Dexter Mason fired 21 for Totems.

Claremont made it 3-for-3 over the mainland by trouncing South Burnaby 70-39 in the Docker tournament at Esquimalt. Dave Tooby was the standout with 24 points for Claremont.

In a second game, St. Louis College tripped their Esquimalt hosts 32-18 as Mike Walker and Dave Mulcahy each contributed 12 points. Bob DeCosta was Dockers' top gunner with 13.

Mount View Hornets had a busy day. They played two games, and won two. Hornets swamped Sooke 57-21 in an afternoon clash and then dumped Evening Optimists' Bantam team 44-39 at night.

Life Risked to Disarm Bomb

KILLEEN, Tex. (UPI) — Killeen police capt. Charley Mitchell used a piece of cellophane tape today to stop the timing of a dynamite bomb set to go off within minutes, possibly seconds, in the parking lot of a department store.

"I don't know how much time it had left," said Mitchell. "But it was so close that it would scare you."

Police said the shoppers inside the store were in no danger, but the bomb would probably have killed Mitchell if it had exploded.

NEW WESTMINSTER

Anvil Salute For Session

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

The Hyack Anvil Battery will boom out its salute, some 4,300 distinguished guests and ordinary folk will rise from their seats and in will walk Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes in his ceremonial cocked hat and colonial uniform.

Another legislature opening will be under way — but it won't be in Victoria as it has for the past 98 years.

The ceremony begins at 3 p.m. Tuesday in New Westminster where the first B.C. legislatative council met for its opening. The 100th opening will be in the Queen's Park Arena there.

The centennial gesture will last only one day.

The legislature will be back here Wednesday for business as usual with Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) and Dr. H. R. McDiarmid (SC—Alberni) to move and second the reply to the Speech from the Throne temporarily located across Georgia Strait the previous day.

Every effort will be made to simulate the assembly chamber with which Victorians are familiar.

Carpenters have laid a plywood floor over the ice (it was kept frozen because the floor has an eight-inch tilt as a result of age) and on this they have erected a platform of the exact dimensions of our chamber.

Over this a plush red rug has been laid and the MLAs' benches and chairs, the elaborate Speaker's chair, the clerks' tables, the mace of authority and the sergeant-at-arms' desk will be transported from here Saturday to their new places.

A blue curtain, trimmed with gold, will form a backdrop behind the Speaker's position and green shrubbery will add more color along the platform's sides.

Overhead, radiant beating lamps will keep the 1,600 invited guests and 2,800 other spectators comfortable during the 1½-hour ceremony. Special loudspeaking equipment will let them hear the time-honored rituals.

Alberni Boy Killed In Head-On Crash

PORT ALBERNI — A young boy was killed and his brother and mother injured in a head-on collision here Friday.

Wayne Mayer, 11, apparently died immediately when thrown through the windshield of the family truck.

At the time his mother, Mrs. Josephine Mayer, was driving Wayne and brother Paul, 13, to school.

Their vehicle collided with a taxi driven by Donald H. Smith of Port Alberni.

Although injured, Mr. Smith managed to stagger for help.

All three are in fair condition in Alberni District Hospital.

A friend of the family said the two vehicles met on the top of a hill only a short distance from the Mayer home.

The taxi had apparently pulled out to avoid school children walking beside the road.

The children's father, Garry, is a millworker.

IN FIVE AREAS

Revolt Against Mao Spreading

Times News Services

HONG KONG—Factions in the entire southwestern quarter of China are rebelling against Mao Tse-tung and his defence minister, Lin Piao, according to reports reaching here.

Battles have been reported.

These reports come on the heels of a Japanese dispatch Friday that there was speculating "the entire sountry now is in a state of civil war."

The reported southeastern revolt against Mao and Lin has spread from cities, where workers were reported to have fought bloody street battles with Mao's Red Glards, to rural areas in the Pacific seaboard provinces of Chekiang, Fukien and Kwantung and the inland provinces of Kiangsi and Eastern Kwangsi.

Provincial radio stations, still in the hands of pro-Mao forces, warn of growing "white terrorism" by "reactionary and revisionists enemies" of Mao and imply these activities have the support of provincial party officials in many areas.

Chinese travellers arriving here claim provincial officials are behind the formation of "new Red Guard units" who oppose Mao and Lin and support the man Mao and Lin are trying to bring down, President Liu Shao-Chi

OPPOSE MAO

Many say army units are refusing to support Mao's Red Guards, and some insist that troops in the Nanchang and Canton areas are actively supporting the pro-Liu forces.

Another Japanese account from Peking said high-ranking navy and air force officers were reported being denounced as reactionaries and plotters.

Lin is believed to be No. 2 man in the Chinese Communist party hierarchy under party Chairman Mao.

The correspondent of the Tokyo Yomiuri said Lin's statement appeared without official confirmation in one of the thousands of wall bulletins that have turned Peking into a paper-and-ink city.

Reuters news agency reported the Peking wall newspaper as saying:

"Now is total civil war. We have to fight resolutely on the one hand, but on the other we should not use violence without good reason."

The defence minister, 59, has been in the forefront of the battle to oust President Liu Shao-chi and restore Mao to the position of state power he once held.

Dr. Lin Yutang, noted Chinese author and scholar, predicted in Manila that the current upheaval in China will leave Mao's regime a "wreck."

Arriving from Taipei, Formosa, for a goodwill visit, Lin told a press conference: "The worst is yet to come. By the time the purging of Communist leaders is completed, Mao's machinery will be a wreck and shaken to the bottom."

Whether there is a civil war in the classic sense or not, there could be no doubt that the vast Chinese mainland and its 720,000,000 people were in the grip of civil confusion.

CHINA STORES 100 N-BOMBS?

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japanese military officials believe China already has nearly 100 nuclear bombs and will arm itself with medium-range ballistic missiles before the end of this year, the newspaper Nihon Keizai reports.

The paper also says the officials tend to think China will have intercontinental ballistic missiles around 1972 — three years ahead of the forecast made by U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara in November, 1965.

Ky Effigy Burned

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — About 3,000 chanting demonstrators today burned an effigy of South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky after he and his wife flew here from Brisbane.

The South Vietnamese leader, on a 10-day goodwill tour of Australia and New Zealand, was accorded a friendly and sometimes warm welcome when he drove from the airport to the city.

But at the government's official residence police armed with firehoses ringed roadblocks as demonstrators converged on the building which will accommodate the Kys during their stay here.

A lifesize dummy of the 35-year-old Marshal Ky carrying the slogan "killer Ky" was set up on the sidewalk about 250 yards from the official residence and burned.

Business Firms Facing Inquiry

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Murray, counsel for a provincial royal commission on electronic bugging, said today he will investigate allegations of bugging in the car sales, real estate and financing industry.

Mr. Murray said he had received reports of bugging at several car sales firms and at two real estate companies and a finance company office.

"This bugging business certainly appears to be more widespread than I thought," he added.

Mr. Murray had said Friday he would investigate reports of equipment capable of bugging in booths in the showroom of a Vancouver car sales company.

OTHER REPORTS

He said today he had received a number of other reports since and planned to investigate. He described most of those calling him as former employees in the industries allegedly involved in bugging. He said most offered to testify at the Royal Commission.

Meanwhile, one car sales firm here Friday posted a $10,000 reward to any past or present salesman who can produce evidence that it engaged in illicit bugging of customers' conversations.

The royal commission was formed following allegations that Pat O'Neal, western organizer of the International Brotherhod of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Workers, had hired a private detective who placed electronic bugging equipment at a convention of the rival independent Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada.

In Victoria, car sales firms denied using any kind of bugging apparatus.

Said sales manager Norman Britnell of Thomas Plimley Ltd.: "We have discussed this matter and ascertained that none of the main Victoria distributors use bugging devices.

"The same goes for the finance companies we deal with."

Boston Blasts Rangers

BOSTON (UPI) — The last-place Boston Bruins exploded for three second period goals and went on to a 6-2 rout of second-place New York today for their first National Hockey League win of the season over the Rangers.

Veteran utility man Eddie Westfall scored a pair of goals, his fifth and sixth of the season, and added a pair of assists to pace the Bruins before an afternoon crowd of 12,414.

Boston, which had lost five and tied three in eight earlier meetings with the Rangers, also got goals from Wayne Rivers, Ron Schock, Bob Dillabough and Ron Stewart.

Don Marshall ruined a shutout bid by Boston goalie Eddie Johnston with his 16th goal of the season late in the second period and Bill Hicke added the other Ranger goal late in the third round after the Bruins had built a 6-1 lead.

DEFLECTS SHOT

Westfall opened and closed the Bruins' scoring, deflecting a Bob Woytowich shot at 12:05 of the first period, and combining with Bob Dillabough and Ron Schock on the final scoring play at Ed Giacomin's expense.

Schock was second in Boston point production with a goal and two assists, while defenceman Joe Watson got a pair of assists as the Bruins outshot the Rangers, 45-28.

DOGS GO TO THE PHILHARMONIC

Symphony Puppies Yelp and Paddle on Cue

NEW YORK (UPI)—Twenty yelping, tail-wagging beagles invaded New York's Philharmonic Hall Friday night.

The dogs were supposed to be there—as performers. They turned out to be hams.

The musical canines were the soloists in Leopold Mozart's Sinfonia de Caccia, or hunting symphony, which calls for the barking of dogs.

When conductor Thomas Dunn gave the cue, the backstage barking began.

The laughter that greeted the barking was nothing compared to the eruption which followed the dogs' entrance. A door on the side of the stage opened and, led on by two men in full hunting regalia, they came—twenty beagles.

In informal formation they marched straight across the stage and out another door. But before you knew it, they were back again.

If the beagles seemed perplexed by the strange goings-on at first, by the second trip around they caught on and, like hams, seemed to be enjoying the applause.

One beagle lagged behind the pack, his tail wagging madly. Another strayed close to the audience, while a third sniffed the violin section.

By this point, you could hear none of poor Leopold's music. The laughter and applause were deafening. The dogs were the stars and they knew it.

Then one nervy hound headed straight for the first row. He was halted by a trainer. Another, more determined, got further, however, and had to be brought back by a gallant gent in the audience.

HERE THEY COME AGAIN and despite heroic efforts of Beagle Master John Gelsner the 20 young dogs fail to keep formation. They provided sound effects for Hunting Symphony in New York. (AP Wirephoto).
